

This Week:

Happy 4th of July

Celebrate Independence Day at South Central Park where the Patriot Band will play a rousing concert beginning at 8 p.m. The traditional fireworks by the North Ridgeville Fire Department will follow the show. There is still time to make a donation to the NRFD to help defray the expenses of the fireworks display.

Closings

City Hall will be closed on 4th of July, as well as the North Ridgeville Library, The Press & Light and many other places of businesses. For your convenience, call ahead before making a trip that day.

Trip to El Salvador

Join North Ridgeville Library Associate Laura St. Marie at the North Ridgeville Branch Library, July 2, as she shares her travel adventures from her missionary trip to the Central American country of El Salvador. The free children's program begins at 2 p.m.

Eucharistic Pilgrimage Planned

John and Kathy Mack invite anyone interested to join them in a Eucharistic Pilgrimage to Our Lady of Angels Monastery in Hanceville, Ala. From Aug. 13 to Aug. 17. Highlights include tickets to the Mother Angelica Live Show, a visit to EWTN Studios and spiritual talks. The approximate cost for travel and accommodations is $215 per person double occupancy/$315 for single occupancy for four nights and five days. For more information, call the Macks at 44-949-6064.

Red, white and blue have special meaning for Betty

By Carol Klear

NORTH RIDGEVILLE

Betty Baracskai's as American as mom and apple pie and if you don't believe it how about this — she was born on the 4th of July, began a 50-year stint with R.W. Beckett Corporation on Flag Day and loves the Cleveland Indians.

Last week, amid a sea of bobbing red, white and blue balloons, peanuts and Cracker Jacks, proclamations from city officials and a congressman, as well as a surprise visit from Bob Feller, Betty was honored at a picnic lunch on the company's front lawn in honor of her five decades of loyal service to Beckett. And it's doubtful the word "retirement" is even in her vocabulary. Company CEO John Beckett, sporting his Indians shirt and cap for the occasion, told 200 assorted office and plant workers, special guests and relatives that when Betty, just 17, started working for the firm Beckett's was located in Elyria, a short walk from her house. "I was not quite a teen," he said, "but I remember her happy smile." Throughout her years at Beckett, Betty became known as the "Grammar Czar" a tribute to her amazing vocabulary and spelling skills. Looking back 50 years to 1951, Beckett recalled that Harry Truman was president, gasoline was 20 cents a gallon, a new car was just $1,800, CBS had introduced color television and the best movie was "An American in Paris."

When Betty began, she was primarily secretarial, said Beckett, but she also worked in customer service and payroll.

On June 14, 1981, he said they celebrated Betty's 30th anniversary with Beckett. "No one in history had worked there that long except dad," he said, and he completed 28 years in 1965. Remembering the 30th anniversary, Beckett said they read a poem about Betty, that concluded with the prophetic question, "...is it possible she'll hit 2001?"

With less than eight weeks to complete their task, the Charter Review Committee made quick work of the issue of term limits for the mayor and took less than a half hour to decide unanimously that the city's highest elected office should not be restricted to two terms. However, members may consider reducing the present four-year term to two years.

Chairman Dick Noll explained that the rationale behind the two-term limit was to deter "professional politicians." Noll quashed what he termed "innuendo," about abolishing the number of terms the mayor can serve and said that being a former mayor, his goal in amending the charter is to "provide for a better government."

There have been murmurings that Mayor Deanna Hill wanted to pave the way for another run at the office by ridding the charter of the two-term stipulation.

Bill Comerford agreed with Noll. "If we get a qualified mayor, I'm not in favor of limiting to two terms," he said. "There are no term limits for council, it's not good for the city."

Pastor Bill Shomo said, "If we have a good mayor, they should have the opportunity to run."

Nancy Buescher said that though she has no problem with eliminating the two-term provision, she asked the group to consider changing the number of years in the term from four to two.

State Rep. Jeffrey Manning (R-North Ridgeville) stressed that his stay in Columbus is limited to eight years. "It's not a job for life," he said.

Manning also cautioned against putting the issue on the ballot in November, calling it the "worst time with a sitting mayor," stressing it will be known as the "Deanna Hill amendment. Councilwoman Gail Minnick R-4 asked the committee to consider amending the section to begin with the next elected mayor. Noll warned the committee against making the term limits discussion a personal issue, but rather consider its impact on the city. He also said that if the mayor wants to run again, Council could put it on the ballot without benefit of a Charter Review Committee. Though the issue of multi-family dwellings had been introduced for the committee's review, it was suggested that due to its complexity, it should be tabled until the next Charter Review Committee convenes. The committee also touched briefly on the ... issue of partisan politics, with Noll providing the historical data that when North Ridgeville became a city, the 15-member Charter Committee voted 8-7 for partisanship. "It's not something that's clear cut," he said. Before concluding its first session, the committee set two sub-committees - one to study the charter's section on the council president and the other to examine two portions referring to the parks director. The members are expected to present their conclusions at the July 9 meeting.

Due to the July 4th holiday, the Lorain County General Health District has cancelled the Child Immunization Clinic normally scheduled for the first Wednesday of the month at the Health District office.

The Lorain County Junior Fair Board will host the annual Tractor Pull, July 8 at the Lorain County Fairgrounds in Wellington. Admission is $3 for adults and free for children 12 and under. Weigh-in starts at 8 a.m. The pulling begins at 11 a.m.

Animals At The Library??

You read right. On July 9, the Animal Guys and their live, rescued animals will be at the North Ridgeville Branch Library at 2 p.m. During this free summer program you will see an iguana, an alligator, a hedgehog, a tarantula and other animals.

John Beckett reminded--the group that someone else made a debut at 17, but his mark was in the world of baseball — specifically Indians baseball and on April 16, 1940, Bob Feller, No. 19, pitched the first no-hitter on opening day at Comiskey Park against the Chicago White Sox. He joined the U.S. Navy, where he was a gunner on the U.S. Alabama. When he returned to baseball, Feller enjoyed an 18-year career with the Indians, and became "baseball's biggest drawing card." Feller was inducted into the Baseball Hall of Fame in 1962.

On April 10 the Planning Commission postponed a decision on the sewer project for further review, and on May 8 Marsico requested that action be delayed until June 12. During the June 12 session planners approved the proposal with "contingencies," but when it got to Council June 18, the legislators voted to table it.

At that time Councilman Dave Gillock said he could not vote on the application until he discussed it with Lovece and heard the city engineer's ideas on what is best for the city.

Planning Commission member Paul Butkowski also expressed some concerns at the May 8 meeting, in particular concerning the EPA approval for the project, however Haywood assured him that Marsico would obtain the prop-

At the June 12 meeting Haywood said they had circulated petitions and though some residents "were interested," there were not enough to satisfy requirements. "What can vide information," said Gillock. we do to get a sewer to the Marsico property?" Haywood asked, then suggested the commission approve a temporary sewer line with the promise that Marsico would pay his proportionate share and abandon the sewer line under Case Road when the city sewer is available to his property.

Gillock said that 60 percent of the property owners are required for the petition and since the signatures had not been certified "we don't know if we have 60 percent or not." Haywood said that all property owners had been approached, but "less than 60 percent signed."

Leroy Meermans of 5255 Case Rd. said that he is surrounded by developers and he has heard it would cost $60 per foot for the sewer line and then double that for both sides of the street.

To that proposal Meermans said, "No way."

Lovece disagreed with the price quote, but Meermans said the petition stated it would cost $55 to $60 per foot. Haywood said he got the prices from Avon, which included the cost of inspection.

Lovece said that according to North Ridgeville's ordinance the tap-in is not based on frontage, but rather is a flat fee of $4,200 for a single-family residence. With assessment, he said, the interceptor portion would be waived. The cost

The discussion concluded, Gillock made a motion, with a second by Olesen, to grant approval to the project contingent on the fact that all efforts to take the sewer down Case Road had been exhausted. The commission approved the motion 3 to 1 with Paul Butkowski dissenting.

When the issue went to the June 18 Council meeting, Councilwoman Gail Minnick, R-4, said she felt there were too many loose ends to approve Marsico's proposal, but Gillock insisted that the Planning Commission had to make a decision, "one way or another."

Councilwoman Bernadine Butkowski, R at-large, asked if there were a timeline for a decision.

Gillock said that he thought all landowners in that area had been contacted and that support for a sewer line wasn't there.

EDITOR'S NOTEBOOK Let's toss some bouquets and briquets

By Carol Klear

The past couple of weeks Editor's Notebook has concentrated on conflicts, and though one good conflict sometimes breeds another, we decided to step away from that arena for today and revert back to something we haven't done for a long. long time — tossing verbal "Bouquets and Briquets." For those of you new to The P&L, a while ago we started sending out quick compliments or criticisms, using seasonal tools.

Since it's summer and flowers are in bloom and backyard cookouts are in full swing, we'll fling a few Bouquets and Briquets to people, places or things in North Ridgeville that caught our wandering eyes.

A couple of things have come up in our city lately that prompts me to write. I have concerns for civil liberties, mainly privacy, and concern that the spirit of Ohio Public Records law is being seriously violated by the present government of our city.

A dangerous situation is being set up in North Ridgeville; perusing the latest issue of the Press and Light (June 20), I read a story about the North Ridgeville Fire Department getting a new "thermal imaging camera." The story also referenced the fact that the North Ridgeville Police Department would

The subject of such a camera had come up in the past, at several committee meetings and at least one council meeting. At some point, several months back, I contacted councilpersons Gail Minnick and Bernadine Butkowski, and voiced my concerns that such a device, while wonderful new technology that could be put to use for good works, also had a serious downside. It would allow the operator - fireman, policeman, building department inspector, whatever - to "see through walls" into homes and other buildings, raising serious privacy concerns, particularly as impacted by the Fourth Amendment to the United States constitution and our own Ohio Bill of Rights, Article I. Section 14, (virtually identical to the Federal Fourth Amendment): "The right of the people to be secure in their persons, houses, papers and possessions, against unreasonable searches and seizures shall not be violated; and no warrant shall issue, but upon probable cause, supported by oath or affirmation, particularly describing the place to be searched and the person and things to chief, Rick Miller, had assured her that only the fire department would have access to this device and that it was only for finding people or animals in burning buildings, and for finding "hot spots" after the fire was out, I was assured, as apparently was Butkowski, that the Police Department would have no access to this device, and therefore there should be no concerns regarding the police department's use of it. Then I read the story in the current issue of the Press & Light. I have contacted Ms. Butkowski, and she had told me that she will "recheck" with Fire Chief Rick Miller, but it surely seems to me that in the past he misled her to get a "yes" vote on purchasing this infrared imaging device.

My concerns about the use of this thing are not in a vacuum; on June 11, 2001, the United States Supreme Court addressed this precise issue, in the case Danny Lee Kyllo v. United States (2001), 533 U.S., and in a concise opinion written by Justice Antonin Scalia, he and four of his colleagues found that the use of such a device (a "thermal imaging" device in the case) was in fact an unconstitutional search of Kyllo's home. Federal agents in Oregon had used such a device to determine that Kyllo probably was growing drug plants in his home, and based on the device's "reading" of the inside of the house, a "raid" was conducted. In fact, Kyllo was growing marijuana in the home, and his conviction was upheld through the appeals court level, but the Supreme Court reversed.

In the decision, Scalia notes that the facts were that "the scan of Kyllo's home took only a few minutes and was performed from the passenger seat of Agent Elliot's vehicle across the street from the front of lawyers in the area who either were or are

"check on it." Sure enough, Ms. Butkowski the house and also from the street in back of got back to me and advised me that our fire the house." (Kyllo at page 2) Scalia also wrote, ""To withdraw protection of this minimum expectation [of privacy in the home] would be to permit police technology to erode the privacy guaranteed by the Fourth Amendment. We think that obtaining by sense-enhancing technology any information regarding the interior of the home that could not otherwise have been obtained without physical 'intrusion into a constitutionally protected area' (cite omitted) constitutes a search This assures preservation of that degree of privacy against government that existed when the Fourth Amendment was adopted."

Strong stuff. It requires that before any police officer or other government agent uses such a device, that they obtain a search warrant. Are you willing to bet your and your family's constitutionally protected privacy that your police department would always get a warrant before using this neat little camera (thermal imaging device) to "peek" in your house to see how many people are in there, or what room you're in at any given time, or whatnot. I don't. I want some controls on the use of this thing, like an ordinance that strictly limits the use (and users) of this machine to the fire department, and to fires. I don't want the police department near it.

Ohio's Public Records Law

The same issue of the Press & Light revealed a story I also found disturbing. Apparently, law director Eric Zagrans is attempting to convince the council (and somehow protected by "attorney client priv- it of them. ilege." I've run this assertion past several municipal law directors and the kindest word that has come to any of them to describe such a characterization is "ridiculous.'

I don't want, nor do I intend, to make this a "legal brief," but suffice it to say that there s no support in the legal community, nor in the case law, for the supposition that the amount of time a lawyer, any lawyer, not just a law director on the public payroll, spends on a particular case is privileged. Now, the specifics that the lawyer worked on, like the type of research, or who he had a meeting with, and such information, might be protected; but the idea that the amount of timed billed to what case is protected is simply ludicrous and doesn't even pass the giggle test.

I would expect, that under Ohio Public Records Law, one should be able to contact the auditor and receive copies of itemized billing by both the law director and any outside counsel he should engage. This would mean, to me, that one could see, for example, "2.2 hours on June 12, 2001, the case City of North Ridgeville v. Crobaugh, et.al." (That case exists, by the way.) Anyway, that's the kind of billing that other law directors do, what's wrong with demanding that ours does the same. Ohio Public Records law is clear on the subject, and the statute is backed up by voluminous case law. What our law director reportedly said to Gillock is outrageous. There is nothing about the number of hours billed to the citizens of North Ridgeville by Eric Zagrans or any other lawyer or law firm that is "protected." Nothing. And you should be outraged by such a sham going on in your city government.

It's time - past time - to force this administration to operate in sunlight, and in accordance with the law and our charter. They demand it of you and me, and you have not presumably the city) that billing records are only the right, but also the duty, to demand

However, she readily admits the operation of a day care center like Kids Corner is much more complex and thoroughly scrutinized and licensed by the state for youngsters' protection.

The administrator with the ready smile and comfortable conversation showed off Kids Corner with gentle, but obvious pride, explaining that children from infants six weeks old all the way to 5-year-old boys and girls may be part of the full day care program, while the summer program offers a safe haven for children from kindergarten to middle school.

Unlike many others, North Ridgeville's Kimberly Hensel has always kept her life on track.

As a youngster at St. Peter Elementary School she excelled in track and kept her grades on the honor roll, as well.

When she went on to Magnificat High School in Rocky River, Hensel vaulted into academics and extra curricular with such verve, she earned a track scholarship to Youngstown State University.

The young woman's vitality and prowess soared at YSU, and as a freshman she earned not only a four-year United States Army Reserve Officers Training Corps (ROTC) Scholarship, won the Nunziato Scholarship for academics, as well.

As a member of the Western Reserve Battalion, Hensel served as the executive officer and was a member of the Ranger Challenge Team. She was on the 2001 Women's Outdoor Track and Field roster at Youngstown, and she also earned a scholarship with the YSU cheerleading team and performed as a hepathlete on the university's track team.

On May 19, Hensel was commissioned as a second lieutenant in the Army. She received her BA degree in human resource to Fort Bragg, NC management and on and May 30 went on active duty in support of the ROTC

Kids Corner, a safe, warm and loving place for children

By Carol Klear

Many infants and children spend some part of their lives in day care centers, and a new one opened less than a month ago in North Ridgeville — Kids Corner of Ohio, 34899 Lorain Rd. — with Valerie Guy and Nancy Neece, administrators of the child-

During fall and winter months, Kids Corner opens at 6 a.m. and cares for children until 6 p.m., while summer hours are from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m., however, Guy said, if necessary, adjustments can be made "to accommodate parents."

The center also offers before and after school care, she said and arrangements have been made with the North Ridgeville City Schools to drop off or pick up children for school at the facility.

Leaving their children in the care of others is an "adjustment" for parents, said Guy, and they are happiest when they know their children are happy and content.

A leaflet as colorful as the day care center itself explains the Kids Corner philosophy: "It is our intent to provide an atmosphere that enable all children to grow socialy, emotionally, physically and intellectually n a warm and caring environment.

We accept each child as a unique individual and are committed to assisting that child to develop at his or her own rate of maturity.

Safety is a prime concern at the center and even the door from the reception room to the interior part of the center may be opened only through an electronic handheld device.

Guy explained that a number of requirements are placed on the center, including licensing through the Ohio Department of Human Services, inspection by the Board of Health, the North Ridgeville Fire Department and the Building Department The Department of Human Services also requires a plan of operation, said Guy.

IN THE SPORTLIGHT A big Pick 3 payout at Northfield

By Jerry D. Dudek

I can never remember a time when, looking at the tote board at the race track, I didn't wonder out loud who that lucky so and so was that hit the big trifecta.

I'm talking about four figure payoffs, not some lousy hundred dollar trifecta.

At first I thought that the big winners at the track were like the big winners of the lottery --- you had to spend a lot (and lose a lot) to win a lot. People who tell me they always win in the lottery or in Las Vegas or that they have a system to beat the odds, well, I question their veracity. It never happens to me---except for one time.

A little more than a year ago, after a small spat with the misses, I decided to head east toward Northfield Park for a Friday night of harness racing. I used to own standardbreds before I was married, cheap claimers, nothing more, but it was exciting being a "horseman". The only inside information I ever received was from my trainer and driver, but he was only right a small fraction of the time. Since 1986, when I got married (we celebrated 15 years last Thursday), I have been out of the horseracing business. I never was that good of an owner and probably a worse bettor. But I liked the sport and the excitement of it and periodically, went to the track as if I really knew the outcome of a race before it took place.

It took me dozens of trips to Northfield Park to realize that horses race much differently on a half-mile track than a 5/8th mile track. There are no late closers on a half-mile track and to win, horses not only have to be fit, but drivers have race strategically as well.

It was in the spring of 2000, on a damp March evening that I decided to go to Northfield Park. I took the turnpike because I missed my turnoff on I-480. I got to the park with about $60 in my pocket. I got there by the second race, bet $2 on the favorite, watched him finish fifth, buried the whole mile and never making a move or getting a call.

I have difficulty picking the winner of one race, but for some reason, I decided to bet the Pick 3 in the third, fourth and fifth race. That bet requires one to pick all three winners in those races. I looked at the program, actually studied it for a few minutes and circled the four horse in the third race, the seven horse in the fourth race and the nine horse in the fifth race. None of the horses were favorites in the program and none ended up being favorites by the betting public. A knew the breeder of the No. 4 horse--it was sired by Overcomer, a trotter owned by the father of one of my former tennis players at Berlin Hiland High School. The horse went off at odds of seven-to-one, although when I bet my 4-7-9 Pick 3, the horse was actually even odds. I would usually bet on the horse to win just in case he wins but I don't have the winners in the fourth and fifth race, but at even odds, I wasn't betting on him. Sure enough, he not only wins, but by seven lengths and pays $16 to win.

Well, I thought, there's good news and bad news---I've got the first part of the Pick 3, but I could have been $16 richer if I bet on him to win.

As the fourth race got nearer, I looked at the odds and saw the No. 7 horse at 12-to-1 odds. Not wanting to change my luck, I decided I wasn't going to bet on him straight to win. He fired out of the gate, got the lead easily and led until just past the half-mile mark. He was quickly passed, and stayed second until the short stretch drive. Up the rail he came and won by a head. The pay out: $26 to win.

Great, I thought. I've picked two winners, both fairly long shots, but haven't cashed a ticket. Unless the No. 9 horse won, all of my earlier prognosticating would be for naught. The fifth race would either make me the happiest man alive, or the most miserable. That latter seemed more likely.

As the fifth race approached, I felt myself going through a routine --- a trip to the bar for a microbrew (Crimson Colt is my favorite), and then a trip to the men's room, where I would pick the urinal of my choice. That's right, the No. 4 urinal in the third race, the No. 7 urinal in the fourth race and the No. 9 urinal in the fifth race.

I got more nervous as post time for the fifth race approached. Payoffs for the Pick 3 were posted and I was uncertain of whether I could handle the dejection of the No. 9 horse not finishing under the wire first.

Please, I said to myself and mentally to the driver, please give him a chance to win. As I looked up at the tote board, my horse, Albert's Filly, was listed at 12-to-1 odds. Well, I thought, the bettors didn't give my other two winners a chance, maybe that's a good omen.

But I was nervous, more nervous than I have ever been before. More nervous than when I got married, and more nervous than when my children were born.

Albert's Filly, who was owned by someone I knew when I lived in Willard, Ohio, got out of the gate fourth, a good position the first time around the track. But at a half-mile track, positioning and strategic driving is everything. In a matter of seconds, the driver has to know whether to pull his horse to the outside in an attempt to win and risk tiring him out early, or let him sit at the rail to finish third or fourth and still get a prize check. Albert's Filly watched the horse ahead of him pull to the outside and quickly went with cover, a perfect move. The race was shaping up as I had hoped. My horse was in the flow and was getting a good trip. Just as I held hope beyond hope that my horse would win, another horse came up beside of him on the outside, three-wide. It appeared that my horse would either be boxed in or passed at the three quarter mark, but the norse on his outside tired a bit and my horse decided it was time to go threewide around the slowing horses in front of him Albert's Filly was successful in maneuvering to the lead and led at the top of the stretch. Even though Northfield Park has a short stretch, it seems very, very long when your horse is in the lead. The horses came down to the 16th pole and I couldn't bear to watch. I couldn't bear to listen to the announcer. As the horses came under the wire, I though I heard Albert's Filly's name called.

"Did the nine horse win?" I asked no one in particular. "Yes, the nine horse won," someone said in disgust. I went back to the bar, got another beer and waited for the results to be posted. Sure enough, Albert's Filly had won and I had the Pick 3. With just a $2 bet, and that was all I bet during those three races, I won $2,259.80! Yes, I had to sign for it and eventually,

Uncle Sam took his share but the thrill of having successfully picked three races in a row (I wasn't just playing numbers) was almost better than the money itself.

There have been other successes at the race track since then, (and lots of failures) but I don't if anything will ever top that experience. I knew what it was like being one of those "lucky" bettors to

Brothers Coughlin hope to take volleyball team to new heights

By Jerry D. Dudek

New North Ridgeville girls volleyball coach Brian Coughlin said it isn't coaching that wins Pioneer Conference championships---it's discipline, confidence and effort.

The 29-year-old Medina man knows something about winning a league championship, he did it last year with Brunswick High School. In fact, in the three years that Coughlin was the head volleyball coach, he took a sub-.500 team and produced a record of 50-21.

Last year, Brunswick was 12-2 in the conference and 19-7 overall. In two of the last three years, the Lady Blue Devils have won their Sectional.

Although he hasn't announced a timetable for success at North Ridgeville, Coughlin is confident that his players will have the drive and focus to succeed.

leading hitter doesn't want the ball when the will "hit it hot and heavy," Coughlin said. score is 14-14, then you are in big trouble."

Ridgeville with his older brother Kelly, who it means to win. was a volleyball assistant at Brunswick. The years, first Brian was Kelly's assistant, then level because we know what it looks like." Kelly, because of family obligations and time constraints, became Brian's assistant coach.

"We've always worked well together and have a good relationship," Brian said.

Coughlin coached at Brunswick, but he didn't teach there so he knew the coaching job was tentative at best. He has been looking for a new coaching position and heard a rumor that something might be opening up at North Ridgeville. The rumors were true, Ilona Erossy resigned her coaching position and Coughlin was hired.

Coughlin attends classes at the University of Akron and is a part-time salesman. He spent four years in the U.S. Navy and when he got out, began coaching at Brunswick, where he is a graduate.

Although he's not predicting immediate success, Coughlin said he likes what he sees so far in North Ridgeville.

I think there is a ton of talent in North Ridgeville and the girls have good mindsets. They seem real eager to do it. It's a matter of us telling them and showing them how to win and let them go at it," Coughlin said. At Brunswick, Coughlin went with a quick tempo on offense with about 60 percent of the hits coming from the middle position. He is confident that the Lady Rangers have the players to run a similar, quick hit attack, which is tough to defend. "We have the hitters and the setters to pull it off," he said. CTS WEBTREX

CTS WEBTREX, is a web development company that helped the North Ridgeville Chamber of Commerce design its website and did so far below market value.

The majority of customers of WEBTREX do not live in North Ridgeville; in fact many reside outside Ohio. The Internet is not going away and people will soon realize the importance of having a website, according to the company.

Since the company is operated out of a residence in Westlake, the question of physical improvements does not apply.

The company advertises on the Net along with newspaper and trade magazines. There is also a link to the North Ridgeville Chamber of Commerce on the WEBTREX

First Federal of Lakewood

First Federal of Lakewood was founded in 1935 and is a community-oriented savings and loan with financial strength and integrity. The North Ridgeville branch is located on Center Ridge Rd. at the intersection of Pitts Blvd. In addition to serving customers in North Ridgeville, the company has a large base in eastern Lorain County.

The institution has been involved in many community activities including Junior Achievement, Safetyville and Junior Banking.

Many of its customers come from outside North Ridgeville.

The savings and loan contributes many door prizes to community events, as well as sponsoring First Time Home Buyer Seminars and Junior Achievement.

The building has been upgraded with a new sign on the front of the building recently and a new time and temperature sign last year. The landscaper used is from North Ridgeville.

North Ridgeville is promoted through local advertising and through trade magazines and trade events.

The Northridge Health Center

The Northridge Health Center is located at 35990 Westminister Ave. and is a health care facility that provides the services of nurses, assistants, therapists, licensed social workers and more.

In the past year the facility has sponsored programs concerning organ donations and transplants, diabetic management and menu planning, osteoporosis, and fall prevention in the home, and bereavement care. Political candidates were also provided a forum at the facility

The staff has participated in the Corn Festival and Chamber of Commerce fundraisers.

Northridge Health Center serves many clients both in North Ridgeville and the greater Cleveland area. The managers and leaders of the facility are active in several organizations, including North Ridgeville Rotary, Ohio Health Care Association, National Association of Society Workers and the National American Music Therapy Association.

The interior of the center has been redecorated and signage was updated.

The facility is marketed in many areas, including trade shows, through newspaper ads and job fairs.

Press-Light Wednesday, June 27, 2001 RHEEL RHEEVIEWS 'Shrek': the feel-good film of the year, especially for ogres

By Scott Rhee

I have always felt that if Hollywood put Mike Myers and Eddie Murphy in a film together, it would be a sure-fire hit, and of course, I was right.

"Shrek", directed by Andrew Adamson and Vicky Jenson, brings these two enormously talented comedians together for one of the best films of the summer season, and perhaps the best feel-good film of the year. It may be silly children's fare, but you'd have to be a heartless cretin not to find something to love in this film.

The second computer-animated feature length film for DreamWorks Ltd. (the first being the excellent 1998 "Antz", featuring Woody Allen and Sharon Stone), "Shrek" is a contemporary fairy tale with a beautiful moral that the Brothers Grimm would have approved of.

Shrek (the voice of Mike Myers) is a big, lovable green ogre that lives a private existence in his home deep in the forest. His choice of living alone, we learn, stems less from a misanthropic worldview than the simple fact that he's tired of striking terror in the hearts of everyone he encounters. It can be a big blow to your self-esteem when everyone thinks of you as a horrible ugly beast, so he decides to avoid the hassle by living away from people. It is, unfortunately for him, a very lonely existence.

That is, until he comes home one day to find three blind mice eating his food, seven unhappy dwarves with a dead girl in a glass casket on his dining room table ("No! Dead girl off the table!"), and a wolf dressed like a grandmother sleeping in his bed. There's also the little puppet boy who insists he's human, a little blonde girl and a family of three bears, and a talking donkey named, strangely enough. Donkey (the voice of Eddie Murphy).

As it turns out, the very short Lord Farquaad (the voice of John Lithgow) has evicted all the magical fairy tale creatures from the kingdom for the very simple reason that he's just a mean jerk. Suddenly overrun by these fairy tale refugees, Shrek decides to go to Lord Farquaad's castle to see if he can do anything to get the creatures off his land.

3 lbs. Sausage

Only $185.00

Joining him is the irrepressible blabbermouth Donkey, whose impressiveness, as Shrek points out, "isn't the fact that he talks-the trick is getting him to shut up!"

In order to get rid of the fairy tale creatures, Shrek has been commissioned to go on a quest to save the lovely Princess Fiona (the voice of Cameron Diaz), who is stuck in the tower of a castle guarded by a firebreathing dragon. Of all the eligible bachelorettes (Cinderella and Snow White being the other two), Fiona is the one that Farquaad picks to be his wife.

So, Shrek and Donkey head off on their quest to save Fiona, which they successfully complete. Along they way, of course, Shrek and Fiona fall in love, messing the whole plan up. (There is also the matter of Fiona's little secret, a witty little plot twist that I won't disclose.)

Several things make this film great. The most important-and probably least credited-element in the film is the animators. Thanks to the ever-growing technological advances in computer-generated animation, the creatures and people that populate "Shrek" are brought to amazing cinematic life. While they are still cartoon-like representations of people, the technology enables each character in the film to have their own visual style, their own facial expressions, and their own personality.

Of course, hand in hand with what is on the screen are the people off-screen, provid-

You're a Grand Old Flag

You'll see this and many more beautifully staged musical numbers in Carousel Dinner Theatre's current production of "George M!" playing now through July 8. ing the voices. Like "Antz", "Shrek" provides an amazing array of talents.

Myers and Murphy work extremely well together in cartoon form. (I still look forward to seeing them together in a liveaction film, the result being one of the funniest movies ever made, I predict.) Myers chooses to give Shrek a Scottish accent, kind of a distant relative to his SNL character, the angry Scotsman ("If it's not Scottish, it's crap!"), and Fat Bastard from "Austin Powers 2: The Spy Who Shagged Me". The effect is wacky, surreal, and hilarious.

Murphy's hyperactive Donkey is a perfect complement to Shrek's laid-back, slightly angry-ogre straight man. The two are a kind of animated (in more ways than one) Abbott and Costello, or Martin and Lewis. Murphy manages to steal the show more than once.

Lithgow, with his Shakespearean baritone, is completely hilarious as the midget king with the big head, and Diaz, with her sweet girl-next-door sexiness, is perfect as Fiona.

The other important element is the film's witty script, written by a handful of writers, based on a book by William Steig. The film cleverly makes pop cultural references to "WWF Wrestling", "The Dating Game", and "The Matrix", and viciously parodies DreamWorks' competitor in animation, Disney. (Lord Farquaad's castle has a striking resemblance to another rather famous castle, and instead of a moat, the castle is surrounded by an enormous parking lot with color-coded signs reading "You are in Lancelot section". There are even people walking around the castle grounds wearing Farquaad costumes.)

All the while, the film manages to interject some very funny adult humor, which will, thankfully, go over the heads of kids. In one scene, Shrek and Donkey come across Farquaad's castle, which is extraordinarily tall, and Shrek mutters, "It looks like he's compensating for something." I laughed hysterically, but the kids in the audience had no clue why

"Shrek" also boasts a wonderful little message: inner beauty is a lot more important than physical beauty. In a superficial world, where it seems that good looks mean everything, it is refreshing and nice to see a film espouse substance over surface.

Okay, the film is technically brilliant, the acting is wonderful, the screenplay is hysterical, and it even has a good moral. You could almost say it's a perfect summer movie. Oh, what the Shrek-it is a perfect summer movie

How do North Ridgeville students stack up?

During the June 19 School Board meeting, Assistant Superintendent Larry Bowersox presented charts comparing the Ohio Proficiency Test grades of 4th, 6th, 9th and 12th grade students in the North Ridgeville School District against state expectations. The lighter shade represents the school district, while the darker one represents the state.

Cut out the drags

A police officer heading west clocked a Ford Mustang doing 91 mph in a 65 zone going east on Rt. 10 around noon, June 16. The cop turned the crossover and tried to catch up to the driver who by this time had gotten off 10 and was still speeding along Lorain Rd. going east. Thanks to a tractor-trailer in front of the Ford, the driver started slowing down and the policeman flashed his emergency lights and pulled the speeder over. The driver, who lives in Elyria, couldn't produce a driver's license and thought he left his wallet at home. As the officer patted him down, he asked if the subject had anything illegal on him. At first he said he didn't think so, then admitted he had a pipe in his pocket, which the officer discovered had what he suspected to be burnt marijuana in it. After settling the subject in the police cruiser, the officer searched the car and found two plastic bags with suspected marijuana - one with 2.2 grams and the other 5.7 grams.

The subject was taken to the station and cited for speeding, possession of drug paraphernalia and possession of mariiuana.

After talking to the male suspect, who said he had been shopping with his cousin, police put him into the cruiser. Put out the fire When firefighters arrived on Chaucer Avenue they found a small cooking fire, inside a fire pit with cement blocks around the perimeter. They issued a verbal warning no permit, no fire.

Mother Nature got on her high horse last Wednesday, it seems, sending firefighters on two storm-related runs between 5:40 p.m. and 9:15 p.m. causing an alarm to malfunction at North Ridgeville High School and sending a pine tree onto a cable TV wire on Reed Road. There was no damage and the cable company was called.

Giant Eagle. She blamed the man for the whole thing. Checking the trunk of the car, police found it full of unbagged groceries. When they handcuffed the female suspect, the man yelled from the cruiser that he was responsible for the whole thing.

The two were transported to the police station, while Giant Eagle employees went to the scene bagged the groceries and the manager took them back to the store, where they were scanned, photographed and released to the store.

An employee told police that she became suspicious when the man entered and left the store several times without groceries.

At the police station the female suspect related that she and the 20-ish man, both from Cleveland, came to North Ridgeville to visit the man's ex-girlfriend. Then they went to McDonald's. While the woman ate, the man took her car and supposedly went back to the girlfriend's. A half hour later he picked the suspect up and they went to Giant Eagle so he could buy some aspirin, but when he came out of the store 20 minutes later he was empty-handed. When she saw some employees follow him out of the store the woman said she thought that maybe he did something illegal. She told police she knew there was some stuff in the car, but she didn't know it was groceries, but admitted that whatever it was it was stolen.
