

Persevere

Scripture: In due season, we will reap, if we faint not- Galatians 6:9

If the least of us could only anticipate the eternal issues that will probably spring from the humblest of faith, we should only count our sacrifices and labors unspeakable heritages of honor and opportunity, and would cease to speak of trials and sacrifices for God.

The smallest grain of faith is a deathless and incorruptable germ, which will yet plant the heavens and cover the earth with harvests of imperishable glory. Lift up your head, beloved, for the horizon is wider than the little circle that you can see. You have a calling, a larger ministry than you realize, no matter your age. We are living, we are suffering, we are laboring, we are trusting for ages yet to come. "Let us not be weary in well doing..." With tears of transport, we shall cry some day, "Oh how great is your goodness, which you have laid up for them that fear you; which you have wrought for them that trust in you before the sons of men!" God will honor the humble cries of His children. Life is hard. Struggles are real. Things don't always work out like planned. However God is still good. He still is in control. He still sees. He still knows. He still cares. Don't be discouraged, but be encouraged knowing who is on your side. Don't go weary in well doing, cause all the years you have spend giving your time, talents, abilities, etc. to God, in due season, He will show you the rewards of the harvest!

Prayer: Lord, continue to give me the strength to press on. Help me persevere until the end and not grow weary in my well doing. In Jesus name, Amen!

Written by: Evie Haddock

Excerpts taken from a devotional book

