Editor's Note: The following article about Rotary exchange student, Pilar Mendoza, was reprinted with permission from the July-August newsletter from the North Ridgeville Office for Older Adults.

By Sally Balog

Director of the Office for Older Adults

Our foreign exchange student Pilar Mendoza - Pili for short - will be returning to her home in Venezuela in the middle of July. She has been here for a whole year. She has lived with us (Paul and Sally Balog) since the beginning of December. Paul and I have enjoyed every minute of Pili's stay.

Pili is a remarkable young lady. She is only 17 years old. She spoke no English upon her arrival. She could read and write a little bit, but nothing much to speak of. Yet she had the guts to come to America, live for a year in a city she had never heard of, spend a year in high school and live with people she had never met.

Pili had already graduated in Venezuela. Their school system only requires three years of high school. She went to a Catholic school and had 25 kids in her class. This is apparently typical of high school in her country. Most are very small. Additionally the kids all stay in one room and the teachers move from classroom to classroom. One last difference is that they all wear uniforms.

When she came to North Ridgeville, Pili was shown around the high school during the summer. Each of her classrooms was pointed out to her - the hallway she must take to get to English class, biology class, art class and Spanish. She was shown her locker and given a combination. A nice leisurely stroll through the high school was conducted. Pili was fine with it. She was excited about getting to school and meeting some kids. Although the school was physically larger than hers at home, it was okay. After all, this is America and things are different here.

Well, traveling the halls in summer was just a bit different than her first real day. As like most teens, morning is not the best time of day for Pili. Not only did she have to get up Venezuelan exchange student, Pilar Mendoza was thrilled to meet Cleveland Indians shortstop, Omar Visquel, a fellow countryman, during a trip to Jacobs Field.

City engine resigns; w leave at e of the month

By Carol Klear

Stewart Lovece will leave his job as city engineer at the end of the month.

Mayor Deanna Hill made the announcement during the July 2 Council meeting citing "personal reasons" for Lovece's decision to vacate the post he has held for nearly six years. The Mayor said that in working with Lovece during his tenure the two have become "close friends" and she would miss him.

Stewart Lovece

Lovece told Council that his departure was "not easy to talk about" and that his work in North Ridgeville has provided him with both opportunities and responsibilities, then offered a short list of projects he has headed in the city including flood control and water distribution.

Following the meeting, an obviously dis-

Parts of NR without power Monday morning

By Carol Klear

A power outage Monday morning left approximately 6,000 to 7,000 Ohio Edison customers in North Ridgeville without electricity.

According to Ray Scharlton, a supervisor with Ohio Edison, two transformers went out at a substation on Chestnut Ridge Road between Root Rd. and state Rt. 83, about 9:30 a.m. causing widespread problems, including some circuits in the Jaycox Road area.

"We had an equipment failure," Scharlton said, and workers were attempting to learn what had caused the problem.

Persons at Busch-Bogner Family Chapel, FirstMerit Bank and CVS reported a loss of electricity between 9:30 a.m. and 11 a.m.

A dispatcher at the North Ridgeville Police Station said that the department also was without power.

Charter Review Committee to wrap up work, July 23

By Carol Klear

The Charter Review Committee completed recommendations concerning the hiring and firing of the parks and recreation director, as well as the election of a council president during Monday's session. Chairman Dick Noll scheduled a final meeting for July 23 and asked the committee to study Section 9.7 — the mandatory referral of rezoning to electors — for discussion at that time. Mayor Deanna Hill said that following the committee's wrap-up, she would call a special Council meeting to approve the recommendations, which will then go on the November ballot.

During a sub-committee meeting regarding the position of parks and recreation director, Bill Comerford noted that although Section 2.1 gives the Mayor the authority to appoint all department heads except the auditor and the clerk of council, the part of the charter detailing the parks and recreation director contradicts that power. "No one person is in charge (of the director)," he said. "The parks and rec director has no direct supervision."

Presently, the director is appointed jointly by the Mayor and the Parks and Recreation Commission, and serves at the pleasure of both. Click Davis said, "It sounds good on paper," however if a disagreement arises over performance, there is no final authority. "The mayor should have the ability to ask for a resignation," he said.

Law Director Eric Zagrans said he doesn't know why the charter treats the head of the parks and recreation department differently than other department heads. "There is no legal reason," he said.

He compared the mayor's position to that of the executive branch of the Federal Government and said that the mayor should have oversight over department heads. Council votes on both the auditor and clerk of council.

Hill said that since she has been in office the charter provision has been confusing, particularly when residents ask her to handle a parks and recreation department situation and "no one is in charge," although the director answers to the mayor on a day-to-day basis.

The Charter Review Committee recommended amending the charter to allow the mayor to appoint the parks and recreation director, with the approval of council.

Edith Lovell led the sub-committee discussion on the selection of the president of council, which initially recommended that the at-large council candidate receiving the most votes in the election would become president. In the event of a vacancy, the position would be open to the other two at-large councilpersons. If neither wanted the post, it would then be open to the ward councilpersons.

There was further discussion, including the possibility that the candidate receiving the most votes had never held office and would be unfamiliar with the role of president.

Noll cautioned the committee about making the council president "a separate office."

Tom Lavelle expressed concern that potential council candidates would be scared off and "eliminated" at the thought of becoming president of council.

Lovell said, "It could be an honor."

Noll explained that Lovell was trying to take the politics out of the post.

The law director said that voters might not know who would be the best president.

Lovell noted, "It's usually a political seat and we're trying to eliminate politics."

It was decided to set aside the idea of having the top vote getter be council president and select the president from the at-large candidates.

Councilman Dave Gillock interjected that part of the responsibility of an at-large candidate is to do a job, which could include being president. "If you're elected to do a job, you should do the job," he said.

It seemed there might be a problem if a tie occurred in voting for another president should there be a vacancy, however the council vacancy first would be filled fleshing out the number to seven votes, eliminating a tie. A new council president would have to be selected from elected councilpersons, disallowing an appointee to fill the vacancy.

It was decided that council would elect the council president from the at-large councilpersons. A vacancy in that post would be filled from one of the remaining at-large councilpersons. If neither wanted the seat, it would be open to the ward representatives.

In charging the committee with studying Section 9.7, Noll said, "I don't want people thinking the committee is not willing to take on difficult tasks."

The July 23 meeting will begin at 7 p.m. in council chambers.

Some Ridgeville 4-H members win contests

Tim Malinich and Bryon Schultz won 1st place in Junior Teams, while Susan and Michelle Bing took 2nd. Jessica Beal of the Ridge

Klearly Speaking:

Kids shared top billing in the Senior Teams.

WOW!.....Hope you got to enjoy Ridgeville's 4th of July fireworks. Great show, but I still can't figure out how they got "rings" of light with fireworks. Pretty nifty. Before the light show we celebrated the birthday of our own little firecracker of a grandson, who turned 5. We thought he might share his birthday with the little brother who's due any time, but as of this writing, we're still waiting.

SOME MORE OF THE STORY.....Got a call from Council President Jean Brown, who shared a story about soon-to-retire Police Chief Ron Bauer. When Jean drove school bus, her route took her to the trailer park off Lear Nagle, where an unsavory resident enjoyed "flashing" at the kids. Jean reported the situation to her superior, who called the P.D. and soon the bus had a grown-up rider, a.k.a. Ron Bauer, done up in beard and moustache and packin' a walkie-talkie. The next time the flasher showed off, his audience of one was Bauer who radioed then-patrolman Skip Hoffstetter who was standing by...and the got him.

NOOOOO, NOT ME.....'Tis rumored that I have been posting on Loraincounty.com...WRONG! I'll fess up to READING the postings - some are good (actually excellent), some are mean and some are dead wrong, but e-mailing something to add to the furor...uh-uh, no way, though I'd sure like to straighten out some misinformation that shows up there from time to time. And to those who've been thinking I'm "cogitator," wrong, again. Anything I say, I say in The P&L...and under my own name.

EDITOR'S NOTEBOOK

Tom, Dick and...the Implantable Cardioverter-Defibrillators

My husband will never be Vice-President of the United States, but he and Dick Cheney have something in common - both harbor implantable cardioverter-defibrillators (ICDs). For Mr. Cheney it's a brand new experience, but Tom has been living with his for nearly eight years.

When his younger sister died of cancer in January 1993, Tom was not only the grieving brother, but the funeral director of record, as well.

When, my mother died of Alzheimer's that June, Tom simultaneously mourned his mother-in-law and handled her funeral service, as well. A month after her death, Tom began having "spells." He had difficulty describing exactly what was going on during the episodes, but he complained of feeling faint and would either sit or lie down depending on where he was at the time.

I recall on more than one occasion glancing at him during Sunday Mass and noticing his face taking on a grayish tinge. Within seconds of the observation both of us would leave church and head outside where Tom would sit on the steps until the feeling passed, subsequently replaced by a draining weakness.

There were several such events over the next few weeks, each one leaving him exhausted and me terrified.

Men are not easily convinced that at times medical consultations are necessary, but even Tom decided that the situation was getting no better on its own, and might even be worsening.

So began a battery of tests, including a 24-hour Holter evaluation and a stress test. The results elicited suspicions, but nothing totally conclusive, so the exams continued on an out patient basis.

During one such assessment, we went to the hospital in the morning where Tom went through more evaluations and then returned to his room. Never one to miss a meal, he insisted we stay through lunch, and soon the anticipated tray arrived. I expected him to make short work of the food, but instead he sank back into the chair, his head cocked to one side, resting it on his cupped hand. Anxious to be out of there I urged him to eat so we could go home, but he said he was tired and needed a minute or two.

I am not by nature a patient person, and if we were finished, I wanted to get on with the rest of the day. I had hardly begun mustering my irritation when I watched the color draining from Tom's complexion turning it from a healthy hue to plaster gray. His eyes rolled back in his head and his body slid ever so quietly from chair to floor. Within a millisecond I was out of the room and racing toward the nurses' station, shrieking for help.

Immediately doctors and nurses converged around Tom, shouting his name and doing whatever it was they had to do. Today, the scenario is blurred, but I do remember one nurse gently suggesting I go to the waiting room, and I remember just as vividly refusing to budge from the door.

Pressline:

Ward 2 Councilman Al Swindig: As an attorney, I would think Mr. Crobaugh (Chris Crobaugh) would have a code of ethics. After Monday's Council meeting he asked Jim White (Council Clerk) for a copy of the tape, then added the smart remark, "If you don't erase them by tomorrow morning." That was downright dirty and nasty. It was uncalled for.

Lia Muir: Thanks to Carol Klear for doing such a nice article on me and my ice cream truck and Channel 5 saw it and picked it up and is doing an interview.

Regarding the June 20 editorial on the Charter Review Committee: persons attending the meeting came not as STAMP members, but as concerned citizens. They were asked for comments by Mr. Noll, and because they expressed their opinions, they were described as "arrogant." I believe that deserves some explaining.

Response: The explanation for the viewpoint is contained in the editorial itself, there really is nothing more to add at this time, however, if the caller would like to call during regular business hours or at my home in the evening (327-8540), I would be happy to discuss it further.

When is a gift, not a gift?

To the Editor:

Beware of lawyers and developers bearing gifts. This paraphrase of a famous quote is quite appropriate to the citizens of North Ridgeville at this time. We have been told by Bob Schmitt, the developers of the two proposed PCDs, various members of both our council and administration and especially our law director, of the great gift that is being presented to our city by those same developers. Their self-assessment for the users' fees for the westerly interceptor sewer has been hailed as going above and beyond what is required of them and thus the "gift" label. A closer look at the math involved reveals a much sorer tale.

The cost of the westerly interceptor was given by our soon-to-be-ex-engineer as $4,379,186.50 during his report at the March 5 council meeting. It was stated by our SSD at the last council meeting that the developers' share is 73 percent or $3,284,389.87 and that they were self-assessed at a discounted rate of $1076 per tap-in. Those figures result in a total of 3,052 tap-ins (dwellings) on the 1,327 acres to be developed. That equates to the R-1 density rate of 2.3 dwellings per acre.

But wait, you say, one of the requirements for us to receive this fine "gift" is that we allow the developments to be zoned PCD which permit a density of 3.24 dwellings per acres. This density will result in an additional 1,247 dwelling being built by the developers which will not be assessed interceptor tap fees at all. If they were to be assessed at even the discounted rate of $1,076, the additional fees generated of $1,341,772 when added to the original self-assessment would result in a developer's share of $4,625,724 or in other words, more than the total cost of the entire project.

To quote our law director, "there is most assuredly a gift" here. We have just been misled into believing that we, the citizens and city, are the recipients of said "gift."

Police Department Reports:

Alleged threats gets North Ridgeville man arrested

By Carol Klear

A 25-year-old North Ridgeville woman, in the process of getting dissolution, went to her lawyer's with her husband and the man's 7-year-old daughter. The husband was not allowed to speak which made him angry and when the woman presented the legal papers to her husband, he threw them at her.

The couple returned to his house, arguing all the way. When they got there he demanded she return the key to the house. The woman had the little girl get out of the car, so she would not be subjected to the arguing and told her husband that he could lose his daughter if he continued his behavior, which angered him further. He reportedly formed a gun shape with his hand, pointing it at the woman's head. She insisted he get out of the car. He did, but continued yelling at her.

The woman left and went to her mother's where she and the couple's 2-year-old son were living. The husband went to the house and demanded to see the little boy, however he showed up before the time agreed on. Another argument ensued.

The woman went to the police station and charged the husband with domestic violence for threats of physical harm, a fourth degree misdemeanor. The subject was arrested at his home and the wife took custody of both children. He denied threatening his wife with physical harm.

Cans go in the bin, not in the car

The police were called to the North Ridgeville Fire Department to investigate the theft of aluminum cans from the bin across the street from Fire Station No. 1. The firefighters collect the cans and donate proceeds to aid burn victims.

The day before the police were called, the bin had been full and 10 to 15 bags of cans were lying next to the bin. The next day someone noticed the bags that had been on the ground were gone. A female had been seen near the bin, but told firefighters that she was putting cans into the bin.

A few days after the woman showed up, the fire chief received a letter explaining that she had been returning the cans after they had been crushed and washed, and that she was borrowing more to do the same.

The investigation is continuing.

A too-hardy party

The police were called to Crystal Springs Campground when members of a wedding party at a reception held there partied a little too hardy, after arranging to camp overnight.

A male defendant reportedly assaulted another male at the party and other partygoers told police he was very drunk and they were afraid he'd cause more trouble and wanted him removed.

As police tried to locate the defendant they found a female with a bloody shirt and an ice pack on her hip, who said she was the defendant's sister, and didn't want the police involved.

The defendant, who lives in Nova Scotia, was found and very intoxicated. He admitted to downing five to seven beers. He also had bruises on his shoulders and neck and said he got into an argument with his sister.

His father talked to him before he was hauled off to the police station and cited for the offense. No one tried to get him released, and the defendant said he was embarrassed about his behavior.

Fire Department Report:

Governor announces essay contest for grades K-12

Governor Bob Taft announced a statewide summer essay contest as part of the Great Ohio Adventures in Learning program.

The contest, entitled "What I Learned This Summer," challenges K-12 students to make the most of their summer vacations by visiting Ohio's educational travel destinations. The contest runs through July 31.

"The Great Ohio Adventures in Learning program truly offers something for everyone - parents and children alike," Taft said.

The GOAL program, sponsored by the Ohio Department of Development's Division of Travel and Tourism, focuses on family and education. It combines learning with travel by creating a network of Ohio attractions that are divided into theme categories including:

- * Science and Technology
- * Native Ohio
- * Transportation
- * Made in Ohio

- * African-American Ohioans
- * Literary Ohio

Families can find these attractions in the 2001 GOAL Directory, as well as essay contest registration, at www.OhioTourism.com/kids or by calling 1-800-BUCKEYE.

Each contest participant must submit an essay of 250 words or less that describes what he has learned while visiting one of these Ohio attractions. Three levels of competition include elementary (grades K-5), middle school (grades 6-8), and high school (grades 9-12). Essays will be judged on creativity and degree of learning. The winners in each level and their families will be invited to attend the Columbus Crew game on September 15, where they will be awarded a weekend trip for four to visit attractions in either Columbus, Cincinnati or Warren County/Paramount's Kings Island. Admission tickets and hotel accommodations will be included.

HOW TO GET THE MOST OUT OF YOUR DENTAL VISIT

How can I be a smart dental consumer?

Show you are a smart consumer of dental care by asking:

- What does this treatment mean?
- Are there other treatment options?
- How much does it cost?
- Which solution lasts the longest?
- What treatments are absolutely necessary?
- What treatments are elective?
- What kind of payment plans are available?

Dr. Arndt should be able to prioritize a treatment schedule to help you distinguish problems needing immediate attention from those that are less urgent. Often, treatment can be phased in over time. Be sure you understand the consequences of delaying treatment.

If you have talked with your dentist and still are uncertain about what to do, get a second opinion.

Don't miss the SJWS 9th annual Festival of the Arts

Now in its 9th year, St. John West Shore Hospital will again host the annual Festival of the Arts on its grounds in Westlake. Bringing together more than 200 of America's finest artists and crafts persons, in one location, the Festival will be held on July 13 from 6 to 9 p.m.; July 14 from 10 a.m. to 7 p.m. and July 15 from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m., rain or shine.

Visitors to the festival will find it difficult to choose from a dazzling display of for sale and juried works by talented artists and crafts persons who specialize in jewelry, wearable art, stained glass, basketry, ceramics, watercolors, oils, photography and more.

While adults peruse their favorites, children may visit a special craft corner and design some kid-sized masterpieces. In addition, families can enjoy special musical entertainment, relax in the beautiful park-like setting or have a hearty meal in the food court.

The festival is free and open to the public and visitors are encouraged to bring along non-perishable food items, which will be donated to local food banks. Last year more than 5,000 pounds of food was collected at the festival.

The weekend kicks off with a patron benefit on July 13 from 6 to 10 p.m. where patrons can wine and dine under the stars. This year patrons will have the opportunity to pass along well wishes as St. John West Shore celebrates two decades of providing healthcare ministry. The Marriott Chefs Guild will prepare delectable delights and The Dukes of Wail will provide music. Casual attire is recommended. Tickets are $100 per person and all proceeds will be donated to St. John West Shore Community Outreach Services. For more information call 440-414-6551.

Some county vendors found selling tobacco to minors

The Lorain County General Health District, Lorain City Health Department and Elyria City Health Department are joining with other Health Districts statewide in an effort to eliminate the sale of cigarettes to minors.

A random survey of vendors throughout the country was conducted June 5, 12, 13 and 14. Teens under age 18 visited stores where tobacco is sold and attempted to purchase tobacco products, such as cigarettes and smokeless tobacco.

A total of 46 vendors were surveyed. Of those vendors, 11 of them, or 24 percent, illegally sold tobacco products to minors. Letters were sent to vendors that sold to minors reminding them of the law and emphasizing its importance. Letters were sent to vendors that did not sell, commending them for obeying the law. All vendors received information to help them educate their employees regarding the law.

The sale of tobacco products to minors is illegal in every state. The federal government requires that states annually conduct random unannounced inspections to ensure merchants are complying with the law.

For more information contact the Lorain County General Health District at 322-6367 or 244-2209.

Aries - March 21/April 20

A financial windfall comes at just the right time. However, don't be a spendthrift. After you pay off your bills, put some money away. You're going to need it in the near future. A close friend has a problem and needs your help. Be supportive, and do what you can. Gemini plays an important role at the beginning of the week.

A project that you've been working on hits a snag. Don't get discouraged. Think rationally, and you can solve the problem. A family gathering that you really don't want to attend actually ends up being a lot of fun. All of your worries are for naught. That special someone has a surprise for you. Enjoy it!

Gemini - May 22/June 21

You've got a relaxing week in front of you, Gemini. There are no deadlines to meet, and no one is piling responsibility on top of you. Enjoy it while you can, because things will get hectic soon. A loved one asks for your advice about a family problem. Be honest, and say what you really think.

Cancer - June 22/July 22

You are on edge this week, because you have so much to do and not enough time to get it all done. Don't get nervous. Just prioritize your schedule, and stick to it. Leo - July 23/August 23

Be true to your ideals this week, Leo, as you face a challenging problem. Stand up for what you believe in, and you will come out ahead. A loved one reveals an interesting family fact to you. Don't let it throw you - and keep it to yourself. Capricorn and Pisces play key roles later in the week.

Virgo - Aug 24/Sept 22

Your error puts an important business project in jeopardy. Remedy the situation as quickly as possible, but think before you act. The higher-ups are watching you. That special someone has a question for you. Don't get nervous; he or she is not putting you on the spot. Just be honest.

Libra - Sept 23/Oct 23

Your pleasant nature saves the day early in the week, Libra. Those around you are on edge, and you calm them down and keep them focused. A loved one gets into trouble. Don't get involved - you'll only end up getting hurt. The person you've been seeing stops calling. Don't get upset; he or she wasn't the right one for you anyway.

Scorpio - Oct 24/Nov 22

Don't be too aggressive when you meet an interesting person early in the week. You don't want to push this person away, because he or she has a lot of connections that could help you with your career. A close friend confides in you. Be supportive, but be truthful. Leo plays a key role.

Sagittarius - Nov 23/Dec 21

You're on the go this week, Sagittarius. There's a lot to get done, and you can do it all if you stay focused. Don't let your responsibilities lag just because you want to have some fun. There will be plenty of time to celebrate once you finish everything. Loved ones are more than willing to help you if you need it.

Capricorn - Dec 22/Jan 20

Be honest with yourself, Capricorn. Don't get involved in something that you don't agree with just to make others happy. You have to think about yourself. You run into an old friend at the end of the week. Take some time to reminisce. You've got a lot to catch up on.

Aquarius - Jan 21/Feb 18

You're on top of the world early in the week. Everything is going well at work and in your personal life. Even family problems are working out. Enjoy it. An interesting person asks you out to dinner. Say yes, but don't expect this to be the beginning of a long relationship. Just have a good time.

Pisces - Feb 19/March 20

This is your week to shine, Pisces. You do well at work and make a good impression on your superiors. As for romance, your relationship with that special someone is going strong. A loved one needs your help planning a family event. Do all that you can to help. He or she will appreciate your efforts.

early to catch a bus at 6:30 a.m., but also she had to decide what to wear - no uniforms. She made it though. Unfortunately, she was so busy getting to school; she forgot to get the school bus number. She entered the school along with all the other kids. (Remember she spoke no English.) Suddenly the quiet high school is teeming with students and teachers all rushing to get to their places. Every hallway looks just like the other one, and every classroom like the next. She is late for almost every class and visits her locker for the first time sometime in November!

Her first day was traumatic, but finally over. She went outside to catch the bus and the parking lot was filled with big yellow buses, all alike. She had no idea which one was hers. In tears - speaking no English - she approached each driver with a note that had her address written on it. Finally, some kind driver took pity on her and showed her to the correct bus.

I think after all that, I might have called mom and dad and said, "Get me home," but Pili did not. She stuck it out. She learned English, quite well I might add. She made friends, both from this town and from many other countries through the Exchange Program.

She has been to Washington D.C., and found it just as beautiful and inspiring as every American does. She has been out west and to Niagara Falls. She went to Homecoming, Winter Formal and the Prom. She played volleyball, was in the Ski Club and ran in track. She's been to the Jake to see the Indians, the Gund to see the Lumberjacks. She listens to KISS FM radio and would have done anything to be in town when N Sync was performing.

If I did not hear an accent when she speaks, I would say she is just like every other American teen except she is not. She is a delightful young Venezuelan who figured us out and we are the better for it.

Gracias y Buen Viaje, Chiquita!

RHEEL RHEEVIEWS

'A.I.': A brilliant collaboration between two great directors

By Scott Rhee

The world lost one of the greatest film directors of the modern era in 1999. Say what you will about Stanley Kubrick the man, his films are unique, captivating, and unforgettable. Whether you liked his films ("Dr. Strangelove, Or How I Stopped Worrying and Loved the Bomb", "2001: A Space Odyssey", "A Clockwork Orange", and "The Shining", to name just a few) or not, it is impossible to walk away from a Kubrick film without feeling strongly about it one way or another. Kubrick, ever the iconoclast, irreverently strived to demystify, de-glamorize, and de-romanticize the world around us, often in ways that engendered controversy, anger, and/or disgust in some viewers. His films could be simultaneously beautiful and horrific, funny and disturbing.

For several years before his death, Kubrick had been working on a pet project entitled "A.I.". Based on short story by science fiction writer Brian Aldiss called "Supertoys Last All Summer Long", the movie was about a little robot boy who, along with his talking teddy bear, embarks on a quest to find the only power in the universe capable of making him human. Sadly, Kubrick died before bringing his idea to life.

Before his death, however, Kubrick had asked Steven Spielberg to take the helm. Spielberg, one of the best con-porary directors in the world, declined the offer at first, then, after Kubrick's death, decided to take on the project. Kubrick, it turned out, had done most of the work already. Based on copious notes written by Kubrick and storyboards drawn up by comic-book artist Chris Baker, Spielberg wrote the screenplay, co-produced, and directed the film. The results are amazing.

The film not only succeeds in being a science fiction masterpiece, it is also a brilliant collaborative effort between two directors with vastly different styles and world-views. Anyone familiar with the films of either director knows that they are as different as night and day, black and white. One would think that Kubrick's pessimistic dark vision and Spielberg's child-like wonder would clash, but the result is just the opposite. "A.I." is a film that, if it had rested solely in the hands of Kubrick, would have been an inaccessible, nightmarishly bleak vision of a hopeless future, or, on the same token, if Spielberg had decided to do it his way, would have been a saccharine, over-blown contemporary fairy tale with a happy ending.

Strangely enough, the film manages to mesh both directors' visions extremely well, so that the resulting film is a contemporary fairy tale with a nightmarishly bleak vision of the future. But don't let the elaborate special effects and sets fool you: this is an intelligent, moving science fiction film about the quest that we all undertake in life—to find acceptance, belonging, and love—in a world that is uncaring and cruel.

The film begins in the far future, in a time where rampant plagues, vicious wars, and man-made ecological disasters have left a shattered humanity on the brink of extinction. Married couples are required, by law, to be licensed to have children in order to control an under-nourished population, to conserve what few natural resources still remain. Of course, having a child does not ensure that it will survive. Children are especially vulnerable to the many killer viruses and diseases that threaten this world.

As a way to relieve grieving parents, Prof. Hobby (William Hurt), a designer of robots, has built a prototype robot boy named David (Haley Joel Osment). Unlike other service robots, David has been installed with an emotion chip within his positronic brain, which will enable him to love, and with it, the ability to learn and grow emotionally. Henry (Sam Robards) and Monica (Frances O'Connor) are a young couple whose son Martin (Jake Thomas) is dying of an unknown illness. When David enters the picture, Monica refuses to accept him, but her maternal instinct kicks in, and she activates David's emotion chip, "imprinting" his love onto her. In an unexpected twist of fate, her real son miraculously survives the illness and returns home. Now, David is faced with something he was not programmed for: competition for his mommy's affections.

Torn by her love for her real son and the knowledge that, since David has been imprinted, he must return to the factory to be "deactivated", Monica drives David out into the middle of a dark forest (a common fairy tale image), and leaves him there to fend for himself. David, confused by his mother's actions, begs Monica to take him back home, to love him. In a scene almost unbearably painful to watch, she tells him that she is sorry she didn't teach him about the world, and drives off. He soon discovers a new emotion: heartbreak.

It is in the forest that he meets Joe (Jude Law), a sex-robot on the run from the police. They are quickly caught and sent to a "Flesh Fair", where "mechas" (what humans call robots) are thrust into a Coliseum-like arena and destroyed in vicious ways by mecha-hating humans. They manage to escape and travel to Rouge City, a city of unutterable decadence and immorality, where David learns of the existence of the Blue Fairy, who can transform him into a real little boy, thus earning the love of his mother. (David feels a strong connection to the bed-time story Pinocchio, for obvious reasons, but since his child-like brain cannot distinguish between reality and fantasy, he thinks that the fairy tale is real.)

The Blue Fairy, he learns, exists in a forbidden place called Manhattan (which exists underwater, as the melted polar ice caps due to global warming have wiped out every major city along the world coasts.) So, he and Joe travel to the End of the World, as it is called, and it is there that David's quest ends.

I won't give away the ending, except to say that it is grand, moving, strange, surreal, incredible, sad, and beautiful—everything one would expect from a collaborative effort from Kubrick and Spielberg. Indeed, the film's ending makes references to both "2001: A Space Odyssey" (Kubrick's classic sci-fi epic that was a collaborative effort between him and Arthur C. Clarke, that is also, in my opinion, one of the best science fiction films ever made) and "Close Encounters of the Third Kind" (one of Spielberg's early films, and one of my personal favorites). There are also references to other great science fiction films, including Ridley Scott's "Blade Runner" and Kubrick's "A Clockwork Orange".

Haley Joel Osment ("The Sixth Sense", "Pay It Forward") proves, once and for all, that he is the most talented child actor in the world. He deftly brings David to life by a gradual process of humanization; from the clunky, mechanical movements when we first meet him, to the initial steps of learning human quirks such as laughing, to the revelatory moment when he discovers that true humanity transcends flesh and bone—or metal and plastic.

Despite the fact that the main character is a young boy (Osment was 12 years old when the film was made), the film is most definitely not for children under 13 (unless they are very very mature). Most children will find it too boring, too long (it has a running time of 140 minutes), and too disturbing in parts. Sadly, most adults will probably feel this way, too. Films of this ilk—those that are more intellectually stimulating and less reliant on flash-bang action—do not fare as well in the summer months, but one can never tell with Spielberg. The talented director of "Schindler's List", "Amistad", and "Saving Private Ryan", once made a small summer film called "E.T." that surprised everyone by becoming the biggest box-office hit of all time.

In "A.I.", Spielberg has created a wonderful masterpiece, both visually and emotionally, essentially about the love between a child and parent. Fans of good science fiction (a rarity in Hollywood) will love the film for its attention to scientific detail, its intelligent social commentary, and its heart-felt examination of technology's effects on humanity. But the film will especially strike a chord in those who look for films that explore the human condition in a realistic and interesting way. It will also strike a chord in anyone who has ever felt unloved, unwanted, and unable to "fit in" in the world—which is all of us, at some point.

mayed resident, Nancy Buescher, said she was very disappointed in the news of Lovece's resignation, and had her own thoughts on the reason. "I don't know what goes on behind closed doors, but I have to think it's because Stewart is a man of integrity," she said.

Lovece stays mum, but speculation swirls

Stewart Lovece is the second top employee to leave the city in 14 months. In May 2000, former Safety Service Director Dan Zirzow vacated his position, and former Ward 1 Councilman Jim Johnson was appointed to replace him.

Though Lovece declined to expand on his reasons for leaving, it's no secret that over the past several months, relations between the administration and the engineer have been strained over transactions with some North Ridgeville developers, in particular Frank Dettore and his most recent project, the Meadow Lakes Subdivision.

Several months ago Lovece began having concerns that Dettore had not obtained the proper permits from the Ohio Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) for installing sewer and water lines and on Oct. 25, 2000 sent a memo to Law Director Eric Zagrans regarding the Meadow Lakes Development. In it, the engineer stated, "The developer for the subject project (Meadow Lakes) intends to begin construction on sanitary sewers and the watermain. Neither of these proposed utilities have been approved by the Ohio EPA."

"I informed the developer not to install these utilities until a Developer's Agreement is in place with the appropriate Ohio EPA approvals..." Copies of the memo were forwarded to the Mayor and to Johnson.

On Nov. 2, 2000, Lovece also sent a memo to the Safety Service Director regarding Meadow Lakes, Phase I stating, "It is my understanding that the Developer has resumed the installation of their proposed sanitary sewer at the subject development after the developer has been directed to stop."

"I would recommend that the City of North Ridgeville order the developer to stop work on the installation of the sanitary sewer with consultation from the North Ridgeville Law Department." Copies of this memo were sent to the Mayor and the Law Director.

Engineer's advice ignored

Despite the engineer's warnings and requests for administrative support, it seemed that work continued on the development. A source close to the situation, who requested anonymity, said that Lovece was becoming uneasy about the impact that the lack of EPA permits for Meadow Lakes would have on his engineering license, and continued to request the work be halted.

This reporter questioned the Safety Service Director about stopping the development and was told on more than one occasion that "the city has no authority," in the situation and that the problem was between the developer and the EPA.

EPA gives notice of violation

On June 6 Charles Allen, environmental engineer with the OEPA Division of Surface Water sent a letter to Dettore's company, All Purpose Construction, advising that according to Ohio Revised Code, "the unauthorized installation of the sanitary sewers is subject to enforcement action...Such violations may be subject to payment of civil and/or stipulated penalties."

In addition Allen requested, "the issuance of all local permits for the development of the Meadow Lakes Subdivision Phase I be deferred until this Agency has issued a Permit To Issue for the sanitary sewers."

In a story about the mandate from the EPA in the June 13 issue of The Press & Light, Dettore seemed unconcerned about a possible penalty and was quoted as saying that he would "pay the fine and keep going." The developer also vowed to "charge a $100 million bond" if an injunction were issued to stop the work, and blamed the situation on a snafu with KS Associates, the Elyria firm doing the engineering for Meadow Lakes.

P&L story angers Mayor

The same story, as well as an editorial in that issue, related again the Safety Service Director's refusal to halt work at Meadow Lakes, insisting that the city couldn't stop Dettore.

When the June 13 newspaper hit the stands, Mayor Deanna Hill called the Press & Light to support Johnson's contention that the city does not have the authority to stop Dettore, and restated several times that this reporter does not "understand the process." At one point both Johnson and Lovece were introduced into the conversation, which was held via the Mayor's speakerphone.

Nearly two weeks later it was learned that still without benefit of an EPA permit, work had resumed at Meadow Lakes. The Press & Light placed another call to the EPA and learned that Allen determined the city does have the "jurisdiction" to demand Dettore stop the project until obtaining the proper permits.

After discussing the issue with Charles Allen, Kara Allison, of the EPA's public information center, stated that the situation was a "gray area," and while Dettore may do as he wishes with his own property, when he attempted to tie into the city's sewer, he was "trespassing."

Engineer cites another EPA violation

Lovece is presently embroiled in another brouhaha over the lack of an EPA permit, however this time it's with the Village of Sheffield and the French Creek Business Park Sheffield built off I-90, north of Detroit Road.

"They tied into our wastewater treatment plant without permission," Lovece said, "It's outrageous."

"They (Sheffield) owe us $2.2 million," he said, adding that he referred the situation to the law director. On June 16 Lovece notified the Ohio EPA that North Ridgeville did not give Sheffield permission to install the 15-inch sanitary sewer for the business park. He also stressed to the EPA that based on the anticipated gallons per day expected to flow to the French Wastewater Treatment Plant from the park, Sheffield owes the city a tap-in fee of $2,273,700.

On June 26 the EPA sent a letter to Sheffield Village Administrator Leo Sheets informing him "unauthorized installation of the sanitary sewers is subject to enforcement action."

Although Avon and Sheffield Village were invited to share ownership of the French Creek Plant with North Ridgeville 20 years ago, they declined and ever since North Ridgeville purchased the facility there have been occasional squabbles over money the two communities should pay to tie-in. However, Lovece said, "Avon has been more cooperative than Sheffield."

He said that what Sheffield did is "in total defiance" of the ordinances. "They can't play dumb regarding ordinances," said Lovece.

The engineer said he is having a Resident Project Representative (RPR) check on every sewer tap-in, adding, "Every gallon of sewage puts more of a burden on the plant."

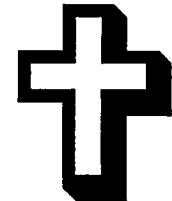

Obviously angry, Lovece said, "That business park could have been in our city."

Lovece moving on...but first

Despite his departure, Lovece said the unfinished projects would continue, such as the westerly sewer, which Lovece described as "ongoing," and the water tower, which is expected to be finished by November. Bainbridge Road is also "close" to completion, he said.

And though he has less than three weeks before he closes the North Ridgeville chapter of his professional life, Lovece continues to forge ahead in the time remaining and is excited about working with the Mayor to obtain $400,000 from the Ohio Public Works Commission to construct sewers along Center Ridge Road from Race Road west.

Though Lovece did not divulge his future plans, he said he is "open to various possibilities."
