TENNESSEE WILLIAMS HOUSE MUSEUM AND WELCOME CENTER

Make the first home of legendary playwright Tennessee Williams your first stop in Columbus. This home was the rectory of St. Paul's Episcopal Church, where his grandfather, the Reverend Walter Dakin, served. In 1993, the rectory was in jeopardy of being torn down to make room for a church expansion. In an effort to preserve this historic and literary landmark, the home was loaded onto flatbed trucks and taken to its new site on Main Street.

Extensive efforts were made to restore the 1875 Victorian home to its original glory. It was then reopened as the official Welcome Center for the city of Columbus. Just three months after the opening, Tennessee Williams was honored with a U.S. postage stamp, and a ceremony was held at the home. The Tennessee Williams Welcome Center, also a National Literary Landmark, is located in the heart of Columbus' downtown historic district at the corner of Main Street and Third Street South.

About Columbus

In 1540, Spanish explorer Hernando de Soto and his expedition crossed the Tombigbee River in the Columbus area and made their winter camp. At the beginning of the Creek Indian War in 1813, John Pitchlynn, U.S. interpreter and acting U.S. Indian Agent for the Choctaw Nation, constructed a small, fortified blockhouse, named Fort Smith on the bluff. Among those receiving supplies there was the frontiersman David Crockett.

The first house was built in 1817 where Andrew Jackson's Military Road connecting Nashville and New Orleans crossed the Tombigbee River and was occupied by Spirus Roach. Because of the "peculiarities" of Roach's long pointed nose and gray hair, local Indians who traded at Roach's establishment called the town "Opossum Town," a nickname still used.

Franklin Academy, Mississippi's first free public school, was chartered in 1821. William Cocke became president of the school's board of trustees, corresponding with his old friend Thomas Jefferson about the school. Also in 1821, the American Board for Foreign Missions and the Presbyterian and Congregationalist Churches founded the Mayhew Choctaw Mission. In March 1823, the Cotton Plant was the first Tombigbee steamboat to arrive at Columbus.

The first bridge over the Tombigbee River at Columbus was a wooden covered bridge built by African American engineer Horace King in 1842.

During the Civil War, Columbus was a major hospital center treating thousands of sick and wounded Confederate and Union soldiers. In a Decoration Day ceremony in 1866, ladies placed flowers on the graves of both Confederate and Union soldiers. This act of reconciliation drew praise from across the country, inspired the poem "The Blue and The Gray" and was recognized by President Obama in 2010 as an inspiration for Memorial Day.

In 1884, The Industrial Institute and College, now The W, opened as the country's first state supported college for women.

In 1942, Columbus Army Airfield opened as Kaye Field and 7,412 Army Air Force pilots earned their wings there during World War II. Today Columbus Air Force Base is the home of the 14th Flying Training Wing and still trains the world's best pilots.

Among notable natives or residents of Columbus are playwright Tennessee Williams, Hall of Fame baseball announcer "Red" Barber, Hall of Fame boxer Henry Armstrong, Oscar winning head of Disney Studio's Animation Effects Department Joshua Meador, NFL Hall of Famer Jerry Rice of Crawford, and C. S. Lewis' biographer and J.R.R. Tolkien's editor Clyde Kilby.

BLUES TRAIL MARKERS

The Mississippi Blues Trail identifies influential musicians, as well as historic sites and places that contributed to our wonderful blues heritage.

Big Joe Williams Blues Marker

Downtown Crawford, MS

In the late '50s, Big Joe Williams began a career as a "folk blues" artist. He performed widely at coffeehouses and festivals and recorded many albums for Delmark, Arhoolie, Testament, and Bluesville. He was inducted into the Blues Hall of Fame in 1992.

Catfish Alley Blues Marker

Downtown Columbus, MS

Catfish Alley deserves this Blues Trail marker for its legendary reputation as the epicenter of blues, jazz, and soul music in North Mississippi. Some say the name originated after local fishermen brought their catches to be cooked on the street, where the aroma of frying catfish filled the air.

Queen City Hotel / Seventh Avenue South

Columbus, MS

For several decades beginning in the early 1900s, the area that includes the site of the Queen City Hotel was part of a vibrant African-American community. The hotel, founded by a former slave, catered to African Americans and once housed celebrities such as Ella Fitzgerald, B.B. King, Duke Ellington, and James Brown.
