Understanding the mind of a killer

Serial killer expert Dr. Scott Bonn comes to Vacaville this weekend to help audiences understand prolific killers

By Saija Maki-Waller
swaller@thereporter.com

Serial killer and media expert Dr. Scott Bonn is coming to Vacaville to discuss the inner workings of America's most famous killers.

This weekend's show is one of around 40 across the country. Each show is separated into two acts. In Act One, Bonn analyses the mind of serial killers and debunks myths surrounding them. In Act Two, he takes questions from the audience, tailoring his show to what they want to learn.

"I frequently say I'm a criminologist with a bit of a twist," says Bonn. Long before he became a serial killer expert, Bonn worked as Vice President of Marketing for NBC TV Network in New York. He says seeing the public's reaction to celebrity killers like O.J. Simpson peaked his curiosity.

But it was September 11, 2001 that convinced Bonn to make a career change.

"I was very moved by the events of 9/11, as many people were, so I ultimately got my PhD in criminology and I became a college professor," he says.

"It was when I was teaching my students about very bad people, like Ted Bundy and Jeffery Dahmer, I noticed just the almost gleeful expression on their faces."

It was the culmination of his experience in media and marketing and his deep understanding of criminology that convinced him to study not only the minds of the killers themselves, but our fascination with them.

Bonn's book, "Why We Love Serial Killers: The

Curious Appeal of the World's Most Savage Murderers," covers just that idea and is the basis for his show, "Serial Killers with Dr. Scott Bonn."

In Act One of the show, Bonn discusses his contact with serial killers David Berkowitz (Son of Sam) and Dennis Rader (Bind, Torture, Kill). In each of their cases, Bonn says, it wasn't enough to kill their victims, but they sought notoriety, wishing to terrorize an entire community.

While it may be interesting to dive right into the details of their cases, Bonn says one aspect of his talk is very important: Myth busting.

"There's so many myths that they are all young white males, that are all motivated by sex, that they want to get caught. So I spend a considerable time debunking these myths," says Bonn.

Bonn said that in actuality, what makes a killer kill is complicated, and talking about it while remaining sensitive to the victims requires balance.

"You have to walk a fine line," he says. "I've been told that I do it quite well, but you have to walk the line between informing and even entertaining. I try to do it in a very tasteful, non-sensationalized way."

Bonn says at each show he reminds the audience to be aware and respectful of those that lost their lives, or the lives of loved ones.

"I always remind the audience, Ted Bundy is pretty much a household term. You know, even people who don't really know his story, if you mention evil, the name Ted Bundy comes up or Jeffery Dahmer and yet, Ted Bundy had 36 victims. Try to name one," he says. "It's important to remember that they destroy real people's lives."

While the first part of his show is educational, Bonn says he enjoys hearing from the audience throughout the Q&A, and it's not unusual for him to receive 100 to 200 questions.

"I can't possibly answer them all, so I try to do it in as rapid fire an approach as possible, but for about 45 minutes, we answer all the questions," he says.

"It's really cool because you never know that you're going to get asked. It tends to take on a local flavor," he says., adding that he wouldn't be surprised to receive questions about Ed Kemper (The Co-ed Killer) or Richard Ramirez (Night Stalker) at his show in Vacaville.

While there are people who are not interested, or even repulsed, by the idea of trying to understand the mind of a serial killer, Bonn says that his audience, and the audience of most true crime, is unsurprisingly female.

"My audience is pretty consistently 75 percent women everywhere I go," he says. "I think it's partially empathy with the victims...and also a desire for protection and to be able to identify potential perpetrators and intruders."

"Psychologically, it may even be working on a subconscious level, that if we can somehow understand the compulsions and the drives of these individuals, that maybe it's not as terrifying after all," he says. "It's the fear of the unknown, it's the ambiguity of the unknown and not knowing. That is really terrifying."

Markle gives back: 'With Love, Meghan' premieres following delay from California wildfires

By Caroline Colacutt

TV Media

Meghan Markle ("Suits"), the Duchess of Sussex, welcomes friends, family and celebrity guests to join her at a beautiful Californian estate, where they share cooking, gardening and hosting tips during every episode of "With Love, Meghan" — arriving Tuesday, March 4, on Netflix after an unexpected (but meaningful) delay.

According to a description given by Netflix, "With Love, Meghan," will "[blend] practical how-to's and candid conversation with friends, new and old."

They continue: "Meghan shares personal tips and tricks, embracing playfulness over perfection, and highlights how easy it can be to create beauty, even in the unexpected. She and her guests roll up their sleeves in the kitchen, the garden and beyond, and invite you to do the same. In each episode, we join Meghan in the kitchen, garden — and even at the beehive — as she prepares to host friends both old and new. Whether Meghan is sharing personal tips and tricks, or taking the opportunity to learn something new, it's a time for connection."

At Meghan's request, however, the season's debut was postponed from its original Jan. 15 premiere date due to the ongoing devastation caused by the Los Angeles wildfires that began on Jan. 7 of this year.

"I'm thankful to my partners at Netflix for supporting me in delaying the launch, as we focus on the needs of those impacted by the wildfires in my home state of California," Meghan says.

In the meantime, the Duke and Duchess have been busy meeting with survivors and emergency medical workers impacted by the disaster, and have, according to Town and Country Magazine, "made donations to relief efforts through their Archewell Foundation and have donated clothing, children's items and other essential supplies to those affected by the fires." Additionally, "they have opened their Montecito home to loved ones who were forced to evacuate due to the blaze," and are "working alongside World Central Kitchen to help with relief efforts."

While life is not fully back to normal for those impacted by the recent fires in Los Angeles, Markle's series — called a "heartfelt tribute to Southern California" by the platform — is sure to celebrate the beauty, culture and community found in The Golden State.

Produced by Markle herself, "With Love, Meghan" debuts Tuesday, March 4, on Netflix.

STAGE

Father and son take center stage in 'Hamlet' retelling in Dixon

'Hamlet: Paranormal Activity,' a modern retelling of the original story, hit the stage last weekend, with three more performances to go

By Saija Maki-Waller

swaller@thereporter.com

After opening "Hamlet: Paranormal Activity" at the Dixon Community Theater last weekend, the father and son team of David Cripe Jr. and Sr. are stepping back on stage for their second and final weekend of shows.

Finding common ground between a father and his 17-year-old son can be a challenge, but the Dixon Community Theater offered the Cripe family an outlet.

"It's given us something to have in common," says Cripe Sr. "It's pretty nice that we have something to talk about. We drive to the theater together and back home and talk about how it went, that sort of thing."

"Hamlet: Paranormal Activity" is a modern retelling of Shakespeare's story, adapted into modern English, while keeping some of the most famous original lines. This version, says Cripe Sr., emphasizes the relationship between Hamlet and the ghost of his father.

Although he had originally signed on as the stage manager, after the production lost a couple actors, Cripe Sr. took on not one, but two roles. "I'm pinch-hitting now as King Claudius and the Ghost," he says.

While Cripe Sr. has some acting experience, traced back to theater classes in college, his son, Cripe Jr. is new to the spotlight.

Although he's wanted to act since he was a young kid "it's only been about a year or so since I've really gotten myself into the experience of plays," says Cripe Jr. So, getting cast as the lead in "Hamlet" came with some mixed emotions.

"I was excited but I was also very nervous because I didn't have a lot of confidence, having so little experience. I wasn't exactly sure what I was getting myself into, having a lead role like that," says Cripe Jr.

For both actors, learning their lines was nerve-racking. "To be honest, it was distressing," Cripe Sr. laughs. But in the end, they agree that everything came together on opening night.

"I think it was probably our best performance we have had," Cripe Jr. said. "I was very nervous being, you know, the lead role in the spotlight, but I think overall as a cast we did a very good job."

As they head into their final weekend of performances, Cripe Sr. says the pair is "hoping to have more fun." Last Sunday's performance was a good example, he said. After the nerves of opening the show wore off a little bit, they had a good time and hope this upcoming weekend is a repeat of that.
