COURSE DESCRIPTION

UNT course description: Principles of music performance using the band and/or orchestra ensemble. Foundations of performance on band and/or stringed instruments, rescoring and arranging for band and/or orchestra, fundamentals of marching band, performance practices, and standard band and/or orchestra literature. Prerequisite(s): MUED 3100 and MUED 3200. Must be a Music Education major.

As instrumental music teachers, our programs are often in the spotlight of public attention, opinion, and expectations. The combination of teaching, performing, and serving is a delicate "balancing act" that is often unique to music educators. Although the structure of programs may differ from school to school, instrumental music teaching in any setting invariably requires attention to musical, social, and organizational goals.

In this course, we will think critically about the nature of music, music instruction, and the role of school music participation in the lives of young people, particularly adolescents.

COURSE OBJECTIVES

1. Investigate organizational and support structures of school instrumental music programs
2. Review and evaluate literature appropriate for use in a variety of school ensembles
3. Practice teaching techniques applicable to the ensemble setting
4. Prepare instrumental scores for instructional contexts

As with many college-level courses (and for nearly every course that I teach), strengthening written communication skills writ large is an ever-present goal.

MATERIALS AND TECHNOLOGY

Canvas will be utilized on a limited basis. Email, basic word processing, accessing journal articles via online library resources, basic Canvas navigation and uploading assignments into Canvas modules.

Primary and/or secondary musical instruments. Conductor baton. Purchase of conductor score if needed. A small set of color pencils for score study assignment is recommended.

The instructor reserves the right to make modest amendments to this syllabus (including the schedule and assignments), given reasonable advance notice to students. In fairness, I will also entertain student requests for assignment substitutions, again, given reasonable advance notice. Do not engage in "busy work." • Use above scoring sheet rather than Canvas to calculate course grade.

ASSIGNMENT SCORING and COURSE GRADES

Assignment parameters will be provided when introduced (“INT”) on calendar, p. 4.

Each assignment will be adjudicated (as a presumed third-party observer) as follows:

- 5 Impressive! Fully satisfactory, both in content and in presentation.
- 4 Satisfactory (fulfills assignment expectations).
- 3 Marginal.
- 2 Not satisfactory. (Might be used as a temporary score as needed.)
- 1 Let’s talk.
- 0 Unacceptable, or unsubmitted.

Each assignment will be weighted as indicated above (see “Assignments and weighting”) to calculate the final course grade.

Assignments should be submitted when due (8am on “DUE” date on calendar). Assignments will be graded/returned by the end of the following week. Late work may receive limited instructor feedback and is subject to a maximum score of 4. Unless specified otherwise, assignments may be resubmitted for a higher score. Work must be submitted by the end of the course.

Course grades will be assigned as follows:

- A 90 or more points
- B 80 points
- C 60 points (N.B.: Minimum “C” grade needed in all music classes; min. GPA 2.75)
- D 40 points
- F < 40 points

Attendance at all class meetings is expected. Three absences for any reason (aside from university-excused absences) will subject the course grade to being lowered by one full letter. Per Division of Music Education policy, more than three absences results in a failing grade for the course. End-of-semester juries must not be scheduled during class time; any such absences will not be excused.

For purposes of encouraging punctuality (or, more precisely, discouraging tardiness), three tardies shall be calculated as one absence. Concerns regarding punctuality, attendance, and any other matters of professionalism may affect Teacher Candidate status and Clinical Teaching eligibility.

I expect...

*... that you will recognize that the profession that you propose to enter is worthy of your best efforts, musically and intellectually... that you will extend to me and your classmates the basic courtesy and professional expectation of attention to the instructor and to the subject matter at hand during class (that means you’re not attending to homework from other classes or personal electronic devices and not taking frequent or extended personal breaks)... that you will work to recognize applicability of principles discussed in class to your proposed area of instruction... that you will work to recognize how these principles have functioned in your past (and current) experience as a student and as a teacher... that you critically reconsider previously-held beliefs about teaching and learning, in light of what you learn in this class... that you will ask questions, and exhibit inquisitiveness appropriate for a future professional teacher. Also, I would appreciate your assistance in setting up chairs before class, and your assistance in putting them away after class as needed as well. Please also see Page Five.

ATTENDANCE: If you miss class or if you anticipate needing to be absent or late, email me before I email you. (In your forthcoming professional career—especially if as a teacher— you won’t have the option to simply not show up.)

ASSIGNMENTS: If you need extra time on an assignment, just let me know. (Please do so within the designated assignment portal in Canvas.) Please note that except as noted, assignments are due by 8:00 a.m. on the indicated due date.

I review assignments as soon as I can after their due date. Once I’ve reviewed all submissions, I may close the submission portal. (Do not submit assignments in the “Comments” portion of a Canvas assignment unless requested to do so.) Any subsequent submissions must be discussed with me.

If I request to meet with you in person (whether to discuss attendance, an assignment, or anything else), please do so. (Again, for now and for your future, ignoring such requests is not an option!)

The zero-weight assignments are still very important. (See Disposition Inventory, No. 1.)

USE OF GENERATIVE ARTIFICIAL INTELLIGENCE (GenAI): Discouraged, but in principle, you may submit material that contains AI-generated content, or is based on or derived from it, if this use is properly documented. This includes, for example, drafting an outline, preparing individual sections, combining elements, removing redundant parts, and compiling and annotating references. Your documentation must make the process transparent: The submission itself must meet our standards of attribution and validation. <https://guides.library.unt.edu/artificial-intelligence/AIstudents>
