76	7/7/2009	BMI	Nashville	Davidson	Expansion	24	0	BMI plans to move two dozen or more jobs to Nashville from its New York offices. BMI, which collects license fees on behalf of songwriters, composers and music publishers and distributes the royalties, plans to hire about 24 people in the next nine months for copyright administration jobs here, said Robbin Ahrold, vice president of communications and marketing. The Nashville office already employs about 500 people. Last week, select BMI employees in New York were given the choice of moving to Music City and are thinking the decision over, Ahrold said. BMI recently signed a lease to move into space at 7 World Trade Center in New York, which sparked a study of how to improve efficiency. BMI said it made sense to keep its administrative team in one place — Nashville — rather than continue to split the operations between New York and Music City, Ahrold said.	Back Office, Music
