TOPIC: African American Art — Decentering Whiteness in American art history

Course Description

In this course we aim to de-center the Whiteness that has long narrated the history of American art by exploring published and exhibited efforts on this topic and researching and writing case studies as chapters (or parts of chapters) that tell an art history from a multicultural perspective emphasizing diversity in African American experience, art objects, and texts, and focusing on the agency African American artists have exercised in improving their lives and communities and shaping the course of United States history and visual culture. Our study of African American art since the late 19th century will pay attention to relevant legal, political, economic, and social history contexts, as well as to fundamental concerns of art history, analyzing form, style, subject matter, context, and meaning.
Course Objectives

- Comprehend the history and significance of slavery, Jim Crow laws, and other forms of repression and discrimination that resulted in the profound disruption of African traditions in America, and in systemic social injustice
- Interrogate the meaning of “African American” in light of past and present constructions of this term
- Identify in what ways a major text of American art history engages with Whiteness and the narrative place and roles it assigns to African American art
- Demonstrate an understanding of the work of African American artists, including many who actively reflect on and critique historical experience, identity, racialism, racism, and the possibility of post-racism, as well as several who exercise their right to engage more purely formal concerns
- Intervene in the history of American art by researching and writing about one artist, work of art, or exhibition, using course concepts and approaches to interpret and contextualize material in a specific historical period since 1900, explaining how the material helps to de-center Whiteness at the heart of the text’s narrative and represent and discuss African American presence and experience
- Develop critical thinking skills through the exploration of complex topics throughout the semester

Assignments and grades

Assignments are organized on a scale of 100 possible points to earn this semester.

Find information about assignments in the modules.

Read carefully - grad and undergrad students share some assignments and not others. In some cases points awarded for assignments differ for graduates and undergraduates.

Unless told otherwise, please submit all work as a Word document on Canvas. Do not submit pdfs.
For whom + grade points

GRAD STUDENTS ONLY. Lead class discussion once during the semester. Share answers to these questions in class. In one of the chapters or sub-chapters assigned in Framing America for class on the day of your report, are there references to African American artists, their art, relevant exhibitions, and experiences? If so, what role do the references play in telling the history of American Art (in the narrative, where are they and what are they doing)? In your view, what additional research is needed on this material? Compare and contrast how Farrington or other authors we are reading for that class tell about the same time period by emphasizing African American artists and their work. Are the narratives the same? In your view, would inserting this material into Pohl’s create a satisfactory narrative of American art history—why or why not?

Undergrad and Grad paper. 1-2 pages, typed double space, approximately 500 words. Write about one African American artist or a work of art or exhibition associated with African American artists that is absent in a chapter or portion of a chapter that we are skimming or reading in Framing America.

This assignment serves as the beginning of work you will continue to develop this semester, so please select something that intrigues you and that you will want to stay with for the next two months.

Undergrad and Grad outline. Outline, 1-2 pages typed. Return to your assignment from September 13 to write an outline for research and writing. Make it real by identifying concrete tasks. Consider, realistically, how much time will it take to complete all of these tasks without overstretching, and build that time into your outline.

First, outline a three-week research agenda (October 8 – November 1) to research one artist, work of art, or exhibition you selected. Include adequate time to think, look at examples, find material, read, look or watch and write notes. Through your research, aim to be able to explain (1) how your subject belongs to a particular decade in American art history after 1900, (2) on what grounds your subject especially contributes to the art history of this particular decade (such as life of the artist, subject matter, material, technique, size, or cultural, historical, or social contexts), and (3) how what you identify as important about your subject contributes to the narrative of American art for that decade. On this point, think carefully about what you will want to argue (through your research) that is important about your material in telling a multicultural history of American art and what the implications of bringing your material into this history are for organizing such an art history. For example, does your material require rewriting the history of American art (as exemplified by Framing America) and if so, what might this look like (or what would the chapter your material belongs in, emphasize, or how would it begin, or what would it include in terms of themes and emphasis?)

Show, in your outline how, in your research, you will use at least two items from our toolkit: Theory, Critical Race Theory Race, Intersectionality, Whiteness, White privilege, Context,
Historiography, Narrative, Interventions, Counternarrative, Decolonize, Decolonizing, 1619 material.

Show, in your outline, how, in your research, you are required to consult at least 2 books on reserve for our class, and you will want to list these books in your outline.

Also, outline a four-week writing period (November 1- November 29), during which you analyze and digest your notes and write at least one if not more drafts before submitting your final paper. You might include specific weeks to review your notes, follow up with any holes in your research, write an outline, and write one or more drafts, and edit your work.

Undergrad paper. 1-2 pages typed double space, approximately 500 words typed. Compare and contrast how something about the focus of your research projects relates (by similarity, contrast, continuation, or in other ways) to material discussed in at least 3 classes up to this point in the semester. Provide specific examples that support your points.

Use at least two items from our toolkit: Theory, Critical Race Theory, Undergrad and Grad paper. Final paper. 3-4 pages, typed double space, about your artist, work of art, or exhibition. Your paper explains: (1) how your subject belongs to a particular decade in American art history after 1900, (2) on what grounds your subject especially contributes to this art history (such as subject matter, material, technique, size, or cultural, historical, or social contexts), and (3) how what you say is important about your subject contributes to the narrative of American art for that decade. Demonstrate what is important about your material in telling a multicultural history of American art and what the implications of bringing your material into this history are for organizing it. Clarify: does your material require rewriting the history of American art (as exemplified by Framing America) and if so, what might this look like (or what would the chapter your material belongs in, emphasize, or how would it begin, or what would it include in terms of themes and emphasis?)

Use at least two items from our toolkit: Theory, Critical Race Theory, Race, Intersectionality, Whiteness, White privilege, Context, Historiography, Narrative, Interventions, Counternarrative, Decolonize, Decolonizing, 1619 material.

Use evidence to make and support your points. Refer to specific chapters or parts of chapters. Refer to class, discussion, or videos. Refer to specific features of works of art or something particular in or about an artist or an exhibition or element of the art world.

Use at least two items from our toolkit: Theory, Critical Race Theory, Race, Intersectionality, Whiteness, White privilege, Context, Historiography, Narrative, Interventions, Counternarrative, Decolonize, Decolonizing, 1619 material.

Your research must include references from at least two books on reserve for this course.

Your final paper needs endnotes or footnotes, a bibliography, and images if they are discussed.
In your final paper, the order of your material is (first page, top of the page) title, your name, space, begin your text typed double space. If you are using endnotes, these come after your text ends, followed by any images, followed by a bibliography.

Extra Credit

You will receive from 1-6 points extra credit if you consistently participate in class in ways that demonstrate you have read the material and you are able to make comparisons with what we've already learned or bring reflective, thoughtful reflection to the material.

Required Texts

If you have problems accessing material, please contact the professor at Jennifer.Way@unt.edu.

Voertman’s sells these books for a lower price than Barnes and Noble, I believe.

These two required books are ordered for you to purchase. Or, you can use the one copy of each book on reserve at Willis Library:

Many required texts are short and available online. A few are provided for you in the course modules.
Some readings are available to you online, through UNT Library Course Reserves. Access them here

https://iii.library.unt.edu/search/r?SEARCH=arth+4817 (Links to an external site.) and use the password AfAmAh

Two of your assignments require you to reference (and therefore, cite) at least two books on reserve for this course. The books are located in Willis Library, and you can check them out for a two-hour period. See the list, below.

Resources

Your professor is your best resource for the course. Schedule online office hours. Ask for guidance. Get to know other professors in the art history program, too.

The Art Collection [of books] is now located on the 3rd floor of the Willis Library. All art books of all art disciplines are together with the rest of the humanities in one library that is open 24/7.

Research Help at CVAD Your UNT Art Reference Librarian is Rebecca Barham: (940) 565-4405, Rebecca.Barham@unt.edu. It is your responsibility to know how to use the UNT Libraries and access information relevant to your coursework. As early in the semester as possible, you are strongly encouraged to work with Rebecca to identify secondary and primary resources for your assignments, such as journal articles, exhibition and collection catalogs, auction records, books, encyclopedias, and databases. The earlier you begin, the more time you will have to digest what you learn and make choices in your process.

ADA accommodation statement (UNT Policy 16.001)

"UNT makes reasonable academic accommodation for students with disabilities. Students seeking accommodation must first register with the Office of Disability Accommodation (ODA) to verify their eligibility. If a disability is verified, the ODA will provide a student with an accommodation letter to be delivered to faculty to begin a private discussion regarding one’s specific course needs. Students may request accommodations at any time, however, ODA notices of accommodation should be provided as early as possible in the semester to avoid any delay in implementation. Note that students must obtain a new letter of accommodation for every semester and must meet with each faculty member prior to implementation in each class. For additional information see the ODA website at disability.unt.edu."

American Disabilities Act

The College of Visual Arts and Design is committed to full academic access for all qualified students, including those with disabilities. In keeping with this commitment and in order to facilitate equality of educational access, faculty members in the College will make reasonable accommodations for qualified students with a disability, such as appropriate adjustments to the classroom environment and the teaching, testing, or learning methods when doing so does not fundamentally alter the course. If you have a disability, it is your responsibility to obtain verifying information from the Office of Disability Accommodation (ODA) and to inform me of your need for an accommodation. Requests for accommodation must be given to me no later than the first week of classes for students registered with the ODA as of the beginning of the current semester. If you register with the ODA after the first week of classes, your accommodation requests will be considered after this deadline. Grades assigned before an accommodation is provided will not be changed. Information about how to obtain academic accommodations can be found in UNT Policy 18.1.14, at www.unt.edu/oda, and by visiting the ODA in Room 321 of the University Union. You also may call the ODA at 940.565.4323.
Assignment policy

For all assignments, instructions are distributed prior to the due date. It is up to you to understand the assignment fully and seek assistance when needed. Please speak to the professor if you are unclear about an assignment, or if you miss a deadline. No late work is accepted. Make up work is not available.

Contesting a grade

If you are not happy with your grade, or if you feel there has been an error or oversight, write up a clear, full explanation of what you feel is wrong. Also, provide clear, full evidence supporting your suggestion for a change of grade. This material is due three days after you received the grade.

Attendance expectations and consequences (UNT Policy 06.039)

Students are expected to attend class meetings regularly and to abide by the attendance policy established for the course. It is important that you communicate with the professor and the instructional team prior to being absent, so you, the professor, and the instructional team can discuss and mitigate the impact of the absence on your attainment of course learning goals. Please inform the professor and instructional team if you are unable to attend class meetings because you are ill, in mindfulness of the health and safety of everyone in our community.

If you are experiencing any symptoms of COVID-19 please seek medical attention from the Student Health and Wellness Center (940-565-2333 or askSHWC@unt.edu) or your health care provider PRIOR to coming to campus. UNT also requires you to contact the UNT COVID Team at COVID@unt.edu for guidance on actions to take due to symptoms, pending or positive test results, or potential exposure.
