Susan Kuerze began her nursing career at University of Cincinnati Medical Center in 1996 in the Surgical Intensive Care Unit, one of the most demanding and diverse intensive care units in the city, caring for the sickest traumas and surgical patients in the area. "My 9 years there taught me so much as I continued to master caring for these very sick patients, while furthering my education with the aspiration to one day become a flight nurse." Susan also spent 6 years working part time at University of Cincinnati Medical Center's Emergency Department improving her skill set and gaining a better understanding of patient needs from the time of injury or onset of illness. In 2005, Susan was offered a flight nurse position for UC Health Air Care and Mobile Care, and has now been caring for patients in the prehospital setting for 15 years. "I am passionate about what I do and love passing my knowledge on to residents, nurses, and other prehospital providers through teaching."
