Democrats in Congress Strengthen Grip

Barack Obama's victory was sealed on Tuesday night as the Democratic Party strengthened its grip on the White House and Congress.

The election of Mr. Obama signaled a historic moment — a consolidation of a historically conservative political tradition and the election of Barack Obama, the first African American to be elected president of the United States.

But it was just as much a rebirth of a political system as it was the election of the nation's first African American president. It was a rebirth of a political system that had been weakened by the actions of a few men.

Mr. Obama, 47, a former community organizer, a state legislator, and a U.S. senator, was elected president of the United States.

By the way, Mr. Obama's campaign was aided by an opponent who was making short of a phenomenon, the so-called "Obama effect," the idea that people who are not of the same race as the candidate are more likely to vote for that candidate.

Mr. Obama's victory was a historic moment, a moment that will be remembered for generations to come.

U.S. ATTACKED

HIJACKED JETS DESTROY TWIN TOWERS AND HIT PENTAGON IN DAY OF TERROR

A CREEPING HORROR

Buildings Burn and Fall as Onlookers Search for Elusive Safety

By N. K. KLEINFIELD

It kept getting worse. The horror arrived in sporadic bursts of choking dust, ignited fires by cascading flames, sharp screams, cracked windows. There was the actual, unadorned realization of a piping, falling tube to the top of the tall towers, and then the same thing all over again to its twin. There was the morose sight of bodies helplessly tumbling out, some of them in flames.

Finally, the mighty towers themselves were reduced to nothing. Dense plumes of smoke raced through the downtown avenues, racing between the buildings, shaped like tombs on their sides. Every second was cause for alarm, a phone appeared cracked, was another one coming? No, it was a lighter or a pen. But was it a friend or enemy? People scrambled for their lives, but they didn't know where to go. Should they go north, south, east, west? They searched, an instinct? They hid beneath cars and each other. Some unconsciously jumped into the river.

For those trying to flee the very epicenter of the collapsing World Trade Center towers, the most feared thought of all finally dawned on them: nowhere was safe. For several panic-stricken hours yesterday morning, people in Lower Manhattan witnessed the impregnable, the unbreachable, the unthinkable. "I don't know what the game of hell look like, but it's got to be like this," said John Williams, a security director for an insurance firm in the trade center. "It is a coastal urban, Vietnam, and I never see anything like this."

The first warnings were small ones. Blacks saw, Jim Farmer, a filmmaker, was having breakfast at a small restaurant on West Street way he heard the sound of a jet. An old man — he had, it seemed, to be

A Somber Bush Says Terrorism Cannot Prevail

By ELIZABETH BUNDELL
with DAVID E. SANGER

WASHINGTON, Sept. 12 — President Bush vowed tonight to continue against those responsible for today's attacks on New York and Washington, declaring that he would "make no distinction between the terrorists who committed these acts and those who harbor them."

"These acts of mass murder were intended to frighten our nation into chaos and retreat, but they have failed," the president said in his first speech to the nation from the Oval Office. "Our country is strong. Terrorism will not shake the foundation of our mighty buildings, but they cannot touch the foundation of America."

His speech came after a day of trauma that seems destined to define his presidency. Seeking to at once calm the nation and declare his determination to exact retribution, he told a country reeling by repeated scenes of carnage that "these acts shattered steel, but they cannot touch the spirit of American freedom."

Mr. Bush spoke only hours after learning from a ringing alarm across the country, as his Secret Service and military security teams moved him from Florida, where he was to give his opening remarks to Congress for his education bill, to a secure point in Louisiana and then to the White House before it was determined the attacks had probably ended and he could safely return to the capital. It was a sign of the carnage.

AMERICAN TARGETS A ball of fire exploded outward after the second of two planes slammed into the World Trade Center; less than two hours later, both of the 110-story towers were gone. Hijackers crashed a third airliner into the Pentagon, setting off a huge explosion and fire.

President Vows to Exact Punishment for 'Evil'

By MERIK KROEMER

Hijackers rammed jetliners into each of New York's World Trade Center towers yesterday, toppling both in a belated storm of ash, glass and falling victims, while a third jetliner crashed into the Pentagon in Virginia. There was no official count, but President Bush said thousands had perished, and in the immediate aftermath the casualty toll was already being cranked the worst and most audacious terror attack in American history.

The attacks seemed carefully coordinated. The hijacked planes were all en route to California, and therefore gorged with fuel, as their destinations were spread within an hour and 40 minutes. The first American Airlines Flight 11, a Boeing 767 out of Boston for Los Angeles, crashed into the north tower at 8:45 a.m. Eighteen minutes later, United Airlines Flight 175, also headed from Boston to Los Angeles, plowed into the south tower.

Then an American Airlines Boeing 757, Flight 77, left Washington's Dulles International Airport bound for Los Angeles, but instead for the western part of the Pentagon, the military headquarters where 24,000 people work, at 9:03 a.m. Finally, United Airlines Flight 93, a Boeing 737 flying from Newark to San Francisco, crashed near Pittsburgh, raising the possibility that its hijackers had failed in whatever their mission was.

There were indications that the hijackers on at least two of the planes were armed with knives. Attorney General John Ashcroft told reporters in the evening that the suspects on Flight 11 were armed that way. And Barbara Olson, a television commentator who was traveling on American Flight 77, managed to reach her husband, Submarine Commander Thomas Olson, by cell phone and to tell him that the hijackers were armed with knives and a box cutter.

In all, 266 people perished in the four planes and several scores more were injured elsewhere. Numerous firefighters, police officers and other rescue workers who responded to the initial disaster in Lower Manhattan were killed or injured when the buildings collapsed. Survivors were treated for cuts, broken bones, burns and smoke inhalation.

But the real carnage was concealed for now by the twisted, smoking, ash-choked carcasses of the twin towers, in which thousands of people used to work on a weekday. The collapse of the towers caused another World Trade Center building to fall 7 hours later, and several

Awaiting the Aftershocks

Washington and Nation Plunge Into Fight With Enemy Hard to Identify and Punish

By N. W. APPLE Jr.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 12 — Today's devastating and astonishingly well-coordinated attacks on the World Trade Center towers in New York and on the Pentagon outside Washington plunged the News nation into a warlike struggle against an enemy that will be hard to identify with certainty and hard to punish with precision.

The whole nation — to a degree the whole world — shook as hijacked airliners plunged into buildings that symbolize the financial and military might of the United States. The sense of security and self-confidence that Americans take as their birthright suffered a gravitational blow, which recovery will be slow. The aftershocks will be nearly as bad, as hundreds and possibly thousands of people discover that friends or relatives died, or that they were injured.

Scenes of chaos and destruction evoked the nightmare sights of September 11, 1961, with tanks and before hitting the sea, were carried by airplanes into Britain and Washington across the ocean. Echoing Franklin D. Roosevelt's description of the attack on Pearl Harbor as an event "which will live in infamy," Sen. George J. Mitchell of New York, a Republican, spoke of "an incredible tragedy" and Senator Charles E. Schumer of New York, a Democrat, spoke of "a deliberate attack."

But more words were inadequate to capture the sense of shock and horror that people felt.

As Washington struggled to regain a sense of equilibrium, with war planes and heavily armed helicopters circling overhead, just as general national security officials privately debated the possibility of a congressional declaration of war — the bar against precisely whom, and a what exact circumstances? War plans were reexamining to protect New York and Washington, the North American Air Defense Command, which had centered in many parts of the cold war, adopted a plan
