Vacaville Museum tackles 'The Art of Death'

Upcoming exhibit hopes to create a space to discuss death and the human reaction to it

From contemplating mortality to seeing our parents, and ourselves, grow old, it's often tricky to discuss death and dying. Vacaville Museum's upcoming exhibit tackles this conversation head on in "The Art of Death."

The exhibit opens June 14 and will run for six months, longer than the museum's average installation. That's because "The Art of Death," will be more involved, with pieces on loan from locations across the Bay and Sacramento areas and programming to engage visitors.

"It's really just an opportunity for us as a museum to provide our community with a space to talk about a topic that's kind of taboo," says Museum Director Clara Dawson. The idea for the installation came from talks with the museum's community partners, many of whom work in the death industry.

Through conversations with professionals who work in funeral homes, coroner's offices and in cremation, Dawson and the museum team decided to address the stigma toward those in the business of death.

"Everyone that we've talked to kind of brings up this hesitancy that they are met with when they talk about what they do, and so we really want this exhibit to be an opportunity to showcase and highlight some local people here who are a part of our community," she said.

The exhibit will have entry points for all ages, says Dawson, and is not meant to be dark or spooky by any means. It will address death through four main pillars: history, art, science and culture.

For example, the museum will feature a Victorian mourning gown and accessories as well as the work of local artists, who were inspired by the topic of death and dying. There will also be entomological (the study of insects) aspects of the exhibit and more.

"The Art of Death" is one of the more elaborate exhibit builds that Dawson has tackled due to extensive community partnership, she says. Those partnerships and collaborations include Silveyville Cemetery District, Pettigrew and Sons Casket Company, Vacaville-Elmira Cemetery District and Bryan-Braker Funeral Home, who is sponsoring the exhibit.

"It's definitely a lot more work when you have these amazing pieces and stories coming from outside the museum," says Dawson. Despite the hard work acquiring the pieces, it makes for an interesting and elaborate display, she says.

In addition to the items featured in the exhibit, "The Art of Death" will have programming to go along with it, with dates still to be determined.

There will be a speaker series, where community partners will answer questions and discuss their profession. The museum will also host a monthly bookclub, alternating between fiction and nonfiction, with each book in some way addressing death or our human reaction to it.

With "The Art of Death," the museum hopes to attract a crowd from outside Vacaville and even Solano County, bringing in audiences from the Sacramento and Bay Areas, says Dawson.

Saved by the spy: Gordon Ramsay goes undercover in 'Gordon Ramsay's Secret Service'

By Kimberly Tremblay
TV Media

Trading in his knives for his state-of-the-art surveillance van and high-tech spyware, Gordon Ramsay ("Hell's Kitchen") is going undercover in his boldest mission yet. "Gordon Ramsay's Secret Service" premieres Wednesday, May 21, on Fox, with the world-renowned chef exposing the unspeakable horrors behind the menu.

Hosted by Ramsay — who is famously known for confronting chefs head-on in "Hell's Kitchen," "Kitchen Nightmares" and "Next Level Chef" — is now flipping the script in his latest series. But this time, the element of surprise is on his side. Armed with hidden cameras, secret informants and forensic-level kitchen investigations, Ramsay is exposing the horrors lurking behind some of America's most troubled restaurants — all without tipping off the staff.

Gordon Ramsay stars in "Gordon Ramsay's Secret Service"

"With the help of a secret source on the inside, he'll gather raw, unfiltered evidence and get a 360-degree view of the major issues facing each restaurant," explains a description from Fox. "This insider will not only remain a secret to the staff but will also help Ramsay infiltrate the restaurant after-hours for a dramatic nighttime black light kitchen investigation that reveals more filth and grossness than ever before. By the time Ramsay reveals his identity, it will be too late for staff to cover up their culinary crimes."

Ramsay has never been one to shy away from a challenge, but going undercover to rescue failing restaurants pushes him into uncharted territory and one question remains: are the staff willing to accept Ramsay's mission, or are they too far gone to be saved?

"For years, I've embarked on daring adventures with Fox," Ramsay said. "But 'Secret Service' is the most intrepid of them all. With undercover help and cutting-edge technology, I get to go full-on 'MI6' with these restaurants — and they'll never see it coming."

The world-renowned chef is dominating the culinary TV scene, with "Gordon Ramsay's Secret Service" serving as the latest addition. Ramsay also has six other shows on Fox — "Next Level Chef," "Hell's Kitchen," "MasterChef," "MasterChef Junior," "Kitchen Nightmares" and "Food Stars."

Produced by Studio Ramsay Global and Fox Alternative Entertainment, with Ramsay and Bill Langworthy ("The Hills") credited as executive producers, "Gordon Ramsay's Secret Service" serves up a flavorful first season Wednesday, May 21, on Fox.

Benicia Arsenal artists open their doors

A tradition since the 1970s, the Arsenal Artists Open Studios will once again welcome visitors to the historic studio spaces

By Saija Maki-Waller
swaller@thereporter.com

For 50 years, artists have come and gone Benicia Arsenal studios. Despite the ebb and flow, this year's artists will once again open their doors to the public this weekend.

Open studios provides visitors with a unique opportunity to see the work of artists that don't regularly show their art in town, says artist Susan Sachs: "I think when people do find us, if they're into art, they're really surprised at the quality of art that's going on inside the Arsenal."

While Sachs works with mixed media art, there are photographers, abstract artists, sculptors, oil painters and so many more at the Arsenal. Examples of each artist's work are available for viewing on the Benicia Arsenal Artists website.

In total, 30 artists will showcase their work throughout the Arsenal and nearby buildings for Open Studios.

The Benicia Arsenal, originally a U.S. Army facility, now houses local artists, whose studios are positioned among original 1850s buildings. "It's old brick and arched windows and great light," says Sachs.

The building has "character," she says, laughing about the historically leaky roof and temperature changes.

Despite its quirks, the Arsenal overlooks the Carquinez Strait, so it's not hard to wonder why artists have continually found inspiration in such a space, especially attracting photographers. "You're always seeing photographers, groupings of people in strange places in our building, but it's great," laughs Sachs.

Due to landlord changes over the past several years, the number of resident artists has decreased, but "held on," says Sachs. After the COVID pandemic, she was one of the resident artists that helped to reinstate their annual open studios, which was originally run by local glassblowers, she says.

Benicia is often described as an art town, so even when the glassblowers moved on, the Benicia Arsenal Artists were there to continue the event. "There's always been artists and craftspeople here in Benicia wanting to show their work to people," says Sachs.

Over the years, attendance at the Open Studios has come in both large and small waves, so much so that Sachs doesn't focus too much on how many people come, but the conversations she is able to have.

"It's kind of a party that you invited a lot of people to and you're really not sure how many people are going to show up," she laughs. "But I've gotten to the point now where it's more quality over quantity for me."

Engaging with visitors interested in her art, whether they love it or hate it, sparks some energy into her work, she says. "I have wonderful conversations with people about art in general, about life in general. So I really enjoy opening my studio up and having new energy come in."

This year, most of the artists that are showing in the main building are upstairs where there is no elevator access. For those that are able, stair access will be available and lead to a wider array of artists studios.

Although the location may be difficult to find at first, there will be signage posted to direct visitors where they should explore next and every showing studio is within walking distance, says Sachs.
