On the Square...Steeped in Prayer

Sunday, November 7, 2021:
"Within Ear Shot"

Last Christmastime, Ken and I were visiting my mother. Early one morning, we walked a path along a ridge that overlooks the town near where I grew up. Overnight there had been a light snow and no one had walked on the path...except there were a ton of animal tracks: big ones and very small ones. Sometimes it looked like the same species were going side by side and sometimes it looked like they were weaving in and out. The whole path was covered in different animal tracks! I don't know what animals they were but mostly likely they were an assortment of mice, rats, coyotes, dogs and cats. We never actually saw any animals but we followed along their tracks!

All Saints' Day is a good time to think about people who have left tracks for us. I'm reminded of something Supreme Court Justice Ruth Bader Ginsburg once said:

Whatever you choose to do, leave tracks, and that means don't do just for yourself, because in the end it's not going to be fully satisfying. I think you will want to leave the world a little better for your having lived.

Leaving tracks seems like what "saints" do and I use that term in the broadest New Testament sense. Saints were simply those who followed Jesus in their lives and contexts based on their relationship with Jesus. Saints "leave tracks" for the rest of us to follow, learn from and give us direction in our lives. Some of those who leave tracks for us are literally walking beside us and others are people in history who inspire us....

...Who are the saints that we follow? Are they all people who look just like us? Or do they challenge us to grow spiritually because they stretch us in our thinking and living?

As we approach All Saints Day, look for the "Jesus tracks" that others who have gone before you have followed and left for you, weaving in and out of history. And think about the tracks you are leaving as you walk side by side with others who are seeking to follow Jesus, too.

Leave tracks!
