THE LONG BUS STOP OF SAPPORO

THE FLYING SADIST

THE LONG BUS STOP OF SAPPORO (1969) dir Kenji Misumi w/ Jun Ishioka, Toshirô Mifune, Mutsu Shimizu [135 min; 35mm]

THE FLYING SADIST (1970) dir Teruo Ishii w/ Takeji Higashiyama, Man Harada [95 min; 35mm]

THE LONG BUS STOP OF SAPPORO (1969) is a surreal road movie that follows the endless travels of a group of friends who become stranded in a remote rural town. The film uses a disjointed narrative structure to explore the futility of life and the human condition, with its protagonist, a young man named Goro, falling in love with a woman named Mayumi. The Long Bus Stop of Sapporo is notable for its use of black and white cinematography and its non-linear storytelling, which includes flashbacks and hallucinations.

THE FLYING SADIST (1970) is a psychological thriller that follows the story of a young man named Kenji, who becomes obsessed with a young woman named Mieko. The film uses a surreal and monstrous aesthetic to explore themes of desire, obsession, and the human psyche. The story is told through a series of flashbacks and hallucinations, and includes elements of horror and black comedy.
