Note: WOW reviews are peer reviewed and WOW Review is listed within the International Children's Literature Data Base—significant source for accesses and citations. As editor of this review journal through 2015, I have also been responsible for writing an introduction for all issues (whether reviewing a book or not) that critically synthesizes the theme and/or connections among books in each issue. (This is noted as well under journals edited.) WOW Review publications are clustered here to facilitate reading rather than listed chronologically with "Other Published Papers." All are peer reviewed.

7. Journal activities

- Editor
- 2018-2022: Bookbird Co-Editorship (2019-2022) was assigned in January 2018 with activities beginning right away in order to have the first issue out in January of 2019. Bookbird: A Journal of International Children's Literature is an academic journal that publishes articles on children's literature with an international perspective. The journal is published jointly by the John Hopkins University Press on behalf of the International Board on Books for Young People. Recently acknowledged/listed by SCOPUS. *As of 2021, I am lead editor, however, the duties for this leadership began in summer of 2020.
- 2005-2012: Editor of the USBBY (US section of International Board on Books for Young People) Newsletter. While this is not considered a journal in the publishing world, during my editorship, it was published and disseminated in the same manner as a scholarly, though not peer reviewed journal. It was published two times a year in 24 page paper format and consisted of various columns as do other journals. For USBBY members it was a visual, tangible representation of the involvements and activities of the organization both national and international. It was disseminated nationally and internationally and in various conversations with me, those receiving it often referred to it as a journal due to its comprehensive contents. As sole editor I solicited, received, edited, organized, formatted, negotiated with printers, and mailed each of the 12 issues during my term of service. (Recently the newsletter, now entitled Bridges, has gone to an electronic format, maintaining the same integrity of contents.)
- 2001-2005: One of four associate editors for Reading Research & Instruction, a peer reviewed journal of the Association of Literacy Educators and Researchers (formerly the College Reading Association) published 4 times yearly.
- Editorial Board
- 2015 to present: Review Board Member for The Reading Teacher.
- 2015 to present: Review Board Member for Literacy Research and Instruction
- 2011 - present: Editorial Board Member for Libri and Liberi, A Croatian Journal of Research in Children's Literature. (For information see <http://www.librietliberi.org/>)
