MARVEL STUDIOS

This was the year of Hollywood's 'Sunken Place'

By Bob Strauss
Los Angeles News Group

Seasons greetings from the Sunken Place.

Hollywood, I mean. Of course, I'm referencing the state of paranoid, helpless limbo from the best — and still most ridiculously prescient — movie of 2017, "Get Out." But if any metaphor stands in for the state of the movie business as this gobsmacking year comes to an end, it's the Sunken Place.

Film folks, the great majority of whom, I think we can agree, are politically liberal, started 2017 in horrified disbelief that a reactionary reality TV host was the country's new president. Life seemed even more upside down as the crucial summer blockbuster season turned, with a few well-made exceptions, into a box office bust. A few hits — "It," "Thor: Ragnarok," "Wonder" — have emerged since then, but they haven't counterbalanced fall's theatrical disappointments yet.

And anyway, the pop culture center of attention shifted more than ever in recent months from movies to what's on streaming services such as Netflix, which has threatened to make more feature-length films next year than any major Hollywood studio. Even a combined Disney/Fox operation — and where the hell did the possibility of that mega-merger come from? — would be hard-pressed to match Netflix's commitment, and that outfit is just the most aggressive of multiple subscription streamers that are ramping up original production.

Warner Bros. reluctant to invest in another bunch of Tolkien movies? No problem. Amazon's "Lord of the Rings" series is on its way. Maybe it's more appropriate to swap out the Sunken Place for the Upside Down from "Stranger Things" — the hit Netflix series that's been consistently the best '80s movie ever remade — to describe Movieland's mood.

That's a good word, appropriate. More than anything, Hollywood's disorientation this year had to do with learning what it means.

The swift obliteration of indie film mogul Harvey Weinstein's awards-hauling career amid an avalanche of sexual misconduct allegations was soon repeated with other powerful movie men – from Kevin Spacey and Brett Ratner to beloved figures like Pixar's John Lasseter — and spilled over into not only TV but such showbiz-like fields as news media and politics. Exposure of this high-profile power abuse may have begun with Bill Cosby and at Fox News, but the template for such inappropriate behavior was established around a century ago by the movie business, and has thrived there ever since.

Until now. The rapid implosion of this system of exploitation may never entirely eradicate harassment and worse, but it's hard to believe it's not changing Hollywood culture in a seismic, still highly unpredictable way. And while that should be universally encouraging, there's no denying that it's making a lot of people nervous, too.

As has happened before in times of high anxiety and head-spinning transformations, though, the movies of 2017 were better than they had been for awhile. I'm talking about the good ones, which there were more of in the past 12 months than in that complacent, long ago era of, what, 2016 or 2015? Of course, most of these films were conceived of and made well before out current upheavals. But as also often happens with the movies, maybe something was in the air.

Whatever the reason, this year yielded a bumper crop of fine films by people of color ("Get Out," "The Shape of Water," "Columbus," "Okja," "The Glass Castle"), women ("Raw," "Prevenge," "Meagan Leavey," "Wonder Woman," "The Beguiled," "Detroit," "First They Killed My Father," "Novitiate," "Lady Bird," "The Breadwinner"), LGBQT folks ("A Quiet Passion," "Wonderstruck," "Call Me by Your Name") and artists who are all of the above ("Mudbound," "Strong Island," "Professor Marston and the Wonder Women"). In a number of cases, their films wouldn't be around if it wasn't for Netflix, which gives you some idea of how a paradigm shift is not necessarily something to get angsty about.

Of course, white male directors still dominate the filmmaking field. Many did great work in 2017, and we still can't assume any of them will turn out to be predators. But as this year kept proving, anything can happen and things are certainly changing. What will get the industry through whatever is to come will be, as it always has been, making movies worth seeing.

Nah, that's too optimistic. Probably better for everyone in the industry to take "Get Out's" lesson to heart: It's sink or swim, guys.

ART

Through January: Studio 94B is hosting an open house for its Second Saturday event starting at 5:30 p.m., Saturday, Jan. 13. Studio 94 B is excited to feature the work of Karen Horger, who paints under the name of "Anjelfyre." Horger paints in both oil and acrylic. She is an accomplished artist who has been influenced by great artists such as Monet, Picasso and Van Gogh. She gained a love of fantasy from her father, who introduced her to wonderful, fantastical lands such as those created by Anne McCaffrey and J.R.R. Tolkien. Her art is heavily influenced by these creative masters. During a rough patch in life, where Horger lost her sense of self, she turned to gaming under the name Anjelfyre. It was through this second identity that she regained her sense of self, and became brave enough to approach her life and her art with renewed energy. She now signs all her artwork as "Anjelfyre" because it was through that second identity that she relearned how to see the beauty in the world around her again. Studio 94 B is located at 17992 County Road 94 B, Woodland.

Laurie Metcalf gets her first Oscars shot with 'Lady Bird'

By Lindsey Bahr
AP Film Writer

LOS ANGELES » Laurie Metcalf has won three Emmys and a Tony Award in her nearly 40-year year career, but the veteran stage and screen actress still feels uncomfortable in front of a camera.

"Even after all those years on 'Roseanne,' I have a real fear of cameras. They make me inhibited," Metcalf, 62, said on a recent afternoon in Los Angeles. "I think 'Why don't I know where to put my hands?' All of a sudden the spotlight is right on you and every pore on your face in high definition and you think, 'Oh this is all I can think about.' I can't just turn it off. You'd think after all these years I'd be used to it!"

Metcalf has figured out ways to work around the phobia, but this year she's also found herself even more out of her element with the nominations and awards attention being given to her work in "Lady Bird." Not only is it her first film in a decade, but it's the first time she's had a serious shot at getting an Oscar nomination (she's already gotten supporting actress nods from the Screen Actors Guild, Golden Globes and Independent Spirit Awards).

In the film, Metcalf plays the mother, Marion, to a 17-year-old girl, Christine (Saoirse Ronan), who has begun systematically rejecting everything her mother has given her — from her hair (which she has died pink) to her name (she demands that everyone call her Lady Bird). Marion, meanwhile, under stresses from work and a general dissatisfaction with how their lives have turned out, is trying (sometimes poorly) to navigate this moment of teenage selfishness and motivate her daughter.

The story is loosely based on writer and director Greta Gerwig's own life growing up in Sacramento. And much like real life, a single scene can turn on a dime.

For a moment, Lady Bird and Marion are connecting and all of a sudden they're fighting again, or vice versa.

"They're misinterpreting each other. They're looking for buttons to push. They're passive aggressive," Metcalf said. "We know that Marion and Lady Bird have a strong relationship, but it's just dysfunctional at this particular moment that we're watching. But it hasn't always been like that and they'll grow out of it."

MERIE WALLACE/A24

Metcalf laughs that she still feels like she hasn't had that much experience in film and says she relied on others to "steer" her through the movie. And yet one of her most memorable scenes in the film is one where she is entirely alone, circling the Sacramento airport and having an emotional change of heart during the loop.

It's the kind of scene that looms on a production schedule for an actor.

"Greta said she wanted to do it in one take and that scared me," Metcalf said. "I thought 'I've driven around this airport and that's a long way. I don't know if I can be interesting for that long!'"

The execution was a complicated dance of both trying to physically drive while only being able to see out of a sliver of windshield with the camera set-up obstructing most of the view, and also being able to go through the emotional trajectory necessary (i.e. at this turn, the anger sets in, but by this sign you're deciding to get back and feeling hopeful and oh, don't forget to put the car in park before you jump out). And it's one that pays off beautifully.

The indie has earned $26.3 million in its nearly seven weeks in theaters as it continues to expand across the country.

While Metcalf might have some impostor syndrome with her recent success in film, her co-star Ronan is only in awe.

"Everything she does is groundbreaking. People talk about her performances the way they talk about Meryl Streep. And Laurie has always been attracted to good work. You can tell she's never done it to get more exposure, she's never done it for any other reason than she wants to do good work," Ronan said. "She enriches everything that she's in because she's genuinely in it. I just think she's magic."

Metcalf only met Gerwig's mother during the last two weeks of filming — far too late to inform any character choices. But it was revelatory in its own way.

"I saw her mother watching her daughter as the director of this movie happening in her hometown. I saw a really strong relationship and I could imagine the parallels," Metcalf said. "I was able to see, 'Oh that's where we're headed. Look at Greta and her mom standing in the parking lot. Things will be fine.'"

Sweet and savory: Baking is made easy in 'Baked in Vermont'

Gesine Bullock-Prado hosts "Baked in Vermont"

Is there anything quite like the smell of freshly baked goods coming out of the oven? That warm, mouthwatering scent that fills countless homes at this time of year is definitely one of my favorites, and while the smells that are no doubt filling Gesine Bullock-Prado's kitchen don't make their way through the TV screen (where's my Smell-O-Vision television?), by the look of her baked goods, they probably smell absolutely amazing.

The acclaimed pastry chef, baking instructor and cookbook author has been sharing some of her top baking tips all month in "Baked in Vermont," on Food Network. She believes that anyone can bake with just a bit of knowledge and some confidence — not to mention lots of flour and butter — and she's invited audiences into her Vermont home, where she shares tips and tricks to help make baking accessible to even the clumsiest of cooks.

In this week's episode, airing Saturday, Dec. 30, Prado invites some friends over to make tasty apple cider together in her barn. Always the perfect host, she bakes up an amazing apple-inspired brunch to share with her guests — and invites us along, too. First on the menu are poached eggs on English muffins with hollandaise: all made from scratch, of course.

On the sweeter side of things are a batch of apple cider doughnuts, served alongside a latticed apple slab pie. Of course, any good spread of tasty treats also needs an equally good thirst quencher, and Prado's sparking apple cider cocktail certainly fits the bill.

Baking may have a reputation for being mostly sweets, but all month Pardo's been sharing tips on how to make perfect savory pastries. She's made fluffy cheese puffs, succulent steak hand pies and an incredible hearty pork pie. Of course, that doesn't mean that the sweet side of things has been neglected. Quite the contrary. With gingerbread cookies, a decadent interior cake and even homemade caramels all having found a home in her kitchen, this is a baker who gives both the savory and sweet sides of baking their due.

Gesine Bullock-Prado makes baking seem so easy, and with her sage advice it usually is. The latest episode of "Baked in Vermont" airs Saturday, Dec. 30, on Food Network.

RECIPE

Honey Spice Cookies

By Democrat staff

The UC Davis Honey and Pollination center always has interesting foods involving honey. Here is a winter recipe for Honey Spice Cookies.

A note from Director Amina Harris:

The winter holidays signal a close to a year. This year, after so many wonderful events, we want to bring the year to a spicy and sweet end.

A recap of our events:

Mead courses for every level! From absolute beginner to opening a meadery – we covered it all.

Honey research: A sensory deep dive into understanding the essence of varietal honeys came to a sweet conclusion at the 'Honey Sensory Experience' in November.

With the Department of Entomology: The California Honey Festival last May drew over 20,000 people to the streets of neighbor Woodland to sample honeys and become educated in the world of bees and pollination. To help directly educate beekeepers we graduated our first students in the Master Beekeeper Program and held the annual Bee Symposium with keynote Steve Sheppard.

Our sweet and spicy gift to you for being such wonderful supporters over the year: Honey Spice Cookies direct from Amina's kitchen.

Throughout the year I search for recipes with honey. Adapted from a traditional molasses spice cookie, I assumed it would be almost identical substituting honey. It's better. I make these little delights small, so folks can have a few and truly enjoy all the exotic flavors of the recipe.

This one is a true winner.

HONEY SPICE COOKIES

Makes about 48 2" cookies

Ingredients

- 2 ¼ c. flour
- ⅔ c. brown sugar
- 1 egg
- 1 tsp. vanilla
- ½ c. UCD wildflower honey
- 1 ½ sticks butter at room temperature
- 1 tsp. baking soda
- 1 ½ tsp. cinnamon
- 1 ½ tsp. ginger
- ½ tsp. cloves
- ½ tsp. nutmeg
- ¼ tsp. fresh ground pepper
- ⅓ tsp. salt
- Raw sugar

Directions

Preheat the oven to 350 degrees. Cream butter and brown sugar together until smooth. Beat in egg, honey and vanilla. In a separate bowl combine flour, baking soda, spices and salt.

Add the dry ingredients to the wet slowly, mixing continuously until well combined.

The dough is very soft.

Pour the raw sugar into a small bowl. Take small amounts of the dough and roll them into balls about ¾-1 inch in diameter. Roll the balls in the raw sugar. Place on a parchment lined baking sheet about an inch apart.

Bake for about 13 minutes until cracks begin to show. The cookies should still be very soft. If you prefer a "snap," continue cooking for another few minutes. Once cool, they will harden!

Place on a cooling rack and enjoy thoroughly with friends and family.

Dog trainer pairs diabetics with four-legged 'breathalyzers'

By Rowena Coetsee
Bay Area News Group

CONCORD » They flunked out of other schools that train service dogs.

One disliked walking through puddles, another lost all focus whenever he spotted a cat.

But the animals Carol Edwards calls "career change dogs" are still fulfilling a far higher purpose than the average family pet — they're saving lives.

"Every single one of (my clients) would say (that) multiple times," said Edwards, executive director of the Concord nonprofit Early Alert Canines.

Since founding the organization in December 2010, she has been teaching Labradors and golden retrievers to alert diabetics when their blood sugar levels veer outside the norm so they can act before lapsing into a coma — or even worse.

Early Alert Canines has received funding this year from Share the Spirit, an annual holiday campaign that serves needy residents in the East Bay. The grant is administered by the Contra Costa Crisis Center, and donations support programs of more than 40 nonprofit agencies in Contra Costa and Alameda counties.

Edwards typically spends five hours a day, four days a week training dogs to place a paw on their owner when they smell trouble.

A visit to the center this fall found Edwards working for the first time with Laurene, a petite, 2-year-old Labrador/golden retriever mix.

Using a handheld device that makes a clicking sound to mark the exact moment a dog performs the desired behavior, Edwards introduced her student to a gauze pad saturated with the scent molecules that a diabetic woman had secreted when her blood sugar level dipped to 37 milligrams per deciliter, well outside what's considered the normal range for diabetics.

Born with a sense of smell that has been likened to being able to detect one teaspoon of sugar dissolved in a million gallons of water — roughly the equivalent of two Olympic-size pools — Laurene sniffed the chemicals from the donor's body.

Edwards instantly sounded the clicker and rewarded her with beef jerky niblets.

"Good girl! That's very good," she said as Laurene obeyed the prompts a second time.

Edwards then introduced another element to the equation, instructing the dog to "shake" after sniffing the pad.

And so it goes for six to eight months, during which dogs transition to a foster home that has an actual diabetic so they can get real-life experience before they're paired with their permanent owner.

They learn to continue pawing at someone whose glucose levels are dropping or rising quickly until he or she either eats or, if the concentration is abnormally high, self-administers a dose of insulin.

If the person doesn't respond, the animals are taught to seek out someone else for help. Although they initially will respond to the flux in anyone's blood sugar, Edwards' dogs ultimately learn to alert only their owner.

Lia Nelson's 6-year-old Labrador-mix rides shotgun when the Concord resident drives and will raise a paw when she needs to pull over and test herself, typically at least a half-hour before the change in glucose levels register on a monitoring device.

During a visit to the training center, O'Shea, her gaze fixed on Nelson, began silently reminding her until she ate a couple of candies.

"She is the best thing in the world. She's my angel," said Nelson, who, before getting her dog, once blacked out behind the wheel and totaled her Honda Civic upon crashing into a guardrail.

Getting one of these super sniffers requires patience: Early Alert Canines has placed 45 dogs to date — 22 of them with children and teens — but it receives about 500 applications annually, which translates into at least a year's wait for those willing to persevere.

Clients who pass the rigorous vetting process must put down a $2,000 deposit that's refunded only after they have undergone several months of training with the dog to ensure that it is performing accurately at least 80 percent of the time.

No animal always gets it right, and don't believe anyone who says otherwise, Edwards said, adding that on the rare occasion a dog doesn't meet minimum performance standards, it's because the owner isn't following her training instructions.

Nancy Harrison's yellow Labrador retriever alerts her up to about three dozen times a week — and she says he has a nearly perfect track record.

The Pleasanton resident credits Kade for bringing her back to reality after her blood sugar nosedived while she was driving home this summer.

The last thing she remembers is talking to her husband on the phone; three hours later, Harrison emerged from a hallucinatory fog to find herself parked by the side of a road in Sunol with Kade whimpering and nuzzling her shoulder.

His persistent nudging had roused her, prompting Harrison to eat some cookies she had on hand.

"My emotional tie to him is so strong that it was like my baby crying — I have to fix it," she said.

Such an honor: CBS presents 2017's Kennedy Center Honors

By Andrew Warren
TV Media

SUCH AN HONOR» Near the end of every year, one of the greatest cultural honors in the United States is given to those who have spent their lives contributing to the rich vitality that is American culture. Since 1978, the Kennedy Center Honors have been bestowed upon deserving artists in late November or early December, and this year's honorees couldn't be any more deserving of the recognition.

Unlike many other big-ticket awards ceremonies, the Kennedy Center Honors are not broadcast live. Instead, the star-studded gala, which was held on Dec. 3, broadcasts Tuesday, Dec. 26, on CBS. It features other performers and artists recognizing the honorees through tributes and performances; the honorees themselves do not perform.

So just who are the national icons being recognized this year? For people who watch a lot of TV, LL Cool J, who's starred in "NCIS: Los Angeles" since 2009, will be a familiar face, and he's being honored for his contributions to hip-hop music, while five-time Grammy winner Lionel Richie is also being recognized for the contributions that he's made to the music industry.

Norman Lear, the man behind some of the 20th century's most enduring sitcoms, including "All in the Family," "The Jeffersons" and "Sanford and Son," is also being recognized, along with seven-time Grammy winner Gloria Estefan and dance icon Carmen de Lavallade.

The televised gala is just one part of an event-filled weekend for the honorees, including a State Department dinner and a special luncheon, but this year's Kennedy Center Honors included one fewer event than usual. The president and first lady typically host a reception for the honorees at the White House, but due to ongoing political tensions, the White House declined to participate in this year's events to help prevent politics from overshadowing the achievements of the five honorees.

40th Annual Kennedy Center Honors recipient Lionel Richie

The Kennedy Center Honors gala broadcasts Tuesday, Dec. 26, on CBS.

NO 'FEAR'» There are some changes in store for the upcoming fourth season of "Fear the Walking Dead," but have no fear: they're mostly additions, with one new actor, another sort-of-new actor and two new showrunners all boarding the AMC series, which returns sometime in 2018.

First up is Garret Dillahunt, who joins the prequel to the monstrously popular "The Walking Dead." The veteran actor has starred in a broad range of genres, from comedy ("The Mindy Project," "Raising Hope") to western ("Deadwood") to science fiction ("Terminator: The Sarah Connor Chronicles"), but for now, his "Fear the Walking Dead" role is being kept tightly under wraps.

Meanwhile, "The Walking Dead" actor Lennie James ("Jericho") has departed from that series, but he's far from done with the franchise. He's joined the cast of the prequel series, where he'll be stepping right back into Morgan's shoes and exploring the character from an entirely different angle.

It isn't just on the screen that "Fear the Walking Dead" has some new faces, though. Dave Erickson, who created the spinoff and has served as showrunner for all three seasons, left at the conclusion of the most recent season. Taking his place are industry veterans Andrew Chambliss and Ian B. Goldberg, both of whom have worked on ABC's "Once Upon a Time," among other series.

That's four new faces (so far) for a fourth season of "Fear the Walking Dead." Watch for the hit AMC series to return later in 2018.

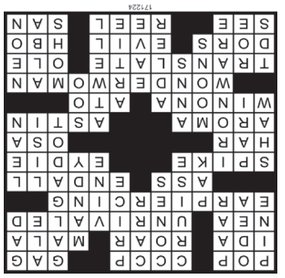

NICKY, RICKY AND DONE» Two kids' series have reached their final tracks. Nickelodeon has pulled the plug on both "School of Rock" and "Nicky, Ricky, Dicky & Dawn," but while it may be the end of the line for both series, at least they aren't finished quite yet.

While neither has been renewed for additional seasons, both will continue to air new episodes into 2018. In "Nicky, Ricky, Dicky & Dawn's" case, the fourth season will premiere sometime in the new year (no date is yet announced as of press time), hopefully giving that show's fans a satisfying conclusion.

As for "School of Rock," the series based on the 2003 Jack Black film of the same name is currently in its third season and will conclude sometime in the new year with a special one-hour episode.

"School of Rock" stars Tony Cavalero ("Hart of Dixie") as a middle school teacher who persuades some of his students to form their own band, teaching them some valuable life lessons along the way, while "Nicky, Ricky, Dicky & Dawn" follows quadruplets and their parents as they get into — and out of — some pretty hilarious situations.

For fans of the two series, their cancellations can't be good news, but there is a silver lining. Many shows get pulled without a chance to wrap up plotlines in a satisfying way, but with the advance notice here, that hopefully won't be the case for "School of Rock" and "Nicky, Ricky, Dicky & Dawn."

'Jumanji' star Karen Gillan finds her home in US

By Rob Lowman

Karen Gillan would love to play a role like Jack Nicholson's mad writer in "The Shining."

"That would be amazing," she says.

At the moment, though, the actress is getting her comic kicks in "Jumanji: Welcome to the Jungle," opening Wednesday.

In the Jake Kasdan film, Gillan plays a 1990s-era video-game femme fatale named Ruby Roundhouse, who is actually the avatar for a socially awkward 17-year-old named Martha that has been sucked into the magical game along with three others.

So how does that work exactly, is she the femme fatale or the teen girl?

The Scottish native explains how it works: She played the character as a teen, but that teen looked like Ruby, who is kind of a grown-up Lara Croft in short-shorts and a bare midriff.

"Ruby didn't have any personality traits except as a martial-arts dance fighter. Martha didn't even know how to use her limbs," says Gillan of how her teen tried to get used to operating Ruby's form.

And if you're wondering what a "martial-arts dance fighter" is, so was Gillan. She was told: First you dance, then you fight.

"Jumanji: Welcome to the Jungle" is a re-imagining of the 1995 film with all-new characters playing the game. Dwayne Johnson, Jack Black, Kevin Hart play the other avatars.

With a cast like that, Gillan says "every day was a lot of fun. It was surprising that a movie came out at the end."

One very funny scene in the movie is when Ruby/Martha has to distract a couple of guards by acting sexy. She is given advice by one of the other characters — a teen-age girl who has been zapped into the form of Black's middle-age professor avatar.

The actress says she and Black were given free reign improvise during the scene, including the walk she came up with, calling it "the least seductive thing ever."

The 30-year-old Gillan first came to prominence in 2010 when she was cast as Amy Pond, the companion on the hit BBC America sci-fi series "Doctor Who." She played the role for three seasons. In 2014, she had a cute, but short-lived series called "Selfie" on ABC, and took on the role of Nebula — a bad-ass space pirate —in "Guardians of the Galaxy."

Originally, the character was to be killed off, but she got a reprieve. Now, Gillan's Nebula has more screen time not only in "Guardians 2" but in the upcoming "Avengers: Infinity War" and the untitled sequel, which she currently filming.

"I know it's crazy, but I didn't expect it," she says about playing Nebula in four films, "But I'm not complaining either."

She describes Nebula as "a bad girl" but one with a heart and conscience, "which is buried inside her because of her terrible relationship with her father," who is being played by Josh Brolin in the upcoming Avengers films.

You'll be glad to know that it's Gillan's own red hair in "Jumanji" plus "a few extensions." For the first "Guardians" film, though, she had to shave her head, but no longer has to. "They're being kind to me now," she says.

The actress says she has wanted to be in the film business since she was a little kid. While watching television as a child, she asked her father, "How do you get in there?"

Growing up she had a video camera and made horror films. While the 5'11" actress, who modeled for a while before landing roles, loves being something of an action star, she says, "I'm definitely interested in transitioning behind the camera. It's definitely my main inspiration now."

Gillan made two short films that were released on the Internet to good reviews, and she was able to get funding to make a feature film. She shot "The Party's Just Beginning" earlier this in Scotland and finished up post-production on it with the hopes of releasing it next year.

She stars in it with Lee Pace, and she wrote the script about a woman dealing with the suicide of her best friend.

"It's pretty dark. It's bleak," she admits. "I'm really cheery as a person but whatever I create is so dark; it's like, 'What the hell!'" she says with a laugh.

Gillan calls Stanley Kubrick her favorite director and lists "A Clockwork Orange," "The Shining" and "2001" as her favorite films; so you know where the Jack Nicholson ambition came from.

Being on set has been a great way to learn about filmmaking, says Gillan, who now resides in New York City.

"I like the mentality of American people and how they embrace ambition and encourage you," she says. "So I moved over here for career reasons; I found New York is where I'm supposed to be for the rest of my life."

Always Something to Celebrate!

Meyer Award and Emeritus of Year

The Academic Federation and the Emeriti Association are honoring two faculty members at UC Davis Health:

▪Deborah Ward, clinical professor in the Betty Irene Moore School of Nursing, will receive the 2017 James H. Meyer Distinguished Achievement Award, the Academic Federation's highest honor.

▪Robert Cardiff of the Department of Pathology and Laboratory Medicine in the School of Medicine, and the Center for Comparative Medicine, has been named the recipient of the Distinguished Emeritus Award for 2018.

The Meyer award, given annually and named after the late Chancellor James H. Meyer, recognizes federation members for achievement in their careers, and for service to the university. "Dr. Ward's career and leadership exemplify the spirit of this award," the award committee declared.

The federation comprises some 1,600 academics with titles such as clinical professor, adjunct professor and adjunct instructor, lecturer and librarian, professional researcher and project scientist, academic administrator and academic coordinator, and Cooperative Extension specialist.

Ward has been associated with the School of Nursing since its opening in 2010, as the first faculty member and the founding associate dean. Her "efforts transformed the idea of a School of Nursing into a reality," the award committee stated. "Simultaneous implementation of all of the elements of the School of Nursing and guidance through multiple levels of review were achieved with the help of her leadership.

"Her dedication continues to contribute to the growth of the School of Nursing and to transforming it into a highly competitive program. More students are being accepted. Programs and curriculum are expanding. New faculty are being recruited."

The committee further stated that Ward has played a vital role in mentoring new faculty and graduate students, and has demonstrated consistently high teaching excellence and displayed outstanding academic leadership.

"She played an essential leadership role in the curriculum design for all five programs of the new school," the committee stated. "She led fellow faculty colleagues, students and staff to advance health care through leadership and innovative system change."

Ward continues to teach several courses continually receives some of the highest student evaluations, according to the committee. "Students note how approachable she is, appreciate the knowledge she has to offer and her natural ability to relay information and stimulate scholarly dialogue," the committee stated. "Dr. Ward also continues to conduct graduate advising and to assist students with their thesis work and through the thesis process."

The committee also cited Ward's extensive service to her school and UC Davis Health overall, including membership on the School of Nursing's Diversity and Inclusion Task Force; the School of Medicine's Internal Curriculum Review Subcommittee; and the Continuing Medical Education Board.

At the university level, she is a member of the Status of Women at Davis Administrative Advisory Committee and its health system subcommittee; and previously served on the 2020 and community engagement committees, among others.

Ward

Cardiff

Given the sheer volume of his continuing academic activities, in publishing, and as a faculty mentor and a champion for his colleagues, Cardiff's receiving the Distinguished Emeritus Award may come as a surprise to some people. "It is fair to say that most investigators are not aware that Dr. Cardiff has retired," the association declared in its announcement.

In fact, he took emeritus status in 2012 — as a professor in the Department of Pathology and Laboratory Medicine, School of Medicine, and the Center for Comparative Medicine — thus qualifying him for the annual award that honors outstanding scholarly work or service since retirement.

Cardiff is a world-renowned pathologist, a specialist in the diagnosis of breast and mammary cancer in both human and animal models. "His distinguished career, based almost exclusively at UC Davis, has led to significant and meaningful effects on the lives of countless women, physicians and scientists around the world," the announcement stated.

In his work with graduate students, he imparts "a sense of wisdom that often seems lacking in science nowadays." He assists senior and junior faculty alike with critical reviews of data, manuscripts and grants, and he participates in multiple weekly and monthly conferences — and he does all of this virtually from his home in Palm Desert.

He continues to promote the need for international harmonization of the understanding of the breast and its pathology, and is working with colleagues in the United States and Europe to facilitate a gathering of the minds.

Cardiff continues to publish papers both as a scientist and a collaborator, consistently sought after by colleagues around the world for his expertise and perspective, and he still serves on the editorial board of the Journal of Mammary Gland Biology and Neoplasia.

2017 breakthrough entertainers

Beanie Feldstein of 'Lady Bird'

By Brooke Lefferts
The Associated Press

BRIAN ACH — INVISION

Actress Beanie Feldstein poses for a portrait to promote "Lady Bird" in New York on Nov. 7. Feldstein was named as one of 2017's breakthrough entertainers by the Associated Press.

NEW YORK » Beanie Feldstein was a Broadway buff since she was a kid. She was obsessed with musicals, hung with the "theater crowd" in high school and spent years watching shows on the Great White Way. So when she was cast opposite Bette Midler in the revival of "Hello, Dolly," she had already hit a career milestone.

"It's like if my 7- or 9-, 10-, 14-year-old self knew that this was happening she would be hysterically crying," Feldstein said. "It just has always been my dream, and then to be there with Bette Midler, and David Hyde Pierce and Gavin Creel and Kate Baldwin who are all huge theater legends — if you are in that world, it's just like, everything I could have asked for."

The universe gave Feldstein even more in 2017. Besides starring on Broadway, the 24-year-old is also getting raves for her role in "Lady Bird," one of the most acclaimed movies of the year and a likely Oscar nominee. Feldstein plays Julie, the best friend of the title character, Christine "Lady Bird" McPherson, played by Saoirse Ronan.

It's been an enchanted year indeed for Feldstein, but there was a time when singing and acting — her lifelong dream — was in jeopardy.

"When I was 9 and 10, I couldn't speak, and I completely had to relearn to sing and talk," said Feldstein, who said she struggled with vocal issues while growing up. "So, that was the moment when I was like, will I be able to do this?"

She eventually regained her voice and fresh out of college, landed her first movie role. Following in the footsteps of her older brother, actor Jonah Hill, she started her film career in comedy with "Neighbors 2: Sorority Rising."

Soon after, she got the part in "Lady Bird" and her performance has gotten attention from critics and fans.

In another gift from 2017, Ronan and Feldstein not only hit it off, but became BFFs off-screen.

"But it felt really, really special to feel, leaving the experience of the movie of like not only does this feel huge to me career-wise and to get this experience, but leaving with Saoirse added to that family," Feldstein said. "It was just like, you couldn't ask for more than that, you know?"

Kumail Nanjiani of 'The Big Sick'

By Nicole Evatt
The Associated Press

CHRIS PIZZELLO — INVISION

Actor-comedian Kumail Nanjiani, co-writer and star of the film "The Big Sick," poses at his home in Los Angeles on Nov. 21. Nanjiani was named as one of 2017's breakthrough entertainers by the Associated Press.

LOS ANGELES » "The Big Sick" star Kumail Nanjiani is heading into awards season with a mix of fear and excitement.

After grossing nearly $43 million at the box office, the charming crowd-pleaser picked up two Film Independent Spirit Award nominations and is considered a front-runner for Academy Award nods.

"It's very scary. It's not something that we had really considered at all," said Nanjiani of his film's Oscar buzz. "It's cool to be in the conversation with so many great movies."

What started as a deeply personal, indie love story, co-written by Nanjiani and his wife Emily Gordon, became the must-see romantic comedy of the summer.

"It has certainly exceeded expectations," said Nanjiani during a recent interview at his Los Angeles home. "It's been a lovely surprise."

Set in Chicago, "The Big Sick," which also earned two Screen Actors Guild nominations, follows the couple's unique courtship through cultural conflicts, family ties and sickness. Nanjiani stars alongside Zoe Kazan in the Michael Showalter-directed film.

"When we were showing it at Sundance, we were sitting next to each other at the first screening and she (Gordon) was like, 'This is the last time it will be our story,'" he recalled. "Definitely, you can't take it back. You know, we meet strangers and they think they know us because they do kind of know us."

Fans also know his family, who can be seen lovingly portrayed on the big screen — and possibly in real life at a theater near you.

"I get these tweets from people being like, 'I saw the movie and then there was like this older Pakistani couple that was like, 'Did you like it? That was our son!' So they've been like paying to go see it over and over," he said.

Nanjiani is now back to work filming season five of HBO's "Silicon Valley" as he and Gordon plot their next move.

"There's a feeling of confidence. There's also pressure. I don't know how to follow this," he said with a bulletin board of colorful post-it notes bearing plot points and character ideas looming nearby.

"It's going to be hopefully funny and hopefully serious, but it's a totally different genre," said Nanjiani, who is careful not to divulge too much just yet. "I don't think we can write another lady-going-into-a-coma movie for a little while."
