

Keep Winter Park Beautiful Recognizes Brasfield & Gorrie

Keep Winter Park Beautiful, a voluntary board of the city of Winter Park, adopted a five-fold mission to beautify, conserve resources, recycle, educate and preserve. Encouraging clean and safe job sites is one of their goals. To this end KWPB recognizes contractors/builder and rewards outstanding performances at construction/renovation sites by recognizing efforts beyond mere code compliance.

Sean Sweeney, project manager, and Richard Bailey, project superintendent representing Brassfield & Gorrie accepted the award for the St. Margaret Mary Church Family Life Center. KWPB chairman, Susan Roberts, presented the sizable location-specific red sign and glass plaque recognizing their contribution to a clean and safe Winter Park to the regional general contractor in June.

Brasfield & Gorrie is a Forbes 500 company with offices in Birmingham, Atlanta, Nashville, Orlando, and Raleigh. Engineering News Record ranks the firm 47th among the nation's Top 400 Contractors based on their annual contract awards.

Keep Winter Park Beautiful not only encourages clean and safe construction sites but encourages all contractors and builders to identify recycling or donating opportunities for excess construction materials. We need to remember that nationwide our landfills are comprised of 30-50 percent of construction materials.

The nominating process for this recognition is simple. KWPB will work with code enforcement of the city in identifying general contractor/builders eligible for the award. Nominations from the public or contractors/builders who might wish to be considered may be made during the initial phase of construction/renovation. Red flyers/nominating forms may be picked up at the permit and licensing desk in city hall or at the Park and Recreation Department at 151 W. Lyman. When a nomination is received, KWPB will conduct two evaluations of the site. The evaluations will be reviewed and the winners selected.
