Overview

It's no secret that in our current cultural climate it feels like we're always being forced to pick a camp or a side, and then we are identified by whichever camp we belong to. The pressure from this level of polarization can lead to a lot of tension. If you've ever felt the effects of polarizing tension there's good news – we belong to a very good God, and he desires for us to live in unity!

On this episode Pastors Jimmy and Kim tackle the issue of what to do when we disagree with the opinions of others. From validating the fact that it is both okay and good to have opinions, to learning when and where agreement is necessary, to exploring how to love like Jesus did and draw people into trusting relationships – this episode is full of practical, timely, and encouraging advice.
