

The Public Radio Incubation Lab Wants to Hear From You at the 2019 Super-Regional Meeting

The Lab is dedicated to developing and testing solutions to some of the network's most urgent strategic and practical challenges. The current six-member team, made up of both NPR and station staff, wants to hear from you to inform one of the research studies their conducting to understand what "working better together" looks like in practice.

Stop by our booth in the exhibitor space to find out more about how we're approaching our theme of "working better together to advance station membership and donations."

Perhaps you want to know:

- What is the lab?
- How does it work?
- More about the research study.

And maybe you can provide additional insight for the team's work.
