

Using the One Day on Earth website

The One Day on Earth website is a social networking site that provides the following:

-  a place to communicate with participants around the world
-  a venue to share photographs, videos, and music with community members
-  groups through which you can create events, plan and execute creative ideas, and share common interests
-  a video time capsule where you can explore videos created by other participants.

The website is the main way to get us footage for possible inclusion in the film, so it is very important to sign up and get active with our on-line community. If you are younger than 13 years old, you will participate with your classmates in a group project; your teacher will make a class profile. If you are older than 13, you can create your own profile.

What are some things that we should know about you?

What are some things you would like to learn?

Go to the url below to explore our website. Come back in 10 minutes.

www.onedayonearth.org

Lesson 1 Worksheet

Now it's time to make your own profile!

Assignment: Create a student or classroom profile.

- Step 1: Go to website and click on Participate Button.
- Step 2: Fill out online form
 - Give some thought to your answers before you enter them on the registration page. This will be the primary way that people will decide if they would like to have you join a group or help them with their project.

You can now use the website to communicate with and view profiles of other classrooms, students, professional filmmakers and world citizens.

Questions:

1. How many participatory media and social media networks are you currently interacting with?
2. How many times a day do you interact?

Assignment:

1. Make a list of how many participatory and social media networks you interact with and how many times a day you interact with each one. Keep track for a full 24 hours.

Our Community

One Day on Earth is committed to nurturing a supportive, vibrant, tolerant, and creative community. We hope to be as open as possible and allow you to celebrate your personal perspectives freely. It is exciting and revolutionary to be able to share perspectives of such quality with people across the world in one place.

We want to be sure that you put your passion into your videos. We strongly support freedom of speech, religion, and beliefs. We also want to be sure that other members of the community feel welcome and respected. We prohibit any form of solicitation that could be construed as harassment or destructive.

We are a community of compassionate, intelligent, creative people that strive to celebrate our diversity and understand our similarities and differences as a global community. In short, be respectful and give to the community, and the community will give back. Please check out our principles to see what One Day on Earth stands for.

Dos and Don'ts

We have set out some important do's and don'ts on how to participate in the One Day on Earth project. We believe the items to do are positive and will be rewarding; the don'ts are negative and will be grounds for removal from the community.

Do:

- Give positive feedback as comments
- Have fun and engage
- Use this as an opportunity to do something you have never done before
- Share your video and results with everyone you know
- Promote any film or project that will be shared with the One Day on Earth community.
- Create Groups to collaborate with others in the community across the globe.
- Learn from your experience
- Engage your local charity, school, or community to participate
- Practice tolerance and patience
- Debate ideas in a constructive way
- Report users who are abusing the site - email: webmaster@onedayoneath.org

Don't:

- Spam or message dozens of people the same solicitation
- Promote a commercial project that is not connected with a One Day on Earth filming event
- Use this site as a dating service
- Post comments that have no constructive value or are off-topic
- Proselytize your religion or political agenda through messages or comments to people you don't know. They may find this offensive. Save it for your video creation.
- Do anything that could be interpreted as harassment in any way
- Upload content you don't own
- Upload anything that may be inappropriate: No sexually explicit material or porn. No videos that incite hatred, include hate speech, defamatory or discriminatory speech or videos depicting unlawful acts or extreme violence. If you think you may have a topic that may be unfairly censored feel free to email info@onedayonearth.org and we can evaluate it on a case-by-case basis.

Note: We reserve the right to suspend a member at any time for any reason.