

Science of Sex, Intimacy & Relationships

What if I told you that everything you see around you was built on sexual energy? The clothes you wear, the car you drive, the home you live in, the vacation destinations you go to, the places you frequent, the careers you choose, the lifestyles you seek, and even the lovers you endear. All of them were consciously or unconsciously chosen with one question in mind: “Is it SEXY?”

Sex is the most powerful tool you possess for literally rewriting the code of the electromagnetic matrix that makes up the fabric of reality itself. In fact, how else do you think you came to be on this Earth?

Indeed, sex is akin to fire - the spark of a new beginning, the power of creation itself. That is why passionate people are said to be fiery, and creative people (writers, artists, inventors etc.) to be volatile. Sexual energy can inspire revolutions like the Mona Lisa did during the Renaissance as much as it can endear the world’s heart like Princess Diana of Spencer did during her brief but notable life. But just as sex has the power to create, it also has the power to destroy like a purifying fire, especially when left uncontrolled.

Empires have been brought to their knees because of people’s inability to control the sexual energy within them like Paris & Helen of Troy, Julius Caesar & Cleopatra, Pope Alexander VI & Giulia Farnese, King Edward VIII & Wallis Simpson, President Clinton & Monica Lewinsky, and Tiger Woods & his ex-wife.

For those of you who think that just because you’re not currently sexually active the laws of sexual energy would not apply to you, I strongly suggest you think again!

There is no escaping it, even if you’re a monk or a priest (nothing further needs to be said about the latter of these two).

Sex is everywhere from Elvis' pelvic thrust to Rihanna's racy outfits. It's in the design of your iPhone, your laptop, your water bottle, the touch of a loved one and the flirtatious look you give to a stranger. You may not be able to see this energy, but you can most certainly FEEL IT. Sexual energies are as real as radiation for the microwave and radio-wave. You may not be able to see the waves, but they are definitely present and they are definitely harming your body.

Why else do you think that you feel butterflies in your stomach or get weak in the knees when you lock eyes with that special someone? The energy of sex is very, very, VERY palpable and there are a million instances we can call upon to prove this as fact.

When an energy this intangible has the power to weaken you so tangibly, you better damn well learn how to use it or you will always end up its victim.

Some people are more sensitive to this energy than others: We call these folks the lovers or artists in society. Is it any wonder artist celebrities change lovers as quickly as they do hairstyles? If you now find yourself wishing to be one of those artists, let me stop you right here: This oversensitivity comes at a heavy price, because usually these types of people are known to be the most undisciplined, illogical, and irresponsible individuals among us. That's why you will always see celebrity artists in and out of rehab, running into trouble with the law, and squandering away their entire fortunes.

Sex is a hell of a thing to try to wrangle, if you don't know what it is and how it really works on the most fundamental level. What if you're not one of these lover/artist types, though? Does that mean that you are immune to the obstacles of this overwhelming energy? No, that is definitely not how reality works.

While you won't be prone to irresponsibility or low levels of self-discipline, you will surely have your own set of problems. For those of us who aren't artists, you are seen as too cold, apathetic, uninteresting, boring and oftentimes unoriginal. You may be more methodical, practical and have a higher sound of judgment, but simultaneously, you may also lack the universal appeal that endears you to others and allows you to actually create something new.

Yet before you start trying to make love to everyone you encounter, know that the energy we speak of is much greater than just the one of physical copulation. The energy we speak of is present and available to you even if you were to never have a single sexual partner for as long as you live. This energy is your birthright, your inheritance and the most powerful gift that you possess.

Sexual energy is literally what we call life-force energy or oras and Eastern philosophy sees as the Chi. In fact, Eastern philosophy refers to the moving of this sexual orchi energy as tantra, which we in the West have come to reference with tantric sex, the art of purposeful sexual activity. In the ancient world, sex was used as a way to open portals of energy in order to offer a direct pathway for things to manifest into the material world more quickly. This is why sex was always viewed with reverence and never done carelessly or outside of a bonded and loving relationship between two people; because of the severe consequences it had. Sex allowed, then as much as now, an energetic pathway for new life to enter the womb of the woman and give life to another being.

The overall energetic frequency of a sexual act depends entirely on the intentions behind the activity. When positive, it attracts all that vibrates equally to that energetic frequency. When negative, it attracts all that is dense in vibration and that is where problems arise, because open portals of energy are exactly that: Open doorways for any foreign energies to inhabit our minds and bodies.

Those who would abuse this power and engaged in illicit sexual activity would often end up suffering from bipolar disorder, schizophrenia and various other mental and emotional illnesses, not to mention sexually transmitted diseases. In fact, a majority of the victims who are said to suffer from demonic possession also have some history of engaging in sexual deviance or suffering from physical/sexual abuse. Statistically, the group most prone to suicide also happens to be the group most identified with the greatest frequency of masturbation: Teenage boys. It was known throughout the ancient world that the more sexual energy a man expelled or lost through ejaculation, the shorter his lifespan would be and the more susceptible to illness he became, even mental illness. This is also why women tend to live longer, because they do not lose chi energy like men do during orgasm. But this also presents a challenge for women who seek to use sexual energy in order to manifest their desires. All of this ancient wisdom may seem far fetched, but science is only now discovering the correlation between sex and mental as well as physical disorders.

Do not, however, take it to the extreme and distort the truth. Sex is not bad; under the right circumstances and in the right conditions, it is quite the opposite and should very much be enjoyed. But like most things in life, it is how one goes about it that determines the outcome. And just to reiterate it: Even masturbation can affect our level of success.

The longer you negate the existence or importance of sexual energy in your life, the longer you will go without being able to take back control of your life once and for all.

How can you learn to harness this great power, so you can use it to begin creating the life that you truly want? You've come to the right place. Here at the School of Thought Mechanics, you will learn how to harness the powers of sex and intimacy to create wealth and health, find out how to restore your youth and vitality, and examine how you, too, might be influenced (even manipulated) by external sexual energies. The course of Science of Sex, Intimacy & Relationships is taught at a higher level and thus open only to students who have completed Level 1, as with great power comes great responsibility and students have to demonstrate adeptness, commitment and integrity before they can be trusted with these ancient secrets.

For those who worry that Thought Mechanics will force them to become a monk or to live a life of celibacy or isolation, you are mistaken. Doing so would be uninspiring, narrow-minded, presumptuous, naive, impractical and unnecessary - especially for someone who lives in the modern world. For those who fear it teaches deviance or anything else of the sort, rest assured. That would only propagate some of the problems modern society faces today. This course is revolutionary, as it was specifically designed to teach you how to have the best of BOTH worlds, the spiritual and the physical, and to enjoy yourself in the healthiest way possible.

It takes some of the most ancient teachings, which have never before been revealed to the public, to assist you in applying them in practical ways in order to significantly improve your daily life and move you closer toward your dreams and to God and/or the Universe!
