Growing Your Knowledge: Did you know?

Wilson "Snowflake" Bentley loved snowflakes and photographed them because he found them so beautiful. In his love, he found a sound scientific discovery that every snowflake is unique and no two snowflakes are the same. This self-educated man from Jericho, Vermont, appreciated the beauty in nature and now his treasured photographs are appreciated by and inspirations to people from many different walks of life. When you come to the 2019 New England School Nurse Conference, you could drive to Jericho to see the "Snowflake Bentley Exhibit" that displays his life's work, open to the public and free of charge.
