Course Description

Strings Class is a fundamental string techniques and pedagogy course designed to develop basic performance and teaching skills for violin, viola, cello, and/or bass. This course will help students learn beginner playing techniques as well as best practices for teaching individuals and ensembles. This course is primarily an opportunity for you to learn how to teach yourself and others through thoughtful practice, reading, and reflection. There are no prerequisites for enrollment, and mastery of a string instrument is not expected by the end of this course. Regardless of prior experience, students should demonstrate a thorough understanding of course content, apply consistent and honest effort, and work effectively towards their own goals in the process. Success in this course will be determined by a healthy work ethic, attendance and presence in class, integration of key skills, and putting one's best foot forward.

Course Objectives

- Acquire basic playing skills on violin, viola, cello, or bass.
- Understand the relationship between your playing, emotions, physicality, and decision-making.
- Develop diagnostic skills for teaching basic posture, position and performance in string playing.
- Survey and compare common string methods (methods books) to be able to confidently select an appropriate and effective approach for any given school program.
- Comprehend instructional content and sequencing for teaching a string program.

Grading Rubric

Performance: 25% (100 points)

During the university scheduled final exam time, your class will put on a concert performance in a public area of the building. You will be responsible for learning and understanding all aspects of a classroom performance.

Participation: 25% (100 points)

Participation in class means actively engaging with the instruments, content, and fellow classmates. This portion of the grade also includes occasional readings, though these are relatively few. A participation grade will be given to every student following every class. Careful listening, skillful playing, physical and emotional self-awareness, and integrating skills and ideas as needed are key. Using a laptop, tablet, or mobile device for any purpose unrelated to the conversation or the course will be construed as a lack of participation.

Teaching Demonstrations: 25% (100 points)

Each student will teach the class 8-minute lessons. Students will submit a lesson plan for each 8-minute lesson to be approved by the instructor prior to the teaching demonstration. After the teaching demonstration, students will also submit a reflection assessing their own teaching in comparison to the lesson plan that they wrote. The teaching demonstration grade will consist of a combination of the lesson plan, the teaching demonstration, the student reflection, and an evaluation by the course instructor.

Assignments, Reflections, and Discussions: 25% (100 points)

Students are expected to complete readings, quizzes, class or Canvas discussions and reflections as they are assigned.

Attendance Policy

Attendance at all class meetings is expected. Three absences for any reason (aside from university-excused absences) will subject the course grade to being lowered by one full letter. Per Division of Music Education policy, more than three absences results in a failing grade for the course. End-of-semester juries must not be scheduled during class time; any such absences will not be excused.

Daily attendance will be taken by the instructor. All students are responsible for staying informed of in-class assignments, email or Canvas announcements, physical handouts, turning assignments in on time, and informing the instructor in writing of any circumstances affecting attendance or performance in class.

Note: If you have a disability that impacts your attendance, please carefully read the ODA statement on Page 6 of this syllabus and consider contacting the Office of Disability Access (disability.unt.edu) if you wish to engage the University Policy on making “reasonable academic accommodation for students with disabilities”.

Teaching Philosophy

I believe that music is a way through which we can understand and connect with other humans. It is a privilege and an honor to mentor and educate pre-service music teachers who have discovered a spark and passion for music that they wish to share with future generations of student musicians. In our journey together, I want to help you hone your skills and passion while guiding you to shape your own teaching philosophy. If I can be of any assistance to you along your path, please let me know.
