

Shannah Lowe, DNP, RN ,APRN, ACNS-BC, CNRN has been a Clinical Nurse Specialist for 9 years. I recently transitioned to Emory University as the Director for Clinical Education. Previously I was at Emory Healthcare as the Clinical Nurse Specialist of the Neuroscience Units. My career at Emory Healthcare spans about 12years. During my time there I served as the CAUTI lead at ESJH, lead of the Nurse Tech committee (ESJH), CNS representative on EPP (EUH), led CNS efforts on care plan guides and served as Co-chair of Emory Healthcare System CNS committee. I have also served as part time faculty at Emory University School of Nursing. I have informally and formally mentored staff nurses as well as CNS students. I am very passionate about the CNS role not only within organizations but within our communities. A Clinical Nurse Specialist has the skill set and knowledge to improve outcomes in many arenas. I would like to increase awareness to the CNS role in the community, academic settings, and organizations. I also believe that CNS's need the resources and support to practice at the full scope of their education and be recognized as such with the Georgia Board of Nursing. I would like the opportunity to partner with other CNS's and APRN's to develop, support and cultivate the mission and vision of the Georgia CNS.
