

Board: Firefighters used to watch X-rated movies

WINTER PARK — Winter Park firefighters have watched X-rated videotapes at the fire department over the years, but the practice was infrequent and has been stopped, an investigation by the city's Civil Service Board found Tuesday.

The investigation was prompted by a February letter from a local lawyer that said firefighters had watched pornographic movies on duty and that such a practice subjected female employees to sexual harassment.

In a report to the board Tuesday, Winter Park Public Safety Director Jim Younger said such videotapes were shown in the department. He said the practice was longstanding, but infrequent, with the most recent showing of an X-rated movie between eight and 15 months ago.
