

Returning Safely

We will be meeting together for worship in person on Sunday, July 5th for the first time since the global pandemic began. While we will all be so happy to be together, we will have to take appropriate precautions for the safety of all our members, especially those who are in high risk categories.

In an effort to provide sufficient space for social distancing, we will have certain pews cordoned off with tape and signs.

While we will not be turning anyone away, we do ask for you to wear a mask if you feel able. We will still celebrate communion together, although it will look a little different. We are still trying to figure out the safest way to do that.

Perhaps most difficult for us will be the important job of not shaking hands, hugging, or kissing. We are a very loving community. Sadly, right now, the most loving thing we can do to assure that each person in attendance is protected and comfortable is to keep our physical distance.

While these common sense efforts will help overcome many of the safety risks, there are still risks involved with any gathering. We all understand if folks still feel uncomfortable attending in person at this time. While the future is uncertain and this process will need to be re-examined as circumstances change, we feel that these are reasonable steps to take to provide us a chance to get together in person.

If you have any questions, concerns, or suggestions, please get in touch with Pastor Ben or one of our elders. Thank you very much.
