I love mountains. More specifically I love waking up in a cabin in the mountains and watching the sunrise with a cup of coffee and a good book. There is a stillness to it all that seems to wash every ounce of tension from the muscles and chases all the cares and worries of the world away. Calling it to memory now even brings a sense of peace as I reminisce on recent times when I was visiting the Great Smoky Mountains. Surely each of you has your own places that bring about that sense of peace when you get to enjoy them or, at the very least, the memory of them.

A quick google search will reveal to you that the idea of peace is prominent in the text of the Bible. The King James translation finds the word peace used 429 times. The more modern English Standard Version places it within the text 409 times and even the New International Version, which translates the word the least often at 230 times, uses synonyms to convey similar ideas like safety, silence, quiet rest, treaty and fellowship.

Perhaps in those synonyms we can find a broader meaning regarding what Jesus says in John 14:27 when he encourages his disciples, saying "Peace I leave with you; my peace I give to you. Not as the world gives do I give to you. Let not your hearts be troubled, neither let them be afraid." A few verses earlier in John 14:1 Jesus had encouraged his disciples to not let their hearts be troubled as He was going to be leaving them. Later in Philippians, Paul talks about the peace of Christ that passes understanding.

My point is this. Mountains and countless other things can bring us temporary peace. But it is Christ who brings peace, safety, security, and quiet rest beyond compare.
