In the Old Testament there is a man by the name of Barzillai from Gilead. He is described as a wealthy individual, and we can read about some of the life he lived in the book of 2nd Samuel. There, it is revealed to us that he was loyal to King David during a period when David was forced to flee from Jerusalem because of a revolt by his son, Absalom. Specifically in 2nd Samuel 17:27-29 we find that Barzillai is one of several people who care for King David's household while he was in exile.

Later, after the rebellion was over, Barzillai travels to the shores of the Jordan River where the King and his people would cross to return to the land of Judah and specifically the city of Jerusalem. By this time in his life, Barzillai was an older man at 80 years of age. Yet the king wished to return the good that Barzillai had done him by having him accompany him to Jerusalem. Barzillai's response is recorded in 2nd Samuel 19:37 where he instead asks for his servant, Kimham, to go instead.

As many have noted of Barzillai's life, even in his old age, he seeks after the welfare of others rather than himself. He greatly valued the lives of those who were around him. The influence that his actions had on the life of the king lead him to be remembered long after he had died, with David telling Solomon to show kindness to Barzillai's children for his faithfulness.

I recount this story to you as evidence that when we recognize the value that God has placed on every life, regardless of stature or status, then we cannot help but to seek out the best interests for everyone around us whether we agree or disagree with them or count them as a friend or an enemy. I pray that each of us be a little more like Barzillai with each passing day. -- Andrew
