DEVOTIONS

Read: Psalm 23.

The Fourth Sunday of Easter is the Good Shepherd Sunday. Some part of John 10 and Psalm 23 are always part of these lectionary texts. The passages connect the resurrection life celebrated throughout the Easter season with God's providential care that provides security in the midst of tough times and a promised future of peace. Psalm 23 is a psalm of trust in the midst of crisis. However, the crisis here is not clearly identified. There are allusions to the forty years of exodus wanderings. The theme of needing nothing in verse one is paralleled in Nehemiah 9:21 where for forty years the people "lacked nothing," the same Hebrew word translated as "shall not want" in Psalm 23:1. While difficult times—the darkest valley—beset all people, including all of God's people, faith in Christ still allows one to see and experience beauty and peace. The term "follow" in verse six also means "pursue." Here it is contrasted with its usual Old Testament association of being pursued by an enemy. Even more, in this psalm we are pursued by the love and protection of our Good Shepherd. When you read Psalm 23, what words stood out for you? How do those words relate to what you are now experiencing in your life?

Pray: Good Shepherd, give me eyes to see and a heart to believe that you have set green pastures and still waters before me and that your goodness and mercy pursue me always. Amen.

SERVICE

In the story of Peter bringing Dorcas back to life, we are told: "Now in Joppa there was a disciple whose name was Tabitha, which in Greek is Dorcas. She was devoted to good works and acts of charity" (Acts 9:36). Dorcas was well loved by her neighbors as a result of her generosity and acts of kindness for others. Cooking a meal for someone, babysitting for free, walking for a good cause, sending a care package, or some other act of kindness all show God's love to others. What random acts of kindness can you do this week to surprise a friend or neighbor?

RITUALS AND TRADITIONS

Jesus is often referred to as "The Good Shepherd." Some of the earliest Christian art and the most represented art found in catacombs shows this. It has been a tradition for artists around the world to paint Jesus as a shepherd. Do you have a picture like this in your home? If not, find several different pieces or artwork showing Jesus as a shepherd. What is different about the pictures? What is the same? Describe how Jesus is caring for his sheep in each piece of artwork. Describe how Jesus cares for you. Make a list of ways you show care for others. How does your list compare to how Jesus cares for us?
