

CORNELIUS & PETER

ACTS 10:1 - 11:18

David’s ‘book’, the Psalms, begins by extolling the delight in and meditation on the Torah, or instruction, of the Lord. Solomon’s first book point to the fear of the Lord. It would seem to me that both are correct.

The Church of Jesus Christ is still forming and coalescing. God is using visions to show everyone just how far it reaches. He is illustrating the barriers that no longer stand in the way. God is no discriminator of background, lineage, or ethnicity. He died for all. He calls all to follow.

He holds success in store for the upright, he is a shield to those whose walk is blameless, for he guards the course of the just and protects the way of his faithful ones.
