Course Objectives

For Undergraduates:

- 1) To learn the repertoire of standards from the Great American Songbook, as well as jazz standards from the “common practice period” of jazz, i.e., from the bebop to contemporary eras
- 2) To develop reading ability through study of jazz and classical etudes
- 3) To improve technical ability on the guitar in the interest of better ease of execution of written material and improvisation

For Graduates:

- 1) To continue to progress in the three objectives above
- 2) To begin to develop an individual sound
- 3) To begin to compose original material

A note on graduate objectives two and three

Developing an original sound as a jazz artist is a long term—and extremely difficult—goal to achieve. As one progresses in the fundamentals of the jazz practice, as articulated by the undergraduate course objectives, the long-term goal of achieving one's own voice should always be in back of mind. This is, of course, a highly individualized quest, and one in which the instructor can only serve as a helpful guide. In my own practice, I have found that composing original material has helped me to find and hone this individual voice, so in many ways graduate objectives two and three are of a piece.

Recommended Texts

Personalizing Jazz Vocabulary, by Davy Mooney, Mel Bay Publishing

This book lays out my philosophy on learning how to improvise with classic jazz language. I recommend it to anyone who wants insight into how I learned to play this music, and how I think about teaching it to others.

Into the Labyrinth: An Anatomy of Position Playing for Jazz Guitar, by Davy Mooney, Mel Bay Publishing (Required for MUAC 1526)

This book describes my journey toward fretboard fluency. It is required for students in the first two years of lessons, as a supplement to the 30-minute lessons I offer. At the very least it offers a roadmap of one way to figure out where all the scales, arpeggios, and other useful shapes are on the fretboard.

Jazz Guitar Reading and Improvisation Material:

Melodic Rhythms for Guitar, by William Levitt

Barry Galbraith Jazz Guitar Study Series:

- 1) The Fingerboard Workout
- 2) Daily Exercises in the Melodic and Harmonic Minor Modes
- 3) Guitar Comping
- 4) Play Along With Bach
- 5) Guitar Improv, by Barry Galbraith

Joe Pass's "Catch Me!," "Joy Spring," and "For Django:" Transcription and Analysis, by Davy Mooney

Bop Duets, by Bugs Bower

The Advancing Guitarist, by Mick Goodrick

Jazz Ear Training: Learning to Hear Your Way Through Music, by Steve Masakowski

Play Duets with Jimmy Raney, by Jimmy Raney (Aebersold vol. 29)

Classical Reading Material:

42 Studies of Caprices, by Rodolphe Kreutzer

Sonatas and Partitas for the Violin, by J.S. Bach

Saxophone Studies:

The Charlie Parker Omnibook, edited by Jamey Aebersold

14 Jazz and Funk Etudes, by Bob Mintzer

The Jazz Conception, by Jim Snidero

note: I studied the above classical violin and jazz saxophone material with Fred Hamilton for two years, and found it both illuminating and highly relevant to jazz guitar study. I hope to continue the Fred Hamilton legacy with this material!

Weekly Lesson Breakdown

Weekly lessons will be split into thirds, roughly, covering these topic areas: 20 minutes on reading material and etudes, 20 minutes on playing and improvising, 20 minutes on chord melody. These 20-minute periods can of course be adjusted depending upon individual circumstance. For Graduate students, review of students' original material may also occupy a significant portion of the lesson time. Weekly lessons will be graded, and these three main topic areas will be treated equally toward the weekly grade (each will compose 30%), with attendance, attitude, and miscellaneous assignments comprising the remaining 10%.

Repertoire/Tune List

In order to build a substantial, varied, and practically useful repertoire of pieces in the jazz idiom, students will be expected to learn approximately two tunes from each of the following categories over the course of the semester (the tunes in parenthesis are only suggestions):

- 1) Great American Songbook standard (Days of Wine and Roses, Dream Dancing)
- 2) Ballad (Easy Living, Darn That Dream)
- 3) Bebop head or intricate melody (Segment, Conception)
- 4) Brazilian/Straight 8ths groove (Ana Maria, Triste)
- 5) Jazz Standard (Moment's Notice, Along Came Betty)

These categories can be supplemented by other material as well, at the instructor's discretion. For the final jury, students must have six of these tunes memorized and must create their own backing track for each. I recommend creating a recording of yourself comping—a re-creation of the duo guitar style that we play in lessons. Use a metronome. Three to five choruses (depending on the type of tune) should suffice.

Transcription

The student will be expected to transcribe two full solos per semester, one for the mid-term and one for the final jury. It is recommended that at least one of these solos be a guitar solo. Both these solos should be computer notated, and the student must email a pdf of the computer notated transcription to their instructor and copy david.mooney@unt.edu. For the final jury transcription, bring a hard copy of the transcription with you for Professor Mooney. The solo should be performed along with the recording, and the student should match the articulation and time feel of the soloist as well as the pitches and rhythms.

Chord Melody

The student will be expected to arrange two jazz standards for solo performance, in collaboration with the instructor, one for the mid-term and the other for the final jury. At least one of these should be a rubato ballad, which should be ornamented and embellished using techniques such as back-cycling, chord inversions, moving inner lines, single-note fills, and a variety of right hand articulation techniques.

Recording Lessons

Students are encouraged to record their lessons. Something that you or your instructor play during the lesson may be memorable or useful to you in the future. You also might want to chart your progress aurally over the course of the semester.

Tune Transcription

Given the varied quality of lead sheets of jazz tunes, you may be called upon to transcribe or correct a lead sheet of a standard tune. These lead sheets will be shared with the guitar department, and I encourage you to play these tunes on your gigs and add them to your repertoire.

Grading

The student must complete weekly assignments, in accord with all of the above course objectives and goals. A positive attitude and enthusiasm for the jazz practice are also key to a successful semester of lessons. Attendance at each week's lessons is mandatory, although in the case of illness or other unavoidable conflict absence may be excused. The instructor will make up any missed lessons, but student absences will not be rescheduled. Each week's lesson will be graded (see "Weekly Lesson Breakdown" above) and averaged to make up 50% of the semester's grade. The mid-term transcription and chord melody will make up a further 20% of the semester's grade.

30-Minute Lessons with Dr. Mooney

I wish there were a way for me to teach all of you privately, but the math doesn't work. I teach everyone during the semester of their senior and master's recitals, but I want to have more regular face-time with everyone in the department as they progress in their degree plans. So I will teach each of you two 30-minute lesson per semester, in addition to your weekly lessons with your instructor.

Guitar Departmental

The UNT jazz guitar departmental takes place every Friday, from 2 to 3pm, in room 262. You may be called upon to perform, space and time permitting: a short, 15 to 20 minute, 2-tune set. You must get your departmental repertoire, personnel, and other information to Linda Strube (Linda.Strube@unt.edu) by the Wednesday before your performance. I recommend guitar trio, or quartet with horn or piano, with bass and drums. I will film these performances and they will be emailed to you. Seeing yourself perform live provides insight into the way your music is perhaps perceived by the audience—this is subjective and intangible, but it is helpful to put yourself in the audience's place, in some small way, by watching your performance. I recommend watching once or twice, analyzing strengths and weaknesses, but not getting overly obsessed with one performance. Jazz is an in-the-moment music, and the effectiveness of your playing will vary from day to day. I will also give you written comments on your performances, as will your private lesson teacher and other adjunct faculty who are present. The music you play at departmental must be memorized. Attendance at guitar departmental is required. You will be allowed one unexcused absence. After that, your lesson grade will go down one letter. Excused absences include illness, gigs, and other unforeseen circumstances, but you have to communicate with me.

Juries

The student will perform for a faculty panel at the end of each semester. The student will be required to perform a chord melody, a transcription, and to submit a video of a performance of one etude (which need not be memorized) from the semester's study. The video must be emailed to David.Mooney@unt.edu by the Wednesday of the week before finals, the traditional day that guitar juries are held. The student must also submit their six-tune repertoire list, and prepare a backing track of guitar and metronome only for each of the six tunes. One of these six will be chosen by Dr. Mooney and performed with the backing track. The jury will make up the remaining 30% of the semester's grade.
