BNP PARIBAS

CELEBRATING OVER 40 YEARS WITH TENNIS

On behalf of our 185,000 global employees, BNP Paribas is honored to welcome you to the 2016 BNP Paribas Open in Indian Wells, California. This tournament, which is known as the most-attended WTA Premier and ATP World Tour tournament in the world, promises to be a truly remarkable event.

Having sponsored the event for eight years, it is the unique honor of BNP Paribas to bring together the world's best tennis players during this annual competition.

Today, BNP Paribas is the world's largest sponsor of tennis, having partnered with the sport for 43 years. This longstanding commitment of the Bank is on par with our dedication to our clients, employees and shareholders. Beginning with the French Open at Roland Garros, the Bank sponsors many international competitions, including the Davis Cup, the Fed Cup, as well as the Bank of the West Classic and the BNP Paribas Showdown here in the USA.

For fans, the Bank also launched wearetennis.com five years ago, to provide them with live coverage and behind-the-scenes access to the game. This year, the Bank launched the We Are Tennis Fan Academy, captained by John McEnroe. The Fan Academy provides fans the opportunity to bring their passion to tournaments and competitions throughout the world.

This is also, the inaugural year of the BNP Paribas Open Scholarship, which provides two college scholarships to Coachella Valley High School student tennis players.

Having been in the United States for nearly 150 years, BNP Paribas boasts nearly 20,000 employees across North and South America, with the region being a key hub for the Bank's global network that spans 74 countries. Within the United States, we offer Bank's core businesses, including Corporate and Institutional Banking and International Financial Services. California is also headquarters to our retail subsidiary BancWest, which includes Bank of the West and First Hawaiian Bank. Through both, we provide personal, commercial, wealth management, across our 650 branches in 25 states and U.S. Territories.

2016 promises to be a truly fantastic year at the BNP Paribas Open, and a true demonstration of athleticism, perseverance and sportsmanship.

Raymond Moore

Dear Tennis Fans,

Welcome back to the 2016 BNP Paribas Open!

We are thrilled to inform you that for the second consecutive year we have had the honor of being voted the Best Tournament of the Year (2014 and 2015)—voted by just the players. Yes, this is a players' only vote and we are humbled and delighted to share this award with you, our fans, who for many years have been supporting the event and making these two weeks a big part of your life.

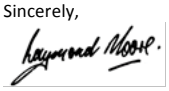

To kick off the 2016 tournament—which will be highlighted by the strongest field of players in 15 years—I am so pleased to welcome back Venus Williams. In addition, we welcome back the best in the world: Serena Williams, Roger Federer, Rafael Nadal, Andy Murray, Maria Sharapova, Caroline Wozniacki, Ana Ivanovic, Jelena Jankovic and defending champions Novak Djokovic and Simona Halep. Plus, over 300 of the best players on this planet are converging on Indian Wells to compete for the coveted BNP Paribas Open trophy and a $1,000,000+ winner's prize money purse. The great matches you will witness will make for a lifetime of memories.

We want to recognize our group of sponsors who are also the best in the world of sports. Longevity is synonymous with our very special group beginning with our title sponsor, BNP Paribas, one of the oldest sponsors in professional tennis, which has an impressive portfolio of sponsoring Davis Cup, Fed Cup, the French Open and much more. In addition, prestigious and renowned sponsors Rolex, Audi, City of Indian Wells, Masimo, HEAD/Penn, Fila, Emirates, Oracle, Steve Furgal International Tennis Tours, USANA Health Sciences, Moët & Chandon, Lavazza, Jacob's Creek and many more are essential to the tournament's success, and we appreciate their support.

To add to this, we have an incredible group of volunteers and over 500 young ball kids who are great tennis enthusiasts, along with the media who travel here from all over the globe. We are very appreciative of everyone's efforts and support.

Again, thank you to our very loyal tennis fans, THANK YOU, THANK YOU, THANK YOU. Be sure to relish the matches, enjoy the players practicing, engage in our social media, participate in our sponsor promotions, and when you walk away at the end of the day, if you say you can't wait to come back, we will have accomplished our goal, but more importantly, we will be more determined to make this an even better tournament for you next year—after all that is the "BNP Paribas Open experience."

Sincerely,

Raymond Moore

BNP Paribas Open

On behalf of the state of California, I welcome you to Indian Wells for the 41st annual BNP Paribas Open.

California is proud to be home to such a world-class event, which brings together an international field of professional players and fans from across the world. The BNP Paribas Open is an excellent opportunity for participants to join in the spirit of competition and sportsmanship at the highest level of professional tennis. I applaud all the athletes for their hard work and dedication.

I want to express my appreciation to all the sponsors, organizers, tennis players, coaches and especially the fans for making this the largest tennis tournament outside the four Grand Slams.

Enjoy your stay in California and I hope you visit us again soon.

Sincerely,

INDIAN WELLS
CALIFORNIA

Dear Tennis Fans:

Welcome to the City of Indian Wells, host community for the 41st annual BNP Paribas Open. We are honored and thrilled to be a tennis epicenter, and I encourage you to experience as much as you can of this amazing event.

In addition to presenting the sport's largest ATP World Tour and WTA combined tennis competition, the BNP Paribas Open offers an outstanding roster of added activities. You can follow live, in-person Tennis Talk with greats of the game, or experience the inspiring Salute to Heroes evening on March 11. Player autograph signings are offered throughout the event, as is competition viewing on an outdoor big-screen. Add indoor and outdoor dining, shopping for sports gear and even the opportunity to demo sports equipment, and it's easy to make a day or a week of it.

While you're in Indian Wells, I hope you'll take in the many other features of our beautiful city. In addition to the spectacular Indian Wells Tennis Garden, our community is home to the Indian Wells Golf Resort, recently ranked the number one golf resort in California by one of California's leading golf publications. The resort offers 36 holes of championship play and is also home to the popular VUE Grille & Bar. Just steps away, Hyatt Regency Indian Wells Resort & Spa, Renaissance Indian Wells Resort & Spa, the Indian Wells Resort Hotel and Miramonte Resort & Spa offer world-class accommodations, dining and spa experiences, along with some of the most outstanding recreation amenities in the Coachella Valley. Don't miss the Living Desert Zoo and Botanical Garden while you're here. This renowned conservation park is situated on 1,200 acres in Indian Wells and Palm Desert and offers a truly memorable experience for guests of all ages.

To learn more about our residential resort destination, please stop by the City of Indian Wells booth during the tennis tournament, or visit us online at indianwells.com and cityofindianwells.org. Our hope is that you will wish to return here, again and again.

Thank you for joining us for the 2016 BNP Paribas Open. Enjoy your tennis travels.

Sincerely,

Chris Kermode

ATP

Dear Tennis Fans,

On behalf of the ATP, I would like to welcome you to the BNP Paribas Open, one of nine elite ATP World Tour Masters 1000 events on the Tour. The BNP Paribas Open has become one of the clear standout events in our sport, boasting world-class facilities, as well as one of the most breath-taking settings for any tournament on the Tour.

The tournament once again looks set to provide one of the highlights of the season as the world's best battle for one of the most prestigious titles in the sport, as well as 1000 Emirates ATP Rankings points on offer to the winner.

The BNP Paribas Open welcomed more than 455,000 fans through the gates in 2015 and has firmly established itself as the highest attended ATP event on the calendar. Equally popular with the players, the event was voted as the best ATP World Tour Masters 1000 tournament of 2015. It's the second consecutive year that the event has won this award, and a fitting recognition on behalf of the players for the leading standards it continues to set in its tournament category.

This tournament never stands still and continues to implement improvements to its venue. This year, fans will see some enhancements to the seating and sight lines in Stadium 1, as well as additional seating around the practice courts.

I would like to thank Larry Ellison, Raymond Moore and their dedicated team for making the BNP Paribas Open the highly successful event it is today. I would also like to extend my gratitude to title sponsor, BNP Paribas, for their continued support.

The ATP World Tour is enjoying unprecedented success, with an all-time record 4.5 million fans attending ATP events in 2015, a global television audience of 970 million, and record audiences tuning in online – all of this thanks to an incredible generation of players, as well as the strength of our global platform of tournaments.

We thank you for your support and hope you enjoy all the action as the drama unfolds throughout the tournament. The 2016 ATP World Tour features 62 events in 32 countries. We invite you to follow us all season long at www.ATPWorldTour.com.

Best wishes,

Chris Kermode
ATP Executive Chairman and President

WTA

Dear Fans of Women's Tennis,

Welcome to the Indian Wells Tennis Garden for the BNP Paribas Open, a Premier Mandatory tournament on the WTA and a prestigious event on the road to Singapore, which culminates with our season-ending WTA Finals in October.

Throughout 2016, the top female tennis players from nearly 100 countries will compete at the WTA's 57 tournaments and four Grand Slam events. These women represent the world's elite female athletes that continue to live the legacy left by Billie Jean King and those who stood with her when they began this journey 43 years ago.

Since 1973, the WTA has strived for success to deliver a premium product for fans – fans that cheer from their seats courtside and those following on television and online. As WTA fans, you bring energy and passion to the game throughout the year and our players rely on your support at our tournaments and through social media. Thank you for continuing to make tennis the global leader in women's professional sports.

Thank you to all of the tournament sponsors and partners who make this tournament a world-class event—also, to CEO Raymond Moore and the wonderful staff and volunteers for their hard work and dedication.

I hope you enjoy your time here at the BNP Paribas Open, both the off-court atmosphere provided by our hosts and the on-court entertainment of our inspirational athletes.

Sincerely,

Steve Simon

Simona Halep: BLOOMING in the desert

BY JOEL DRUCKER

Anyone who's ever played more than five competitive tennis matches knows what it's like to enter that elusive and mysterious place known as "The Zone." This is the moment when the racquet is less of a tool and more like a paintbrush, when the body moves with ballerina-like grace and sharp shots flow one after another. No one knows when the moment will come. Nor does anyone know when it will leave.

A year ago at the Indian Wells Tennis Garden, in front of nearly 17,000 fans and millions more watching in all corners of the globe, Simona Halep felt exceptionally distant from anything resembling "The Zone." She was in the finals of the BNP Paribas Open. Halep's opponent, former World No. 1 Jelena Jankovic, felt quite comfortable on the stadium court, having won this title in 2010. On this day Jankovic wove a web, smartly mixing height, depth, spin and movement. Afterwards, Halep would say, "She played great tennis today. All the tournament she played amazing. She's amazing because she's running a lot and has a lot of experience . . . She knew how to play me today to make more mistakes." Jankovic won the first set 6-2, extracting 18 unforced errors from Halep. At the end of that set, a trainer came to the court to treat Halep's left foot. As the second set began, Jankovic tightened the noose, going up 3-1.

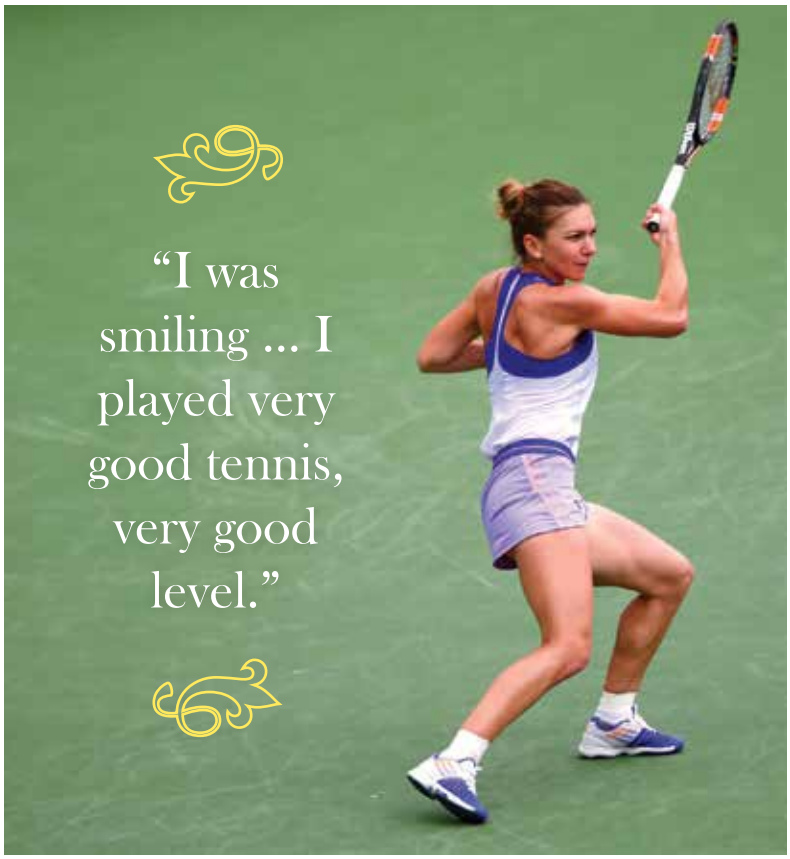

Staring at the deficit of a set and a break down was a fitting metaphor for the arc of Halep's career. At age 16, Halep had been a prodigy, in 2008 winning the Roland Garros girls' singles title. But her first few years on the WTA had been underwhelming, Halep's emotions often getting the better of her. According to Halep's friend and fellow Romanian iconic athlete, Olympic gold medal gymnast Nadia Comaneci, "She's got a little bit of a temper. She always wishes kids success but tells them they should do what she says, not what she does." Here at Indian Wells, in three appearances prior to 2015, she'd won but four matches. By June 2013, Halep had lost eight times in the first round of a Grand Slam tournament and was ranked outside the Top 50.

That June marked a breakthrough. At a WTA clay court event in Nürnberg, Germany, Halep earned her first singles titles, in her last two matches taking out veterans Lucie Safarova and Andrea Petkovic. A week later, this time on the grass of 's-Hertogenbosch, Halep once again raised the winner's trophy, a run highlighted by taking out three of the top four seeds (Roberta Vinci, Carla Suárez Navarro, Kirsten Flipkens). By the end of 2013, she'd racked up three more title runs and soared up to No. 11 in the world. "She's a fighter," said Comaneci. "She is very motivated and hungry for success."

The next year was even better. Joining forces with a new coach, Wim Fissette, Halep stepped up her offense, using her superb court coverage skills to strike the ball earlier and apply more pressure to her opponents. In the spring and summer came two Grand Slam breakthroughs. At the French Open, Halep made it all the way to the finals, losing to two-time BNP Paribas Open champion Maria Sharapova 6-4 in the third in a match that lasted just over three hours. Said a weary Sharapova after just squeaking by Halep, "She certainly deserved to be at this stage.

She pushed me to the limit today."

Halep—who a year earlier had lost in the first round of Roland Garros—was also well aware of what she had accomplished. Immediately after losing, Halep put a towel over her head and began to cry. "And then," she said, "I was smiling . . . I played very good tennis, very good level." There followed a run to the semis of Wimbledon. By August, Halep had soared to No. 2 in the world. She capped off the year impressively with a runner-up showing at the WTA Finals in Singapore.

In a remarkable 18 months, Halep had made an incredible journey from the pack to the elite, snapping up eight singles titles and soaring to a year-end ranking of No. 3 in the world. According to Tennis Channel commentator Mary Carillo, "Getting to the finals of the French Open changed her identity." It was the classic transformation: from hunter to hunted. As Halep said last year at Indian Wells, "I can say that every player who is playing against me wants to beat me because I'm in the top. I was in the same situation before two years, so I know the feeling . . . I don't feel like I'm being hunted. Just want to stay relaxed and to stay focused and to play my game."

But Halep's 2015 hardly began on a line upward. There had been a January title run in Shenzhen, China, followed the next month by victory in Dubai. But those wins had also been sandwiched by a disturbing loss in the quarterfinals of Australian Open. In 68 desultory minutes, Halep had been beaten by Ekaterina Makarova 6-4, 6-0. Afterwards, Halep admitted her effort had been sub-par, that perhaps her emotions had gotten the better of her. "But sometimes you cannot manage the situation," said Halep, "just mentally because the points maybe I didn't fight very well today. I just lost my concentration to win the points, to win the match. So I didn't believe any more in the second set, and that's maybe why I lost 6-0."

The calibration of engagement and emotion strikes at the heart of Halep's playing style. At her best, she can smother opponents with footwork. Exquisitely balanced off both sides, Halep can pound groundstrokes with first-rate depth, pace and tenacity. But when self-belief segues into self-critique, Halep can get herself into trouble, particularly during those moments when her homeland enters the picture. "All those Romanian fans follow her all year," said Carillo. "She feels beholden to all of them. I hope she's not burdened by expectations she shouldn't even feel."

Last year at Indian Wells, though, there was one specific compatriot that mattered most to Halep. The week the tournament began, Halep learned her cousin, Nicica Arghir, had committed suicide. "It's really tough to speak about this situation," said Halep following her opening match, a 2-6, 6-1, 6-2 victory over Daria Gavrilova. "It's a painful situation for everyone, for me and for the family, for my family. I just wanted to play this tournament because he loved tennis. He played many years tennis . . . I just want to dedicate this match to him." Halep went on to earn wins over Varvara Lepchenko, Karolina Pliskova, Carla Suárez Navarro and a walkover victory versus Serena Williams.

As she struggled versus Jankovic, Halep also began to fight back in her distinct way. "She would have been a good tumbler," said Comaneci. "She'd be great on the floor, very quick, very good at getting from one place to another." Jankovic served for the title in the second set, but Halep rallied, leveled the match and began to take control in the third. But then, serving at 5-3, Halep dropped her to serve—only to rally strongly by breaking Jankovic at love, the biggest title run of Halep's career capped with a sizzling forehand crosscourt passing shot. Said Halep immediately afterwards, "I don't know how I won today because I didn't play my best . . . I just wanted to fight till the end."

Though the BNP Paribas Open title run proved her last title of 2015, Halep had many other fine results, most notably on North American hardcourts, where she reached the finals of Cincinnati and Toronto and the semis in Miami and at the U.S. Open. By the end of the year, she'd finished one spot higher than 2014—a career-high year-end ranking of No. 2 in the world.

As part of the Adidas Player Development Program, last year Halep spent time with Australian Darren Cahill. In November 2015, Halep announced that Cahill would become her full-time coach. Cahill's resume includes work with such passionate grinders as Lleyton Hewitt and Andre Agassi. Moreover, his Aussie sensibility will, as Carillo said, "offer not just technical guidance but emotional assurance. That is something she clearly seeks."

Balance makes Simona Halep a superb tennis player. How well she continues to balance head and heart will continue to shape her story—be it a title defense in Indian Wells or all the many worlds she seeks to conquer.

A BALANCING ACT: FATHER AND CHAMPION

Four-time BNP Paribas Open Champion Novak Djokovic is taking fatherhood in his stride.

BY PAUL MACPHERSON

Ask most first-time parents about the challenges of juggling work with becoming a new mom or dad, and you'll hear stories of sleep deprivation, a lack of energy, competing priorities and more. For those who are also working outside the home, it can be a triumph just to make it through the day. Novak Djokovic is not most parents.

Since he and wife Jelena welcomed their first son, Stefan, in October 2014, Djokovic has done just as much multi-taking as multi-tasking. Last year he produced one of the finest seasons in tennis history. For a while the Serb showed great deference to his 2011 campaign, which reaped 10 titles, including three Majors, but by year's end, there could be no doubt: 2015 had been his best season ever. Fatherhood had not dimmed his focus.

"I just try to be in the moment and have the very well-balanced private life, and it reflects in the success on the court," Djokovic said at the Barclays ATP World Tour Finals in London last November, when he became the first player to win four consecutive titles in the event's 45-year history.

Consider this: Of Djokovic's 82 wins in 2015, 31 were against Top 10 opponents. That's 38 percent! He went 5-3 vs. Roger Federer, winning their highest-stakes showdowns in the finals of Wimbledon, the U.S. Open and the season finale in London. En route to 11 titles in 2015, the Serb went 6-1 against year-end No. 2 Andy Murray and 4-0 vs. Rafael Nadal, winning all nine sets against the Spaniard.

Djokovic came within one match of becoming just the third player in history to achieve a calendar-year Grand Slam. He also won a record six ATP World Tour Masters 1000 titles in one season, including the Indian Wells-Miami double for an unprecedented third time.

"Overall it's been as close to perfection as it can get, the season," Djokovic said in London. "[I'm] just blessed and overwhelmed with the emotion and the thrill to be achieving such a great season. It inspires me even more to keep on going and hopefully playing on this level in the future.

"It's the best season of my life . . . [but] there is always room for improvement, so that's something that honestly excites me and motivates me to keep on going. I've had some matches where I've played some really flawless, incredible tennis."

Former World No. 1 Mats Wilander, who had the first two of his five children late in his playing career, marvels at how well Djokovic has kept his focus in fatherhood.

"You never know how you are going to react," Wilander said for this story. "You may put tennis in the passenger seat, where winning doesn't become that important, or you may relax and enjoy it a little more and play more freely.

"It's sort of like when you bring on a coach. It all depends on how you start out. If you start strong you quickly believe that the change will benefit your game. I'm not surprised when it comes to Novak because his behavior, body language and attitude have shown the biggest improvement of any tennis player in any field that I have ever seen."

Taking in stride his marriage to Jelena and birth of Stefan in the second half of 2014 have been the most important steps in Djokovic's continued maturity as a person and a player. Prone to mid-match retirements and meltdowns early in his career, Djokovic last year went his fourth straight season without retiring from a match or handing an opponent a walkover, all while notching a career-best 82-6 match record on the year and running up separate win streaks of 28 and 23 matches.

Here in Indian Wells last year, Djokovic defeated Federer in the final to claim his 50th tour-level title. "It's a great milestone. I don't take anything for granted," Djokovic said at the time. "I believe that I have to earn everything that I do."

It wasn't always that way.

"Earlier in his career he got the 'Joker' nickname because he was joking around and not that serious," Wilander said. "He'd get upset, and we weren't really sure where he was at. Look at him now. He is so rock solid in every single match. He's still emotional, but he's able to channel that anger and frustration into something really positive. I'm extremely impressed with that improvement.

"It's hard to put aside that winning and losing tennis matches is not that important compared to having a family. But there is a balance there. If you think it's not important enough, you lose intensity and matches, especially the way he plays, where he is fighting for every point."

After a three-set loss to 6'11" ace king Ivo Karlovic in Doha in the first week of the 2015 season, Djokovic reached a single-season record 15 consecutive finals. With his elastic court movement, sublime backhand and world's-best return of serve, Djokovic lost to just three players the remainder of the year: Federer (three times), Murray and Stan Wawrinka.

The loss to Wawrinka in the Roland Garros final, which cost him the opportunity to clinch a career Grand Slam, cut deep. The other painful loss was a defeat to Federer in the Cincinnati final, where Djokovic was looking to become the first singles player to win nine different ATP World Tour Masters 1000s titles and complete the Career Golden Masters. But, as any parent will tell you, you can't have it all your own way.

Djokovic is already regarded as one of the game's all-time great players. He needs just one more Major title to join Rod Laver and Bjorn Borg with 11 Grand Slam crowns. Federer leads the all-time list with 17, followed by Pete Sampras and Nadal with 14 and Roy Emerson with 12.

"I think Novak is focused on becoming the greatest player of all time. That's where his mind is at."

–WILANDER

At the ATP World Tour Masters 1000 level, the Tour's series of nine premier tournaments, Djokovic has 26 titles, second only to Nadal's 27. In London, Djokovic leveled his head-to-head record with Federer at 22-22 and Nadal at 23-23. Last November, Djokovic also moved past John McEnroe into fifth place on the list of most weeks spent at No. 1 and is on track to pass 200 weeks in top spot in the first half of this year.

With strong momentum in rivalries against his peers and with the ATP's next generation of stars yet to challenge him on a sustained basis, many tennis fans believe that Djokovic is headed for another season or two of dominance. It should be noted that after 2011—when he won 10 titles and three Majors—Djokovic had to 'settle' for one Major a year over the next three seasons before producing his prodigious haul in 2015.

But if any player knows how to adapt and to learn from the past, it's Djokovic. Wilander believes that the Serb's follow-up season to his blistering 2015 will be strong.

"I think Novak is focused on becoming the greatest player of all time. That's where his mind is at," Wilander says.

"The way he plays, the way he is focused, I don't see why he won't at least catch Rafa and, most probably, Roger. I think he can win a minimum of two and an average of three Slams a year for the next three or four years."

For his part, Djokovic shows no sign of losing motivation. "I put myself in a very good position, knowing that I made a lot of records and history. It inspires me . . . I'm convinced with this dedication to the sport, I can achieve more. How much, I don't know. I don't have a sense of urgency. I don't chase anything. I just try to be in the moment and see where it takes me."

Wherever that is, Jelena and son Stefan will be along for the ride and remain the Serb's greatest motivation.

BNP Paribas Open Kids Day 10 & Under competition

A MONTH OF TENNIS in the Desert

The BNP Paribas Open has come a long way since its debut in 1976 at Mission Hills Country Club in Rancho Mirage. The inaugural tournament consisted of a 64-player men's-only singles draw and 32-team doubles draw. Now in its 41st year, the BNP Paribas Open is the world's largest WTA and ATP World Tour combined tennis tournament outside of the Grand Slam events, with the second-largest stadium in the world comprising of 16,100 seats, an 8,000 seat Stadium 2 with world-renowned fine dining options, state-of-the-art Hawkeye electronic line calling system on every match court, unbeatable scenery and mountain views and much more. The 2016 tournament and the events surrounding it span nearly the entire month of March and include more than 1,000 players. Last year's BNP Paribas Open saw more than 456,000 tennis fans stream through the gates of the Indian Wells Tennis Garden to enjoy their favorite sport in an idyllic setting.

The festivities get underway with a week of competitive tennis open to the public and free of charge. The BNP Paribas Challenge is a pre-qualifying event played before the official tournament begins, with players competing for the opportunity to win a spot in the qualifying draw. The 2015 event drew more than 250 participants—the largest field in the history of the event. The men's and women's Challenge winners receive a wild card berth into their respective qualifying event.

"The BNP Paribas Challenge presents an amazing opportunity for up-and-coming players to compete for a spot in one of the most prestigious tournaments in the world," said BNP Paribas Open CEO Raymond Moore. "As a former player, I understand how valuable it is to be allowed the opportunity to showcase your talent and battle for a spot in the tournament's qualifying draw."

BNP Paribas Open Collegiate Challenge presented by Oracle

The McEnroe Challenge for Charity presented by Masimo has been a fan favorite at the BNP Paribas Open since 2014. Furthering the tournament's dedication to giving back to both the local community and charitable organizations, this one-day event takes place the weekend before the official opening of the BNP Paribas Open. In 2016, former tennis superstars Andy Roddick, John McEnroe, Pat Cash and Pete Sampras will participate alongside rising women's star Madison Keys and Coco Vandeweghe, former players Tracy Austin and Arantxa Sanchez-Vicario. The 2016 event will mark the second year of the new team format, with the players divided into two teams competing in a total of four matches—men's singles, women's doubles, men's doubles and mixed doubles. Each player and doubles team represents a designated local charity, with 100 percent of the prize money earned—$80,000 total—to be donated to the charity the player or team represents. The 2016 charity recipients are the Andy Roddick Foundation, Eisenhower Medical Center, Patient Safety Movement Foundation and the War Casualty Family Assistance Fund.

To add to the excitement of this year's McEnroe Challenge for Charity presented by Masimo, Pete Sampras returns to play in the charity exhibition at the BNP Paribas Open for the first time since 2010, when he participated in the Hit for Haiti event that raised more than $1 million for disaster relief efforts following a devastating earthquake. On Saturday, March 5, a mural will be unveiled at the Indian Wells Tennis Garden in Sampras' honor.

To add to the fun, more than 1,200 local kids will participate in the 2016 BNP Paribas Open Kids Day, with on- and off-court activities for children of all ages. The highlight of the day is a 16-school competition of the Desert Sands Unified School District played in the 10-and-under tennis format.

The main event—the BNP Paribas Open—welcomes the biggest names in tennis to a stage like none other in sports. The two-week-long tournament is one of the most prestigious and coveted titles outside of the Grand Slam events, set in an environment that is truly tennis paradise. The tournament was voted by WTA and ATP players as the Tournament of the Year in 2014 and 2015.

The third annual BNP Paribas Open Collegiate Challenge presented by Oracle will once again be held during Championship Weekend, with seven NCAA tennis teams competing in a tournament at the Indian Wells Tennis Garden. The event, which began with a four-team field and expanded in 2015, furthers the BNP Paribas Open and Oracle's dedication to supporting collegiate tennis.

"We are excited to partner with the BNP Paribas Open to present the third annual Collegiate Challenge," said Mark Hurd, CEO of Oracle. "Today's collegiate players will be some of tomorrow's stars, and spotlighting their talent alongside the world's elite is a unique opportunity to promote the college game. We hope this tournament will inspire more fans to support and follow collegiate tennis in their communities."

The Collegiate Challenge, which is free for all patrons of the tournament with tickets or event credentials for the respective dates, is the latest addition to an already impressive slate of activities for tennis fans during the month of March.

The Tri-Level Championships, now in their tenth year, give 17 USTA sections the opportunity to send two teams—one men's, one women's—to compete in an amateur doubles tournament over the final weekend of the BNP Paribas Open. Each team is comprised of a minimum of twelve players to play within the 3.5, 4.0 and 4.5 ability levels.

Following the crowning of the 2016 BNP Paribas Open champions, more than 800 senior tennis players from around the world will flock to the desert to compete in the 23rd annual BNP Paribas Open Senior Cup. This team tennis doubles tournament is divided into two divisions—Senior (50+) and Super Senior (65+)—and takes place following the conclusion of the BNP Paribas Open at the Indian Wells Tennis Garden and surrounding country clubs. Since there is never such thing as quite enough tennis, the Senior Cup is a perfect way to wrap up the month-long show of world-class tennis at the BNP Paribas Open.

"The Senior Cup has been a staple in the Coachella Valley for more than two decades," Moore said. "With more and more participants every year, the Senior Cup is a great way to conclude the tournament's festivities. Allowing amateurs to compete on the same courts and venues as the biggest stars in tennis just a few days removed from the conclusion of the BNP Paribas Open is a special opportunity that will last a lifetime for the participants."

Undoubtedly, the BNP Paribas Open stands today as one of the preeminent stops on the respective Tours, consistently delivering the best to the players, patrons and tennis fans around the world. With a slate of world-class tennis spanning the entire month of March, the event is truly a tennis lover's paradise.

BNP PARIBAS OPEN

The BNP Paribas Open will conduct its 41st men's event and 28th women's event in 2016. The events were held on consecutive weeks from 1989 through 1995 before combining for simultaneous play in 1996. This year marks the 21st time that the men and women will compete concurrently.

456,672
a new attendance record for any ATP World Tour and WTA combined event

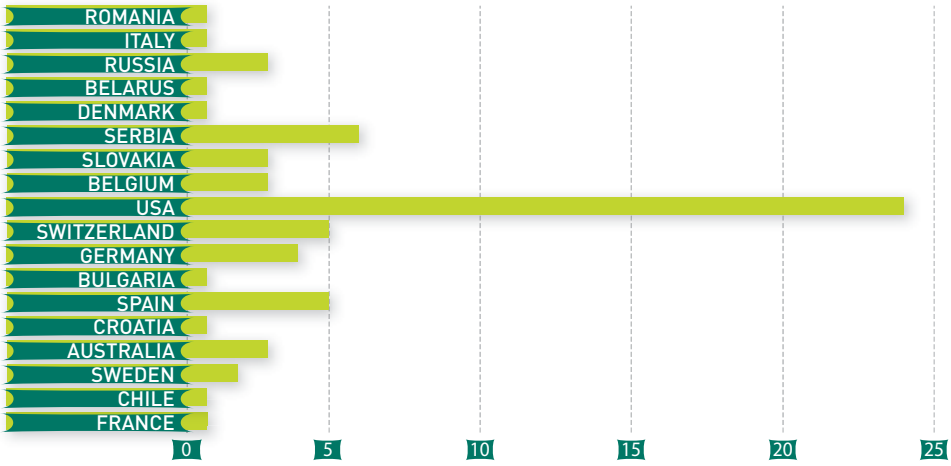

The seating capacity of Stadium 1 at the Indian Wells Tennis Garden (16,100) is the second largest of any tennis-only stadium on either Tour. Only the U.S. Open's Arthur Ashe Stadium (22,500) is larger.

Hawkeye replay technology was installed on all match courts for the 2010 event. To this day, the BNP Paribas Open remains the only tournament in the world, including the four Majors, to have the line call challenge system available for all matches, including qualifying.

In 2012, the BNP Paribas Open became the first non-Grand Slam tennis tournament to offer $1 million to its singles champions, increasing total prize money to more than $10 million.

BY THE NUMBERS

Every women's champion and 22 of the last 25 men's champions at Indian Wells have finished his/her respective season ranked in the Top 10.

3 – The number of unseeded men who have won the singles title. In 1985, Larry Stefanki became the first (and only "wildcard" to do so). In 1999, it was Mark Philippoussis, and a year later it was Alex Corretja. In 2005, Kim Clijsters became the first and only unseeded women's champion.

Lindsay Davenport won the singles and doubles titles in the same year twice (1997, 2000), and Vera Zvonareva achieved the elusive double-double once (2009). Jim Courier (1991), Boris Becker (1988) and Roscoe Tanner (1978) are the only three to have won both men's crowns in the same year.

In a unique convergence of the careers of some of tennis' greats, twelve future Tennis Hall of Famers competed in the 64-player field of the 1976 tournament, including Arthur Ashe, Bjorn Borg, Jimmy Connors, Cliff Drysdale, Rod Laver, Ilie Nastase, John Newcombe, Charlie Pasarell, Tony Roche, Ken Rosewall, Stan Smith and Ion Tiriac. Connors topped Tanner for his first of three wins in the desert. That first event in 1976 boasted eight Grand Slam singles champions.

The players who have won back-to-back singles titles at the event are Novak Djokovic (2015, 2014), Roger Federer (2004, 2005, 2006), Lleyton Hewitt (2002, 2003), Michael Chang (1996, 1997), Pete Sampras (1994, 1995), Boris Becker (1987, 1988) and Roscoe Tanner (1978, 1979). Only Martina Navratilova (1990, 1991) has won two straight women's crowns.

EMERGING TALENT ON TAP FOR TOURS

Daria Gavrilova

Denis Kudla

Anna Karolina Schmiedlova

Hyeon Chung

Jiri Vesely

Borna Coric

Madison Keys

Kristina Mladenovic

The ATP World Tour and WTA boast a wealth of young talent looking to emerge in the ranks. Over the year, young stars have secured signature wins that place them from up-and-coming stars to household names. The BNP Paribas Open takes a look at eight players who have the potential to make a leap to stardom.

When Hyeon Chung began his 2015 ATP World Tour schedule at the Australian Open, the 19-year-old South Korean was ranked No. 169 in the world and advanced to the third round of qualifying. At the 2016 Australian Open, the newly-crowned Most Improved Player of the Year was ranked right outside the Top 50 and placed into the main draw. Chung excels on the hard court, utilizing his powerful two-handed backhand to keep his opponents at bay. The South Korean's ascent through the rankings is certainly a storyline for 2016.

Borna Coric finished 2014 as the youngest player in the Top 100, and the Croatian catapulted from No. 91 to a career-best No. 33 in just six months. The Croatian also displayed an affinity for the big stage in 2015, securing a five-set victory against Tommy Robredo in the second round at Roland Garros and a straight-set triumph over Andy Murray in the quarterfinals at Dubai.

Denis Kudla showed great promise in 2015, including an impressive slate of matches at Wimbledon in which he finished in the Round of 16. The American knocked off Pablo Cuevas, Alexander Zverev and Santiago Giraldo before taking U.S. Open Champion Marin Cilic to four sets. The 23-year-old followed his performance at Wimbledon with a semifinal appearance at Atlanta.

Jiri Vesely won his first career title at Auckland in 2015, defeating Top 20 foes Ernests Gulbis and Kevin Anderson before hoisting the trophy. The win catapulted the Czech 22 spots in the World Rankings and into the Top 40 for the first time in his young career. The 22-year-old Czech also showed promise at the U.S. Open, defeating Ivo Karlovic in the second round before retiring in the third.

Madison Keys got off to a sizzling start in 2015 with a semifinal appearance at the Australian Open, and the young American continued to elevate her game throughout the season. Keys used her punishing serve and effective forehand en route to a quarterfinal appearance at Wimbledon, Round of 16 showing at the U.S. Open and runner-up effort in Charleston. The 21-year-old possesses elite skill and looks poised to become the next great American WTA star.

Frenchwoman Kristina Mladenovic tallied several impressive victories en route to a career-high ranking in 2015. Mladenovic defeated 2015 BNP Paribas Open Champion Simona Halep at Birmingham, produced a finals effort in Strasbourg and made a quarterfinal appearance at the U.S. Open. The 22-year-old showed a lot of promise in 2015 and is certainly a player to watch in the new year.

Daria Gavrilova was no stranger to the upset in 2015. The Australian knocked off Sam Stosur and Lucie Safarova at Toronto, defeated Belinda Bencic and 2008 BNP Paribas Open Champion Ana Ivanovic at Rome and bounced two-time Indian Wells victor Maria Sharapova at Miami. Gavrilova also made significant strides in the rankings, advancing almost 200 spots from her year-end 2014 slot to No. 36 at the end of 2015.

Anna Karolina Schmiedlova climbed 50 spots from her 2014 year-end ranking to finish 2015 in the Top 30. The Slovak also won her first career WTA singles crowns, hoisting trophies at Katowice and Bucharest. The 21-year-old made an impressive run in Cincinnati, rolling through qualifying en route to a quarterfinal appearance at the Premier Event.

These players have shown great promise in their young careers and look poised to make another leap in 2016. The BNP Paribas Open could be another great opportunity to announce their names on the big stage.

Tennis Channel:

Year-Round Access to Your Favorite Sport

March is a busy time for sports and there is no exception for tennis. With more than 300 of the top players in the world heading to California's Indian Wells Tennis Garden, the BNP Paribas Open is the largest ATP World Tour and WTA combined two-week event in the sport. Often referred to as the fifth major of the season, Tennis Channel covers it as such.

Tennis Channel will once again bring viewers and tennis fans the most coverage from Indian Wells, with nearly every match broadcast live on the network. From March 9 through March 16, the channel will air 12 consecutive hours of live coverage starting each day at 11 a.m. PT. Each block of live competition will be immediately followed by an encore of the day's matches. The network's hour-long preview show, Tennis Channel Live at the BNP Paribas Open, leads into each day's play and starts at 10 a.m. each morning, except for March 18 when it will be on at 11 a.m. Once again the host desk is on the tournament grounds and in full view of the fans, just like at the network's major coverage during the French Open and other slams. Over the last four days of the event Tennis Channel will air same-day replays of all of the day's action, giving tennis fanatics all the coverage they desire.

Not only does Tennis Channel provide the most coverage for the BNP Paribas Open, but it offers the most Hall of Fame on-air talent of any single-sports network, with the likes of Lindsay Davenport, Tracy Austin, Bud Collins, Jim Courier, Martina Navratilova, Jimmy Connors and John McEnroe all having appeared regularly on-air. For the BNP Paribas Open Tennis Channel's broadcasting talent will include broadcasters Brett Haber,

Novak Djokovic | 2015 Champion

Simona Halep | 2015 Champion

TENNIS CHANNEL

Mary Carillo, and former star players Jim Courier, Lindsay Davenport, Tracy Austin and James Blake, with many others live at Indian Wells taking you through the two weeks of coverage.The game continues to expand and produce new stars every year and Tennis Channel is giving fans front-row access to see current and rising stars year-round. During the 2015 season, the top 10 men and women were featured on the network a combined 925 times. Not only does the channel have more than 90 percent of all the televised tennis in the United States – more than all other networks combined – but has coverage from all four Grand Slam events as well as exclusive rights for Davis Cup, Fed Cup and Hopman cup matches.

For those times you are unable to catch the action in person, Tennis Channel has you covered. With Tennis Channel Everywhere fans can use their existing subscription to tune in and watch the network wherever they with their mobile devices or on streaming services like Apple TV, Amazon Fire and Roku. Tennis Channel also offers a subscription service, Tennis Channel Plus, which gives viewers a chance to see exclusive live and archived content that they won't find anywhere else.

TENNIS CHANNEL PLUS

Thanks to Tennis Channel, there has never been so much tennis available to fans.

Nicolino's Italian Restaurant

We make it good, give you plenty, and don't charge a lot!

In 1969, Papa Nicolino, his wife Emilie and two sons, Michael and Mark, moved to Palm Springs and opened Nicolino and Sons. It was an overnight success, with Italian specialty breads and delicious Italian cold cuts. In 1985, Mark and his wife Rhonda opened Nicolino's Famous Italian Restaurant in Cathedral City. With great recipes passed down from Papa, Nicolino's continues to be popular with valley locals, celebrities, and visitors from all walks of life. Experience our popular and delicious menu, designed by Mark and Rhonda, with Pasta, Pizza, Chicken, Veal, Salads, and Desserts made to order. Enjoy live entertainment performed by local jazz artists.

Discover the Spirit of Ironwood

High above the valley floor nestled against the Santa Rosa Mountains lies a world of beautiful landscapes and vistas so close to nature but only steps from the heart of Palm Desert.

A community rich in history that for generations has honored the spirit of family, Ironwood Country Club offers residents, members and vacationers alike a sense of place that is always warm and welcoming.

With two world-class golf courses, state of the art tennis, fitness and spa facilities, and a Tuscan style clubhouse, the community makes for a wonderful lifestyle experience year-round.

Isn't it time you discovered Ironwood?

IN MEMORY

MIKE DAVIES

(1936–2015)

Mike Davies made his mark as both a great player and a businessman. Born in Swansea, Wales, he used to collect tennis balls launched over fences at Cwmdonkin Park. After Davies began playing, Fred Perry, a three-time Wimbledon champion, noticed him at junior competitions and became his mentor. The Davies family could not afford equipment and tournament entry fees, so Davies picked potatoes for wages.

He was the top British male player in 1957, 1959 and 1960. In 1960, Davies made the doubles finals at Wimbledon, a feat unmatched by any other British man in singles or doubles until 2012.

Davies played professionally from 1960 to 1967. Before Open Tennis was established, becoming pro meant forfeiting eligibility to compete in the Davis Cup and four Majors—amateur tournaments. This and low pay for professionals frustrated Davies. At odds with governing body of the sport, Davies was inspired to rock the establishment with his breakthrough marketing initiatives.

After retiring, Davies took on the role of executive director at World Championship Tennis (WCT) in 1968. He toiled to make tennis a popular household sport and to increase players' earnings, signing the sport's first contract with a major television network, NBC. He sold sponsorships and TV rights to increase advertising money and brought in record-breaking numbers of viewers. In 1970, he and WCT created the first $1 million tour.

Davies brought color to uniforms and the tennis ball. Players in white volleying a white ball made TV viewing difficult. Under Davies' influence, the ball became yellow, a controversial change, and uniforms colorful and bright. Also with viewers in mind, he introduced 90-second breaks every two games to make time for commercials. Davies realized norms like chairs on court for players and 30-second maximum periods between points.

From 1983 to 1986, Davies was marketing director and executive director at the Association of Tennis Professionals (ATP). BNP Paribas Open CEO/Tournament Director Raymond Moore, who worked closely with Davies at ATP, says, "His brain never stopped innovating, creating and working—attempting to always put the very best face forward for the sport of tennis."

Following his work at ATP, Davies was general manager at the International Tennis Federation (ITF), continuing to drive revenue and sponsorship numbers. He also formed the Grand Slam Committee and the Grand Slam Cup. Near the end of his administrative career, Davies served as CEO of the New Haven Open.

Mike Davies was inducted into the Tennis Hall of Fame in 2012 and is remembered for his great impact on tennis and its players.

DOUBLES RISES

TO NEW HEIGHTS AT THE BNP PARIBAS OPEN

BY J. FRED SIDHU

Andy Roddick & Mardy Fish

Lisa Raymond & Sam Stosur

Roger Federer & Stan Wawrinka

Over the past few years, watching men's and women's doubles has become an essential part of the BNP Paribas Open fan experience. This year, the 40th anniversary of the ATP Doubles ranking, will be no exception.

With an advantageous schedule, many of the top singles players choose to play doubles at the Indian Wells Tennis Garden and have provided tennis fans with some of the greatest moments in tournament history.

In 2014, four-time BNP Paribas Open singles champion Roger Federer teamed with countryman Stan Wawrinka to help christen a sparkling new Stadium 2 before a capacity crowd of 8,000 fans.

Former World No. 1 Rafael Nadal showed fans he can be a force on the doubles court as well when he combined with fellow Spaniard Marc Lopez to win the BNP Paribas Open doubles title in 2010 and 2012.

When given the opportunity, fans love watching doubles, especially in a pristine setting like the Indian Wells Tennis Garden, where they routinely pack the smaller, more intimate stadiums on the tournament grounds.

However, during the 2015 BNP Paribas Open, the doubles experience for tennis fans reached even greater heights.

To set the scene, let's turn the clock back to last year on Thursday, March 19. It was a beautiful, sunny day in the Coachella Valley with temperatures in the low 80s. A day session crowd of 16,718 watched quarterfinal singles action, which included Andy Murray's 6-3, 6-4 win over Feliciano Lopez and Sabine Lisicki's dramatic 6-4, 6-7 (3), 7-6 (4) victory over defending women's champion Flavia Pennetta.

Fans enjoyed the beautiful weather and milled around the grounds as the day session action seemingly progressed smoothly, but behind the scenes, an important development began to unfold.

The night session was scheduled to begin that evening at 7 p.m. on Stadium 1 with a highly-anticipated quarterfinal singles match between Australia's Bernard Tomic and defending men's champion Novak Djokovic, followed by top-seeded Martina Hingis and Sania Mirza taking on 2006 and 2007 champions Lisa Raymond and Samantha Stosur in a semifinal women's doubles match.

Unfortunately, Tomic, suffering from a back injury, was forced to withdraw from the match earlier in the day, allowing Djokovic to advance to the men's semifinals with a walkover.

Tournament officials, having to fill the void in the night session schedule, met and rearranged parts of the day session schedule. The quarterfinal men's doubles match featuring top-seeded Bob and Mike Bryan against then reigning Wimbledon champions Vasek Pospisil and Jack Sock would now open the night session on Stadium 1.

BNP Paribas Open Chief Executive Officer Raymond Moore, who had a hand in making the scheduling change, said, "We were lucky that we had such an attractive doubles match to put on at the night session. Doubles is a very important part of this event and we try to promote it as much as we can."

The revised night session now offered fans the chance to watch back-to-back blockbuster doubles matches, and it turned out to be a spectacular night.

The Bryan brothers were attempting to win their third straight BNP Paribas Open title last year, but to do so, they would have to get past Popisil and Sock, who had beaten them at Wimbledon in 2014 in an epic final, 7-6 (5), 6-7 (3), 6-4, 3-6, 7-5.

With the quality and intensity of the match at a very high level, Popisil and Sock eliminated the two-time defending champions, 6-4, 6-4 to open the night session and snap the Bryans' 14-match winning streak at the BNP Paribas Open.

After getting past the Bryan brothers, Popisil and Sock would later go on to win the men's doubles title with a hard-fought 6-4, 6-7 (3), 10-7 victory over Italians Simone Bolelli and Fabio Fognini in the final. The championship in Indian Wells would help establish them among the elite doubles teams in the world.

The doubles action was not over yet for the 13,827 fans in attendance that Thursday night on Stadium 1 as Hingis and Mirza combined for a convincing 6-0, 6-4 win over Raymond and Stosur.

Hingis and Mirza, who were playing doubles together for the first time, went on to capture the BNP Paribas Open women's doubles title by defeating the second-seeded Russian team and 2013 BNP Paribas Open doubles champions Ekaterina Makarova and Elena Vesnina 6-3, 6-4.

Vasek Pospisil & Jack Sock

Based on the feedback received, the all-doubles night session was a success. According to Moore, the evening was a win-win situation. Not only did it help the tournament, fans enjoyed watching it and players enjoyed being part of it. "It was positive. People loved it and the players liked it because they were on a feature court, the No. 1 court," Moore said.

Fans who saw Hingis and Mirza in action during the 2015 BNP Paribas Open witnessed the start of something special. The first-time pair had played together in Indian Wells on a trial basis to see if their combination would work.

The Hingis/Mirza partnership not only worked, but blossomed into a dominating doubles team as their playing styles complemented each other perfectly. During 2015, they would win Wimbledon and the U.S. Open, as well as five WTA Premier titles and one WTA International title. Hingis and Mirza also captured the BNP Paribas WTA Finals in Singapore and finished with the WTA Year-End World No. 1 Doubles Ranking.

"It is definitely something beyond my expectations," Hingis said at the end of the 2015 season. "When I first teamed up with Sania it was a trial at Indian Wells and Miami to see how it would go. We ended up winning both of those tournaments and Charleston on top of it and since then it has been an incredible journey. Ending up as the No. 1 team is definitely something beyond my expectations and something I had dreamed of but when it really happened it was incredible."

After finishing the year as the top-ranked doubles team, Mirza said, "When we first teamed up, we were testing it out. But when we started doing well, we realized that we could do some great things together and it became one of our goals to end the year No.1, so we're really happy to have achieved that."

There is no question that the experience of watching men's and women's doubles in a fan-friendly environment such as the Indian Wells Tennis Garden has made an impact on spectators at the BNP Paribas Open, but how much of an impact has it really made?

Moore shared an experience he had with a special VIP guest who came to watch matches at the tournament in 2009. The special VIP guest just happened to be in attendance for the men's doubles final in Stadium 1 that afternoon that pitted Americans Andy Roddick and Mardy Fish against Max Mirnyi of Belarus and Israel's Andy Ram.

Roddick and Fish dropped the first set 6-3 but rebounded to win the second set 6-1 to set the stage for a thrilling match tiebreak that would decide the outcome. The atmosphere was electric as the large, vocal crowd cheered the Americans on every point. Roddick and Fish surged ahead and won the tiebreak 14-12 to wrap up the title.

Afterwards as they celebrated, Fish hopped on Roddick's back and, like two giddy teenage boys at a high school party, they took a victory lap around the court to the delight of fans in attendance.

Later that day, Moore drove the special VIP guest to the Palm Springs International Airport. During the approximate half-hour drive, Moore clearly recollected how excited the special VIP guest was and how much he raved about the doubles match they had just witnessed in Stadium 1.

Perhaps after watching Roddick and Fish win the title, an idea may have been planted with the special VIP guest, whose passion for tennis would lead him to make a very important business decision later that year which would change the course of history at the BNP Paribas Open.

If you haven't guessed it by now, the identity of the special VIP guest is none other than Larry Ellison, current owner of the BNP Paribas Open and Indian Wells Tennis Garden.

The doubles experience promises to be bigger and better than ever at the 2016 BNP Paribas Open. If partnerships hold to form, Pospisil/Sock and Hingis/Mirza are expected to return to defend their respective titles.

Since 2016 is an Olympic year, fans in Indian Wells could see more doubles teams comprised of players from the same country as they start preparing for the tennis competition at the Summer Games in Rio de Janeiro this August.

The best news for doubles fans is the tournament's continued commitment to doubles as it strives to promote and enhance the experience at the BNP Paribas Open. "We're a big supporter of doubles, we look forward to it and we'll continue to do so," Moore said. "We're looking at ways to feature it more and make it more prominent."

J. Fred Sidhu is assistant media relations director of the BNP Paribas Open.

Partner Promotions in PARADISE

The true description of tennis paradise is not just a place with world-class tennis and entertainment, but with a variety of activities and fun—fun for the entire family—as well. At this year's BNP Paribas Open, our tournament partners have once again dreamt up such activities and activations to provide for an unforgettable two weeks. From a new fan academy activation to a 180-degree SmashCam and a special day for Indian Wells residents, there is something for everyone to enjoy away from the courts. Because, after all, you, the fans, are the ones who make tennis paradise truly magnificent, aren't you?

TITLE SPONSOR: BNP PARIBAS

The newly created BNP Paribas "We Are Tennis Fan Academy" provides fans with the opportunity to bring their passion to tournaments and competitions around the world. On Sunday, March 13, fans learn chants and songs alongside the Fan Academy's captain, John McEnroe, followed by in-stadium participation on March 14.

Visit BNP Paribas' booth to upload a photo to Facebook showing why you are the Biggest Tennis Fan and be entered to win tickets to the 2017 BNP Paribas Open and much more. When you are done uploading your photo, go next door to the Bank of the West booth, part of the BNP Paribas family, and have a 180-degree photo taken with the SmashCam.

On championship weekend, fans are invited inside the Indian Wells Tennis Garden for festivities and entertainment at the gates and around the grounds. In addition, the BNP Paribas Open is choosing two Coachella Valley High School senior tennis players as recipients for college scholarships. See BNP Paribas: Giving Back to the Community story on page 142.

Visit wearetennis.com (or www.facebook/wearetennis) for live coverage and behind-the-scenes access, as well as information on BNP Paribas' love story with Tennis.

AUDI

Drive an Audi? Special parking is available to you (at limited capacity) throughout the tournament. Want to talk to an Audi product specialist? They're at the Audi main display ready to answer your questions. On Audi Day, Monday, March 14, fans will have a chance to play a point against a pro and enter for a chance to win two (2) custom Ping Pong tables. Be sure to stop by the main display by the Circle of Palms to learn more.

CITY OF INDIAN WELLS

The City of Indian Wells warmly welcomes residents and visitors to the BNP Paribas Open. Please join us on Friday, March 11, as we share in presenting the annual Salute to Heroes night, honoring local service members for their dedication to community and country. We also invite visitors to enjoy a massage at the City of Indian Wells booth, or to take advantage of the putting green in The Courtyard. To our neighbors living in Indian Wells, we look forward to seeing you at our March 10 residents' event as well. We are proud to support the BNP Paribas Open.

EMIRATES

Saturday, March 12, is Emirates Day and fans can participate in the "Emirates Ball Flight" promotion on Stadium 1 for a chance to win round-trip airfare from Los Angeles to Dubai. In addition, look for complimentary Emirates caps at the entry gates to the grounds.

FILA

Need to do your tennis shopping while basking in the world that is tennis paradise? The Fila retail store is open throughout the tournament just for that—this year with the launch of the Cage Delirium, an all-new high-performance tennis shoe developed from the ground up for this season. Fila worked with professional tennis athletes across the globe and tested the shoe extensively to make sure the fit and performance are among the best in its class. The Cage Delirium will be worn by ball kids and lines persons throughout the tournament. Don't forget to join the conversation using #FilaTennis; you could see your Instagram posts and much more on the video walls inside and outside the Fila store.

On Wednesday, March 9, American star Sam Querrey will conduct a Fila clinic for local high schools. On Thursday, March 10, enjoy a Lavazza coffee cocktail while Fila unveils its new heritage collection and newly signed athletes in its store.

HEAD/PENN

For the second straight year, HEAD will provide the stringing services for players at the BNP Paribas Open. As a fan, you can access the HEAD Penn booth to get a souvenir picture of you with your choice of HEAD-sponsored players in the background, including two-time BNP Paribas Open champion Maria Sharapova and four-time and defending champion Novak Djokovic. A Penn soda cup also means free refills at concession stands around the grounds.

Throughout the tournament, HEAD Penn partners with Tennis Warehouse for must-see player clinics and demonstrations at the Tennis Warehouse demo court with the stars of the WTA and ATP World Tour. Inside Stadium 1, text to win in the "Who Penned It" competition, where prizes are autographed Penn tennis balls and HEAD racquets.

MASIMO

Global medical device technology company Masimo is one of our newest sponsors. Masimo was the presenting sponsor of the McEnroe Challenge for Charity, held last Saturday, March 5, which featured an impressive roster of current and former tennis stars competing to benefit local charities. Masimo's Patient Safety Movement Foundation, with a mission to eliminate preventable deaths by 2020, was among the charities that benefitted from the event. To see highlights from the event, visit bnpparibasopen.com.

In addition to special prizes on Masimo Day, Wednesday, March 16, Masimo will be demonstrating their MightySat fingertip pulse oximeter at their booth throughout the tournament.

ORACLE

Oracle is bringing the best in college tennis to the big stage at the Indian Wells Tennis Garden, March 18–20. The BNP Paribas Open Collegiate Challenge—presented by Oracle in partnership with the Intercollegiate Tennis Association—brings top players from Baylor University, University of Southern California, University of Illinois, University of California Berkeley and Oklahoma University. New this year is the addition of women's teams from Baylor and USC.

STEVE FURGAL INTERNATIONAL TENNIS TOURS

Thursday, March 17, marks Steve Furgal International Tennis Tours Day, with giveaways inside Stadium 1. Plan another great tennis vacation to one of many professional tennis tournaments while you are here. Want to know where else in the world you can travel to see professional tennis up close? Visit the Steve Furgal booth for more information.

JEFFREY SCOTT FINE MAGNETICS

Jeffrey Scott Fine Magnetics gifts all of the professional main draw players with a uniquely designed bracelet each year and has it available at this beautiful store on site. Visit to see and buy the Players bracelet as well as learn about the benefits of magnetic jewelry.

MOËT & CHANDON

Have a #MoetMoment at the Moët & Chandon Circle of Palms—one of the most beautiful places onsite where you can enjoy a variety of Moët & Chandon champagnes all day long.

TENNIS WAREHOUSE

Visit Tennis Warehouse, located in The Courtyard, to test out a variety of demo racquets on their full-sized demo court. Special tournament pricing is offered on racquets from HEAD, Wilson, Babolat and more. Player appearances occur throughout the tournament, including on-court clinics and autograph sessions. Be sure to check the Daily Drawsheet for a list of player appearances at Tennis Warehouse.

USANA

When it comes to achieving their best health, the 700 elite athletes that make up Team USANA trust USANA nutritionals to help them play at the top of the game. Visit the USANA booth to learn more about the vitamins and supplements that some of the WTA's top players can't live without.

LAVAZZA

Need a cold brew on a hot day in tennis paradise? The Lavazza Café has that and more next to the Walk of Palms. This year, Lavazza has partnered with Rainforest Alliance to create Tierra blend cold brew coffee, a refreshing and delicious way to start or re-boot your tennis-viewing day.

Spend a few minutes at the Lavazza booth, where you can taste different blends and become a coffee connoisseur, Lavazza style!

There can never be enough sampling of coffee, so don't miss your chance to take home a Keurig coffee maker and K-cups during Tennis Talk on Sunday, March 13.

Thanks to all our sponsors—no matter what you love to do while not watching tennis at the BNP Paribas Open, there is no question that you will be fully engaged and entertained around the grounds from the minute you step through the gates. Ready? Play.

War Casualty Family Assistance Fund

Benefiting families of Marine Corps Air Ground Combat Center

Twentynine Palms, California

One of the most regrettable consequences of any war is the number of military personnel who have been wounded or killed in action.

The War Casualty Family Assistance Fund ("WCFAF") benefits the Marines, Sailors and their families onboard the Marine Corps Air Ground Combat Center ("MCAGCC"), Twentynine Palms, California. Donations benefit military personnel, programs for military families including academic scholarships, and beneficiaries of military casualties.

Any and all expenses attributed to fundraising for the WCFAF are underwritten personally by Raymond Moore to insure that one hundred percent of all donations directly benefit the military families.

Nathaniel Mehta came into the world five weeks early weighing only 3 lbs, 3 oz and spent his early weeks fighting for his life in the Neonatal Intensive Care Unit. His parents, Edith and Suneel Mehta were able to be by his side every day with the help of the ASY's Family Assistance Program.

The War Casualty Family Assistance Fund is a 501 (c) (3) and is tax-exempt. All members of this charity are volunteers.

BNP PARIBAS

GIVING BACK TO THE COMMUNITY

Brianda Beltran

Miguel Alvarez

For years, BNP Paribas has been a global leader in supporting tennis, at both professional and amateur levels. This year, the worldwide corporation has made an especially meaningful impact on the local Coachella Valley community through the creation of the BNP Paribas Open Scholarship program. BNP Paribas has selected one female tennis player and one male tennis player from Coachella Valley High School to receive a one-year, $15,000 college scholarship. For this year's recipients, Brianda Beltran and Miguel Alvarez, the honor is particularly significant, as each of the current seniors will be the first member of their families to attend college.

The 102-year-old Coachella Valley High School is one of the most under-resourced high schools in the country, drawing its students from an area covering nearly 1,200 square miles. With such a sprawling school district, students may travel up to two hours to get to and from school each day.

But even in the face of these obstacles, students such as Brianda and Miguel are able to thrive—and prove that hard work and dedication to education can reap incredible benefits.

"BNP Paribas is thrilled to present these two outstanding students with this scholarship," said Jean-Yves Fillion, CEO of BNP Paribas North America. "Miguel and Brianda have shown incredible dedication to both their education and the sport of tennis, and we are proud to help them as the take the next steps in what are sure to be very bright futures."

Growing up in the Coachella Valley, Brianda was mostly surrounded by people, like herself, of Mexican-American heritage. Experiencing how little diversity and open-mindedness existed in her community, Brianda was determined to step outside those limitations. She aspires to "positively change how I interact with others, step outside my comfort zone and offer acceptance to the world."

As part of her quest to expand her comfort zone, Brianda tried out for the girls' tennis team as a high school junior, never having picked up a racquet before. Through a lot of practice and hard work, Brianda advanced from an alternate to the junior varsity team and, ultimately, to a spot on the number two doubles team this past year.

"Tennis positively changed how I view life, and now I understand that in order to be confident I must work hard and give my full effort to obtain my goals," Brianda says. She credits tennis with giving her confidence to take on leadership roles in other areas of her life as well, such as Associate Student Body, Girl Power and National Honor Society.

This fall—with the support of the BNP Paribas Open Scholarship—Brianda hopes to attend the University of California, Irvine as a psychology major. Her goal is to complete her undergraduate degree, earn a master's degree and become a social worker in order to give back to the Coachella Valley community.

"I want to come back to this community where I live and my family lives and provide inspiration and motivation to other students that you can succeed," Brianda says. "I feel so blessed and grateful. This [scholarship] truly will make my life and my parents' lives easier."

Miguel Alvarez also hopes to build on the values and lessons learned in tennis to take advantage of all the opportunities life has to offer. Never having stepped on a tennis court before, he joined the team as a sophomore, hoping simply for a way to relieve stress. In addition to being a doubles player on the varsity tennis team at Coachella Valley High, Miguel served as the junior class president and founded the school's chapter of National Honor Society, which currently boasts more than 60 enthusiastic students.

Also a product of the Mexican-American majority in the Coachella Valley, Miguel strives to find the balance between valuing his cultural identity and refusing to be limited by it. One of his biggest points of pride in organizing the National Honor Society is seeing it act as a unifying presence at a very diverse high school campus. "Each student has given their own special insight and contribution to the group, which has made the whole of the club stronger because of its individual parts."

This fall, Miguel hopes to attend the University of Southern California and enroll in their World Bachelor of Business Program. He hopes to one day own his own business in the Coachella Valley and plans to establish a scholarship program for other students in the Valley to reach their full potential.

"Being successful here in my community will serve as an inspiration and motivation for students in the Valley to know that someone from here can achieve so much," Miguel says. "People here value education and are able to accomplish so much but often simply lack the necessary resources."

The connection between the Indian Wells Tennis Garden and Coachella Valley High School has been around for quite a while. National Junior Tennis and Learning network (NJTL) provides free or low-cost tennis and education programming for under-resourced youth across the country. The Coachella Valley chapter is run out of Indian Wells Tennis Garden and, for the past three years, the facility has hosted the Coachella Valley High School graduation as well.

"It's an honor for Coachella Valley High School and for our kids to be chosen for this recognition," said Larry Salas, Academic & Guidance Counselor and Boys' Tennis Coach at Coachella Valley High School. "Most of our kids aren't ever exposed to tennis until their first year of high school, but we have worked hard to use the sport to build character and teach life skills. For BNP Paribas to reward our kids, who have put forth the time and effort on the court and in the classroom, it is very special."

ROSEMARY "ROSIE" CASALS
Leveling the Playing Field

By Samantha Edington

Rosie Casals was born a fighter. She was raised by her great-aunt and great-uncle, whom she considered her mother and father. Her father hit the courts regularly at Golden Gate Park, sometimes with a young Casals in tow. When he finally handed her a racquet, Casals took off. She had discovered a force in tennis that would transform her life. Says Casals, "I was lucky my dad took me out to Golden Gate Park in San Francisco when I was about 9 years old and taught me how to play. I cherish those moments and always think back to when I started my wonderful journey and life in tennis."

Unlike her peers, she did not come from wealth and struggled to afford competition costs. But what Casals lacked financially she made up for with natural talent. This did not escape the notice of the other girls who practiced at the park, who befriended Casals and raised money for her entry fees or gave her white outfits.

Tennis became a vehicle for Casals. After building a reputation for herself in the tennis community, she was able to travel around California to compete. Looking back, Casals says, "Tennis has been good to me. It gave me a life and a career I could never have dreamed about. It made me who I am today and gave me a life and friends and the opportunity to travel and make wonderful friends." Recognizing the opportunities the sport afforded her, she was also passionate about fighting discrimination in tennis based on gender and socioeconomic background.

The five-foot-two-inch Casals was a firecracker on the court, and her indomitable spirit endeared her to fans. She first crossed paths with tennis legend Billie Jean King in 1962 when Casals fell to King in doubles play at a Pacific Coast tournament. Greatness recognizes greatness, so Casals and King partnered up to make history on court in doubles and off court fighting to earn women players equal pay.

Frustrated with the pay discrepancy between male and female players, Casals, King and seven other players threatened to boycott traditional and unequal tournaments. The United States Lawn Tennis Association (USLTA) ignored them, so the women took matters into their own hands. Helped by Gladys Heldman at World Tennis magazine and sponsored by Virginia Slims, they formed their own circuit in 1971. The Virginia Slims Circuit was a big success and would later lead to the creation of the WTA in 1973.

In the Virginia Slims tournaments and for years after, Casals dominated. She is known as one of the best woman doubles players with 112 doubles titles, but also has 11 singles titles to her name. During her professional career, Casals made the Top 10 twelve times and reached No. 3. Her many accomplishments earned her a place in the Tennis Hall of Fame in 1996.

> "We are lucky to have Rosie Casals in tennis, and I am thrilled she will receive this year's Alan King Tennis Passion Award."
> —BILLIE JEAN KING

Casals continues to be involved in tennis. She runs Sportswoman, Inc., a sports marketing and promotion company she founded. She and Tory Fretz also started the Love & Love Tennis Foundation to raise money for junior tennis in the Coachella Valley. In another fundraiser for juniors and in memory of her friend and former pro player Jackie Cooper, Casals will put on the Rosie Casals & Jackie Cooper Team Tennis Pro-Am at Indian Ridge Country Club. This event will allow local juniors, pros and amateurs to play together and participate in a Junior & Pro Shoot-Out.

Of Casals' achievement, King says, "Rosie Casals' passion for tennis and her ongoing commitment to the growth of the sport is a big part of the reason Rosie is a champion on and off the court. On the court she has earned her place in tennis history, but it is her work with young, promising players and her non-stop drive to make tennis in the Coachella Valley a vital part of the community that will forever be such an important part of her legacy. We are lucky to have Rosie Casals in tennis, and I am thrilled she will receive this year's Alan King Tennis Passion Award."

IN FOCUS

Mike Baz

1991 Champion Jim Courier

Mike Baz was eating lunch and browsing the newspaper in the spring of 1977 when he saw an advertisement for Nabisco Grand Prix Tennis in Stowe, Vermont. As a recreational tennis player and enthusiast, Baz looked to get closer to the action while earning a few bucks along the way, so he set up a meeting with tournament representatives to inquire about its need for a photographer.

There was only one problem: Baz had never taken a tennis photo in his life.

"I get into the meeting, and the lady asks, 'Why would we need a photographer?'" said Baz. "So I referenced that the tournament had a sponsorship deal, and it would be nice to use the photos to publicize future events. After she agreed, she asked if I had ever photographed tennis and I said, 'Sure, all the time!"

While Baz had just walked into the opportunity of a lifetime, he would quickly learn the do's and don'ts of tennis photography.

"After the first day, I went home and developed the film and I could see my mistakes," said Baz. "I was too far away. I was intimidated. I was sitting at Center Court by the net and the players looked like ants in the frame. When I processed the film, I thought I was in trouble."

Baz stayed at this event for two years before branching out to other tournaments. It wasn't long before he found himself on some of the biggest stages in tennis, but he quickly established himself as a mainstay in the desert when he worked for the Congoleum Classic at La Quinta in 1984.

"I met the CEO of Congoleum Corporation on a fishing trip, and he asked me what I did," said Baz. "I told him I was a tennis photographer, and I was hired shortly after. I flew out to the tournament on a private plane and stayed at La Quinta Resort. I thought I had won the lottery."

Baz went on to become the official tournament photographer in Indian Wells in 1990 and only missed one BNP Paribas Open from 1984 through 2008. He certainly has a lot of fond memories from the desert, including an anecdote about a young Jim Courier before the American became World No. 1 and a household name.

"It was 1991, match-point, and Courier had yet to win a big event at the time," said Baz. As a photographer, you never really know where the winning celebration will happen, and match point is obviously important. So Courier wins the point, and he must have jumped six feet off the ground and clinched his fist in the process. It was a perfect shot and memorable moment. He went on to win the French Open a couple of months later."

Baz was also a prominent figure with the WTA, photographing the first edition of the WTA calendar. After reflecting on his career as a tennis photographer, Baz noted his experience with the WTA calendar was his breakthrough assignment.

"It was in the early 1980s, and all the great players were photographed for the spread," said Baz. "Chris Evert was in the spread, Martina Navratilova. That calendar gave me a lot of publicity because the WTA revealed the spread at the U.S. Open, and all the New York papers released the photos."

As Baz began to gain more notoriety within the tennis media, so did his relationship with the players on tour. His rapport with players was known around the Tours, and Baz notes four-time BNP Paribas Open Champion Roger Federer as one player who would go above and beyond whenever Baz needed a good photo.

"We were in Thailand, and Federer won an indoor event there," said Baz. "Right in front of the hotel where we were staying was a shrine. After the match, I told Roger that I needed a favor. So I met him in the locker room and asked to take him and the trophy over to the hotel, and he did it, which shocked me. He wasn't even staying anywhere close to that hotel. Why would he do that for me? And I have a picture of him and me checking out the pictures on my camera. It was a cool moment."

During the time it took Baz to develop a relationship with the players, he also lived through the growing change in technology. Baz recalled his earlier years as the photographer in Indian Wells, when pictures from the tournament would not be available for at least a week after the event.

"As the technology shifted to digital, you could get a sense of what photography, particularly in sports, would become in the future. The rate of getting pictures out to fans and in the media more quickly became more apparent," said Baz.

Despite his long, successful career as a tennis photographer and mainstay at Indian Wells, Baz remains the same man who jumped at an opportunity back in Stowe, Vermont, for the game he loved. He remains humbled about his career and honored to receive the BNP Paribas Open Media Award, an annual award that recognizes media who have been integral in covering, promoting and supporting the tournament for a number of years, and Baz has remained a pioneer for tennis photography.

"I was shocked because I've never heard of another photographer being recognized by an event," said Baz. "To me, it's a huge deal. Writers get recognized, but it doesn't happen often with photographers. I was involved with Indian Wells for 30 years, so it's a great honor for me and also my wife. She was with me every step of the way, from developing black-and-white prints to traveling on the road. I'm truly honored to receive this award."

"CHISELED"

TILE MURALS BY ARTIST MIKE SULLIVAN

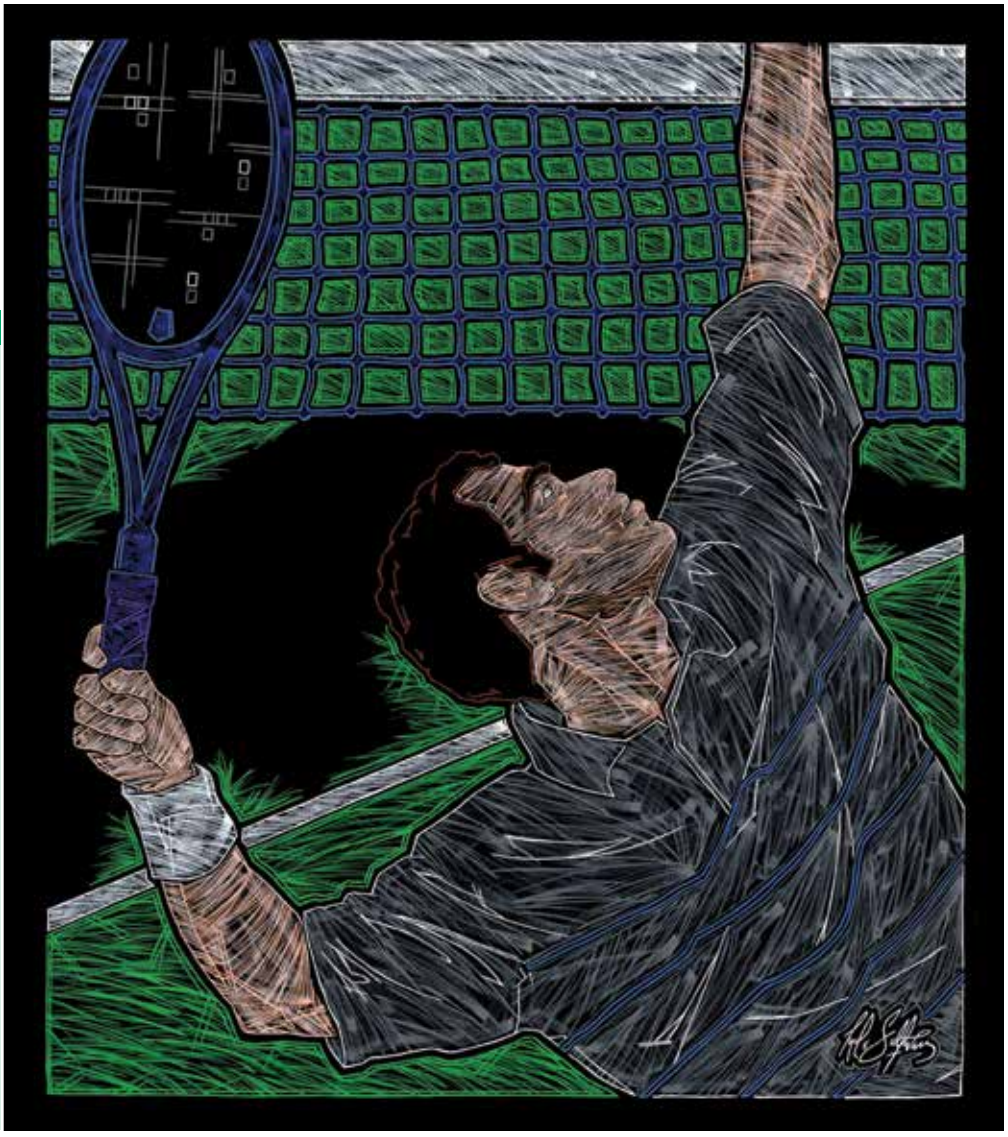

In its third year, the BNP Paribas Open will have artist Mike Sullivan create four murals featuring two legendary tennis players and the BNP Paribas Open defending champions, which will be unveiled at the tournament and showcased throughout the year.

The style in which Mike paints is unique and has been described as a chiseled technique. The style lends itself to look as if in motion. The detail of the brush strokes brings out the intensity of the colors being used.

His first piece commissioned in his signature style was of two-time Super Bowl Champion quarterback Ben Roethlisberger. Since then he has begun a National Mural Series, including Pat Tillman at ASU's Sun Devil Stadium and UCLA's Jackie Robinson Stadium. In addition, Mike is the Official Artist of the Ronnie Lott IMPACT Trophy, awarded annually to college football's best defensive player as defined by on-field ability and off-field character and leadership. The ceremony is broadcast nationally on the FOX network. Mike's work has appeared on ABC, ESPN, HBO, FOX, FSN and other networks. His art is collected by professional athletes and art collectors around the world.

The murals of Pete Sampras, Martina Navratilova and defending champions Simona Halep and Novak Djokovic will be unveiled during the 2016 BNP Paribas Open. Please view them at the Stadium Plaza.

You can own a specially made art print of each of these great champions and have it personally autographed by them this year. Proceeds will benefit The Champions Volunteer Foundation.

Visit Mike Sullivan's Art Gallery onsite, located in the East Village by Stadium 2. Mike will be showcasing some of his best work as well as the featured art prints of this year's Champions, and he will be making special appearances.

- Every visitor can enter into a free raffle drawing for a framed art print hand-signed by Mike Sullivan.
- Bid on an art print autographed by this year's featured athletes to benefit The Champions Volunteer Foundation.
- View art demos throughout the tournament.
- All art and merchandise on display in the Art Gallery will also be available to fans around the world at www.mikesullivanart.com.

WINNER OF "BEST OF THE WEST DESIGN AWARD"

This magnificent estate is approximately 8,000 sq. ft. and is situated over an acre of lush landscaping with a lit sunken tennis court.

Designed by world renowned architect, Nick Patel, who utilized the design element of "golden proportions", which captures the warmth and harmony of nature, this home is a contemporary Italian Mediterranean estate. The warm and luxurious tones throughout the home were inspired by the architect's bicycle rides through Verona, Italy and by the hues of Sedona.

The Estate has 6 bedrooms and 6.5 bathrooms, 6 fireplaces, 5 car garage space, Vichy spa room, reflection pool and 2 swimming pools with a grand cascading waterfall. Numerous terraced patios are on the entertaining deck with extensive use of Cantera stone.

The separate Casita Pavilion has 2 large private guest suites with an outdoor kitchen and fireplace. The open and flowing floor plan and indoor/outdoor living spaces are ideal for entertaining small intimate gatherings or a few hundred guests.

No expense was spared, the finest materials were incorporated with too many architectural details to name. This home won "The Best of the West Award" for architectural design. Offered turnkey furnished.

Already, his accomplishments exceed more than most will manage in a lifetime.
He has set the mark for Grand Slam victories, spent more weeks at number one than any other,
and secured his place as one of the game's all-time best.
And now he's embarked on yet another journey:
to help provide a quality education for hundreds of thousands of underprivileged children in Southern Africa.
But no matter what challenge he chooses to undertake, his Rolex is always with him, marking the moments he will always remember,
and the achievements still to come.
