THEATER REVIEW

*EXIT Theatre's Short Play Festival features fascinating content*By Beti Webb Trauth

EXIT Theatre has returned for its third year of staging a whole new series of six different short plays showcased over two consecutive weekends.

This means that audiences will have the chance to see plays created by 12 different playwrights. Each directed by different directors and performed by casts of different actors.

The first weekend that I saw on opening night (last weekend) got the 2025 festival off to an intriguing start. With running times of 30 minutes or less, they had to make their artistic points in immediate, interesting ways to engage the audience with both the plot and characters/actors sharing that story.

Here, in order of performance, were those plays:

"The Meadow" by Ryan Kaminski, directed by Victor Howard with Queena Delany as Mrs. Page and Ginger Howard as Ms. Harris. This was an interesting, somewhat "old school" approach about a "murder" that occurs at the home of Mrs. Page. It happens after the arrival of private investigator, Ms. Harris, who Page has hired (and invited there) because she suspects her husband of both having a secret affair, and trying to poison her because of it.

Clues concerning "who" that "unknown mistress" might be are strewn about right before, and soon after P.I. Harris enters. They include the framed photo of a meadow (that she picks up and admires); glasses of wine (for both women); an envelope filled with "potential poison" that "belonged to the unfaithful husband," and some rather stilted conversational exchanges between the women.

However, it soon becomes rather obvious (if the audience is really paying attention) that the "eventual victim" of that poison will turn out to be the husband's mistress, P.I. Harris herself.

And, even though she also does some wannabe poisoning of her rival/hostess in a glass of wine (that Page doesn't drink), it seems that's too little and too late since her wine has already been poisoned by her revengeful hostess.

So, as Mrs. Page calmly "enjoys" watching her slowly die and sink to the floor, she also takes pleasure in telling her that after she discovered Harris was his mistress, she poisoned him. And then took his body to bury (in one of two, side by side graves she'd dug).

Of course, that would soon be in what had been "their special meadow" (in the framed photo) where her husband had once pledged to be "with the one he loved, forever." And where (in ironic delight), Mrs. Page assures her dying rival, that soon he will be. It's a classic, "Twilight Zone" ending.

So, overall, playwright Kaminski created a successful script. And, although the dialogue doesn't always flow, the featured actresses do it justice, and often have some strong shared exchanges.

On the other hand, Howard's direction sometimes isn't as "insightful" as it could have been. Nor was his costume choice for the character of P.I. Harris. However, since this was his first time directing, that's understandable.

Technically (for this, and will also be the case for all of the plays), the scenic design used just a few pieces of furnishings and necessary props to represent the action's location, and the lighting was basically simple and specific.

Next up was "Gimme Shelter" by Robert Weibzahl, directed by Heather Petersteiner, and featuring Sally L'Herogan as Frances and Bryce Campos as Cody.

Cody is a young man (wearing a vintage, classic rock band's T-shirt) discovered sitting on a park bench (with his earbuds in) and obviously listening to some of his favorite music. The bench has a colorful, metallic balloon (labeling it as a shuttle stop) attached to it with a long string.

Enter Frances, a casually dressed older woman with an apparently heavy backpack. She strikes up a friendly conversation with Cody (as he takes his earbuds in and out) — and once he finally gives up on his music.

That's when Frances lets him know that she has just left the nearby senior living community where she currently resides to have some time to herself and catch the shuttle elsewhere.

Unfortunately (as Cody informs her), she just missed it. Bummed out, she sits down by him, and their personal "connection" begins.

He talks about living close by, his senior parents, the music he really likes — both current and from the past. She shares what she likes and what kinds of music (naming specific bands who are mostly hard rock artists) from her own past.

And, in the process, especially after she borrows one of his earbuds to listen and hears one of today's "heavy metal" groups blaring and approves, the generations-apart pair realize they are actually "kindred, musical spirits" who love the same iconic classics.

Cody is even more impressed when Frances tells him he's welcome to have her personal collection of rock festival T-shirts from concerts that she attended. He's thrilled (even more so when it becomes more and more possible) that the reason that this "original hippie chick") is knowledgeable about most of her era's epic rockers could be because she was one of their "devoted groupies." Cool.

So, even when the sound of another shuttle arriving is heard — one that Frances could take to leave Bryce behind and go on her way — she ignores it. And she and her new, young, classic rock music fan (now her unexpected "bestie") leave the bench behind, heading off to talk about some of their mutual favorites.

Like "Gimme Shelter." (Lights out...)

L'Roghan was downright wonderful as Frances, infusing her with an understated (but sophisticated) way of drawing you in — a polished professional at the top of her game. And Campos balanced her perfectly with an endearing charm that shines through as he is evolving artistically into a really special performer.

Director Petersteiner also did a great job of orchestrating their chemistry together. And what they wore also spoke visual volumes about who they were. Perfect.

At the heart of it all was Weibzahl's script. One whose plot premise was simple, but still intricate (and accurate) when it came to the "musical details."

And, I really appreciated the way he interwove generational differences that became shared similarities because they resonated on the "same wave length." This play was definitely one of my favorites.

The third play that followed also turned out to be one of the most inventive and entertaining of the six staged that evening. Titled "Nothing Got," it was an exceptionally clever work written by Straton Rushing and directed with equal flair by Rachel Houska.

Featuring strong, comedic performances by both Marc Gabriel as an actor named Graham, and Stephan Chittenden as another named Alex, we met them after they came off-stage and sat in chairs to wipe off their make-up (in front of empty frames representing mirrors) in their shared, backstage dressing room.

We know that they just came off stage because they instantly start complaining about their disappointment in the roles they were playing. Mostly, it seems, due to the fact that neither of them has ever really understood either their roles or the play itself. Their roles? Didi and Gogo. The play? Beckett's "Waiting For Godot."

This puzzlement is not a new one for actors, directors, and audiences everywhere who have individually and collectively "not gotten Godot" over the years. So, if you were previously included in that baffled group (and in the EXIT audience), you had the chance to finally admit (to yourself), you didn't.

And, that's what made this play funnier and funnier as it continued and the actors became more and more involved in their own playwright's devilishly clever dialogue discussing "nothing."

Including what it means to always keep trying to figure out answers to questions that have none. And waiting for someone (anyone?) to show up who will never arrive, especially if they (it?) never existed. (Give up yet?)

When the hilariously befuddled EXIT actors finally arrived at the conclusion that there was "nothing" they could do about not "getting" these "nothings," they agreed to stop trying. And left the stage, leaving the audience behind to "get it." Or not. (Lights out on "Nothing Got"—an outstanding, witty satire that I loved!)

After a 10-minute intermission, the lights came up on Maury Zeff's "Lord Goose" that was directed by Richard Stein (with managing directors Lisa Larson and Susan Paul).

The cast of well-known, children's fairy tale, Mother Goose characters entered one at a time. First came an enthusiastic Laura Black as Piggy (as in "this little piggy went to market" fame), wearing a cute pig mask and colorful costume.

As soon as her lines began, they instantly sounded like they were basically lifted from the storybook telling of the tale bemoaning the plight of Little Bo Peep who had "lost her sheep." With very little more that was identifiable as freshly created dialogue by the playwright.

Piggy was soon joined by the appropriately costumed, long and lanky Tweedle Dee (played by Stein) to "discuss this sad situation," but whose di-ologue (with few exceptions) also seemed to mirror lines previous written about him (and his absent brother, Tweedle Dum) long ago.

Unfortunately, when the unmistakably costumed Bo Peep (Belle Kovaly) arrived, her dialogue continued in the same vein of "this is, word for word, the story about me you read in Mother Goose." In addition, her stilted performance was obviously that of an inexperienced actor who looked and sounded not ready to be there. (I was uncomfortable for her.)

In any case, soon after her scene awkwardly concluded with Piggy and Tweedle Dee (still exchanging lines that were often simply reciting well known facts about their characters' background stories that children have heard for years), that's when Mary (of legendary, "quite contrary" behavior) showed up.

Portrayed with spunk by Darcy O'Brien, she's the villain of the piece who, like an unseen Little Boy Blue, was constantly bad-mouthed by the other fairy tale characters on stage.

But, finally, this was the point-in-time that something happened that veered away from the unoriginal dialogue and plot that came before.

Although suddenly having Bo Peep and Mary start to battle it out over who's responsible for the lost sheep — and do so with Star Wars' light sabers — might have seemed to be a really "good idea" to liven things up with some "action" to liven things up, it wasn't.

Apparently, that they were dueling to be the winner who would then take over the fairy tale power from Mother Goose (who had always been in charge), and become the ruler who would now be called "Lord Goose." Why, the change was made really wasn't clear, other than that was the title.

However, what was presented to be a "new," short play, ended up not being much more than a writer taking advantage of a lot of previously published "Mother Goose" stories.

And using (intact) those old stories and characters that are now "public domain" for the majority of his content.

So, other than the clever, character costumes (and some intrepid performances amid the uninspired material), this piece didn't belong in the company of what were actually original short plays that deserved to be staged during this festival.

Sorry, but all of the above needed to be said.

However, moving on, that wasn't a problem for the play that followed it, "Riding Lesson" by Brett Hursey, directed by Abi Camerino. This was a deceptively poignant and insightful work.

Performed with flair and understanding by a solid cast, it featured Leo Natharent as the insecure Clark — someone who needs Merrick Yra's over-the-top Clown to always be there for ongoing amusement, companionship and comfort.

Apparently, no one else can see Clark's Clown and his antics, but that suddenly changes after "they" meet Edie sitting alone on a park bench, and she can also "see" his Clown.

Played by Rachel Houska, the overtly in-charge-of-her-life Edie gets into a deep conversation with Clark concerning the losses in his life that somehow materialized into the Clown — "an imaginary, loving friend" to fill them. And, almost "magically," after Edie also shares her story of loss, they're joined by her own "imaginary" (but very real when needed), loving companion — a beautiful Unicorn (Madison Glee).

And, when the play ends, there's a poignant understanding that both Clark's Clown and Edie's Unicorn will stay as long as they're needed to give them confidence — existential "riding lessons" to keep them from being "thrown" again by life's challenges.

But, although these caring, imaginary beings may no longer be around (once they've moved on), they'll always remain behind in Clark's and Edie's hearts as unforgettable, loving friends.

Of course, like most recently-deceased arrivals, this Dead Man (an understandably confused and upset Brandon Marcus), is in complete denial as to his current circumstances. And absolutely, angrily refuses to "be dead."

But no matter how many indignant questions he asks, and explanations he "demands" and upsetting answers he gets from The Boat Man about his situation, he simply refuses to accept the fact that "this is it."

That he's passed on, and now it's time to "let go" of who he was when he was alive, forget what that meant and how it felt and just get on the boat that will take him to where it's now time for him to go. (Although we're never told how, or why, he died, it doesn't seem to "matter" anymore on the bank of this always flowing, dark river.)

So, The Boat Man patiently (as he always does) waits until, little by little, The Man's "memories of his lost life" start fading away. But, before they disappear completely, he manages to still ask one last, important question. "When we get there, what's on the other side? Heaven or hell?"

And The Boat Man quietly replies, "Neither. There's Nothing."

And The Dead Man is strangely satisfied as he no longer remembers anything or anyone. And they leave to get on the boat that will take him to his Endless Nowhere. (Lights fade to black—and it's over.)

This stunning play, with its equally stunning performances, was the perfect, introspective way to complete the opening night of the six unique short plays that also completed their limited, one weekend in EXIT's intimate space.

Now, here's the staff that made EXIT's opening weekend of short plays possible: Founding/Acting Artistic Director and Producer, Christina Augello; Production Manager, Jordan Dobbins; Stage Manager, Tasheena Evenson; and Light and Sound Board Operator, Mychal Evenson. The festival's Selection Committee included Augello, Wendy Butler, Mary Severdy, and Trista St. John Fischer.

The festival's second weekend of six different, intriguing short plays continues with performances at 7 pm. tonight, Friday and Saturday. The run (and festival) close at 2 p.m. on Sunday.

And, here's the exciting lineup:

"This Isn't Normal" by Daniel Lehman (directed by Wendy Butler), with Victor Howard and Dominica Savant-Bunch.

"Gram Scams" by Cary Pepper (directed by Moss Nipkau), with Amadeus Garcia Brown, Doranna Benker-Gilkey and Sebastian Gilkey

"The Grief Onion" by Marc Gabriel (directed by Marc Gabriel), with Arnold Waddell and Edward Munn.

"Every Sheep Counts" by Evan Baughfman (directed by Daniel Baer), with James Wright, Dominica Savant-Bunch and Bella Euan.

"Harken To Me" by Alex Wilkie (directed by Scott "Q" Marcus), with Daniel Scott Marcus, Brandon Marcus, Kathlina Eayre, Holly Robertson and Sophia Escudero

DANCE SCENE STUDIO

Local dancers bring 'Bambi' to the stage

The Times-Standard

The Dance Scene Studio and Sundance Ballet Company's 12th annual dance recital will be the classical story ballet "Bambi."

The two performances will take place on Saturday at 7 p.m. and Sunday at 2 p.m. at the Eureka High Auditorium, 1915 J St., with a full cast of Sundance Ballet Company dancers and Dance Scene Studio students.

Prance along on the adventure with Sundance Ballet Company members Emilia Prim, who will star as Bambi, Sophia Acorn as Faline, Jessamy Moore as Thumper the rabbit, Isabella Acorn as Flower the skunk, and Miles Grant, who will dance as the Forest Deer Prince. Forest friends including adorable bunnies, owls, butterflies, a lively squirrel and more help Bambi navigate the forest life.

A press release for the performance says, "Adventures of Bambi and her friends include dealing with hunters, evading a forest fire and celebrating springtime with a rain-drop waltz. Locally hand-built props and painted backdrops will delight audiences of all ages. Everyone will be entertained by the comical pointe piece featuring deer on ice in a clever rendition of Les Patineurs (The Skater's Waltz) from 1882."

The 200 performers include Dance Scene Studio students and Sundance Ballet Company members, apprentices, and Junior Company members. Sundance Ballet Company Artistic Director Carrie Badeaux and studio instructors provide original choreography to this amusing and happily ever after tale.

Badeaux said, "This ballet is sweet and exciting with vividly colorful animal character costumes and life-like stage settings.

This is our 12th spring production and it has been so much fun to build this creative show."

Assorted classical music and an original composition by company member Miles Grant will be the score of the ballet, which is based on the famous novel by Felix Salten, "Bambi, A Life in the Woods," a story of a little white-tailed deer, and some elements from the 1942 Disney animated film "Bambi."

The second half of the show features an array of dances outside of the

Love's the Best Doctor

Performance cures with commedia at Dell'Arte's Baduwa't Festival

By Beti Webb Trauth

When Dell'Arte's outdoor production of "Love's the Best Doctor" launched the company's 35th annual Baduwa't Festival (Mad River until 2021 and re-named with the river's Wiyot Tribe name) last Friday night, its commedia performance got things off to a great, satirical start.

Wickedly, wittily adapted and directed by Dell'Arte legend Michael Fields from a classic Moliere comedy, he cheek-ily integrated some recognizable modern life issues into the original plot's already outrageous shenanigans.

So, although the characters were authentically costumed (and most masked) in the elaborate fashions that were worn when Moliere's version was staged in France, that didn't keep them from behaving and observing things in absurd, contemporary ways at unexpected moments.

And, because of today's health care challenges in finding a competent physician, the subject matter was ironically relatable.

Since the plot revolved around worried father (the wealthy Sganarelle) desperately seeking a doctor to “cure” his “deeply depressed” daughter, Lucinda, whose pampered cat, Vraylar, is currently the only “loved one” she has.

But, even if a doctor does arrive, no cure will be possible due to the fact that her depression is caused by not being allowed (by her father) to marry her not-wealthy lover, Clitandre. As well as (what is equally important to her), gaining some “personal freedom in her life.”

So, obviously, when her worried, clueless dad has seven equally clueless doctors show up at their home (all at once) to use their questionable skills to cure her, it definitely ain't gonna happen. Therefore, individual and mass commedia mayhem ensues.

Luckily, the household's feisty housekeeper, Lisette (who knows the unfulfilled lovers' secret situation), eventually comes up with a clever solution: Clitandre will pose as one of the doctors, and his “love” will turn out to be Lucinda's “cure” once all of the chaos caused by her father's inept doctors finally settles down.

Nailing the key roles with comedic skill and charisma are veteran Dell'Arte gem David Ferney as the cranky, concerned Sganarelle; Dell'Arte trained Victoria Timoteo as his love-lorn daughter, Lucinda; current Dell'Arte actor/teacher Evan Grande, as her outrageous lover; and award-winning Broadway performer Cynthia Martells as the disarmingly clever Lisette.

The doctors whose ridiculous antics fuel the frantic fun are Julie Douglas (an arthritic acupuncturist); Mike Murdock (an old, old-time GP); Tony Fuemmeler (an Ayurvedic doctor); Sean Lang (a surgeon); Ben Clifton (an idiot); Tony Cogliati (an insurance adjuster); and Maria Sotiropoulou (a pharmacist). Martells and Grande also play federal officers; and the Cat, Vraylar, is the “not real” Herself.

I won't go into all of the above antics that take place throughout (including some brilliantly silly commercials that reflect the worst of today's takes on “cure-all medications”), but they end up being both hilarious and thought provoking. In addition, the action often takes place in the middle of lots of original songs sung by the characters. They were composed by Tim Randles, music director and keyboardist of the omnipresent, off-to-the-side band, The Left Field, with Marla Joy on bass/flute/sax/sardo; Jeff Kelly on guitar/drill; and Mike LaBolle on drums.

The versatile group also play and sing some “appropriate” songs, like oldie “The Witch Doctor,” before the show begins (encouraging the audience to join in, and later feature an iconic Kiss (in full make-up) rocker belting about love after intermission.

Technically, the production was overall solid, although the sound levels sometimes needed some adjusting, especially for some of the actors wearing masks whose vocal levels were being overpowered by the volume of the band.

Hopefully, sound engineer Brandon Hook, will have that situation under control as the run progresses.

Luckily, that didn't happen during my favorite musical moment near the end of the show when Ferney's Sganarelle sang the poignant “I Could Be Someone Who Cares.”

It was a touching song and performance that added an unexpected, sweet depth to his character when he finally understands that sometimes loving someone (like his daughter) means letting them go.

The show's superb scenographic design by Lynnie M. Horrigan was period-perfect (with scenic construction by Lisa Smith and Tony Cogliati) and scenic painting by Smith, Meeka Day, Sherri Green, Carlene Cogliati, Al Russo and Allesandra. The carpenter was Karla York. The effective lighting (after darkness fell) was designed by Michael Foster, assisted by Kaya Corcoran.

The classic, commedia masks were designed by Fuemmeler (head of Dell'Arte's Training Programs); the intricate, stunning period costumes were created by the expert stitchers Sherri Green, Catherine Brown and Harriet Lawler. The production manager was Tisha Sloan; stage manager, Elizabeth Whittemore; house manager, Miguel Guerrero; and concessions manager was Trish “The Dish.” (There were various treats and libations to choose from to enhance the enjoyment of the evening's on-stage entertainment.)

To quote Michael Fields: “Commedia is meant to be provocative and reference the moment in time in which it is performed.” And “This play could be ripped from today's headlines, especially in its presentation of our medical system” with its “dysfunction.” Among other challenging aspects of the world we're dealing with right now.

He also said, “I think the act of making, attending and supporting theater is an act of resistance at this moment in time” and “has the possibility to tell a truth in a real time to a community that comes together to engage with the action and each other. It is said that the act of laughing is a visceral acknowledgment of a truth. I hope you had a lot of laughter tonight.” Indeed, we did. (And that's the truth!)

Dell'Arte's outrageously entertaining “Love's The Best Doctor” continues its run (during Dell'Arte's 35th annual Baduwa't Festival), with performances in its outdoor Rooney Amphitheater at 8 p.m. on Fridays, Saturdays and Sundays through July 6. (No show on July 4.)

For ticket information, go to info@dellarte.com or call 707-668-5663. Tickets can also be purchased at the box office one hour before the show begins. Dell'Arte International is located at 131 H St. in Blue Lake. (And, remember to dress warmly, and include extra covers to stay that way over the show's outside run of two hours.)

Keke Palmer's album channels public relationship drama into reclamation

By Gary Gerard Hamilton

The Associated Press

NEW YORK » A sheer dress silhouetting a black body suit, Usher's signature crowd interaction and a tweet from her child's father: that concoction created a nearly two-week social media frenzy starring Keke Palmer back in 2023. Now, the multi-hyphenate creative has channeled that experience into her new album, "Just Keke."

"It was tough ... I didn't even realize I was in such grief," said the 31-year-old about the fallout of her extremely public breakup with her ex, Darius Jackson. "I get to put that same emotion into a song, and I get tell those people that's been watching me since I was nine ... what's going on in a way that it can translate."

Following 2023's "Big Boss," her third solo studio project, out now, is an 18-track visual album conceptualized and directed by Palmer and her team. Tayla Parx, who's written for Alicia Keys, Justin Bieber and Dua Lipa, handled the bulk of the writing and executive produced with Palmer.

The storyline follows Palmer musically navigating celebrity, motherhood and self-reflection. But her vulnerability about her well-publicized relationship drama is the album's throughline.

"That's what artistry is ... mine is about transmutation, it's about bringing closure," said Palmer, who's usually mum about her romantic relationships. "I have to address something that I would never address, especially nothing on an intimate level — that's just so not me. But I knew that I had to because now that it's become public, it's become a part of my work, and I have to respond to it as such. And that just caused me to have to grow."

While attending Usher's popular Las Vegas residency in 2023, the Emmy winner danced closely with the music icon during his routine audience interaction segment. Social videos of the interaction prompted a viral tweet from Jackson, her ex-boyfriend and child's father, criticizing her attire, writing, "It's the outfit tho..

While he was quickly admonished online, the conversation eventually moved beyond social media to articles and think pieces tackling subjects ranging from patriarchy, women's attire, and having children before marriage.

Standout tracks on "Just Keke" include "My Confession" — a tongue-in-cheek interpolation of Usher's hit "Confessions, Pt. II" — as well as the previously released "125 Degrees" and "Off Script." She passionately belts out her love on the ballad "Unless It's You," while "Misunderstood" finds her asking, "Don't you see me throwing out a lifeline? / You too busy pinning me the bad guy / Maybe we ain't doing what we should / or maybe we're just misunderstood."

"What the project, I think, speaks to as well is just like reclamation," said the "Nope" star, admitting the album could reignite criticism about her personal life. "I'm just Keke, hate it or love it. This is me, this is my story, this is how I see things, I see my life ... the whole point of it, too, is making peace with just saying what you got to say and letting it be that."

While Palmer's mic is still hot, she's extremely booked and busy on Hollywood lots: a sequel to "One of Them Days," and she stars with Eddie Murphy and Pete Davidson in "The Pickup" from Prime Video in August. The "Akeelah and the Bee" actor will lead Peacock's upcoming TV adaptation of Mel Brook's "The 'Burbs," and she'll join the team on "Spaceballs 2" with original stars Bill Pullman and Rick Moranis, the latter a reclusive '80s and '90s star who's since largely stayed out of Hollywood.

Palmer says she'll judge the success of "Just Keke" not necessarily by sales or Billboard charts, but by potential opportunities that arise, whether it's creating and directing visual albums for other artists, helming her own musical and comedic variety show, or even embarking on her own world tour.

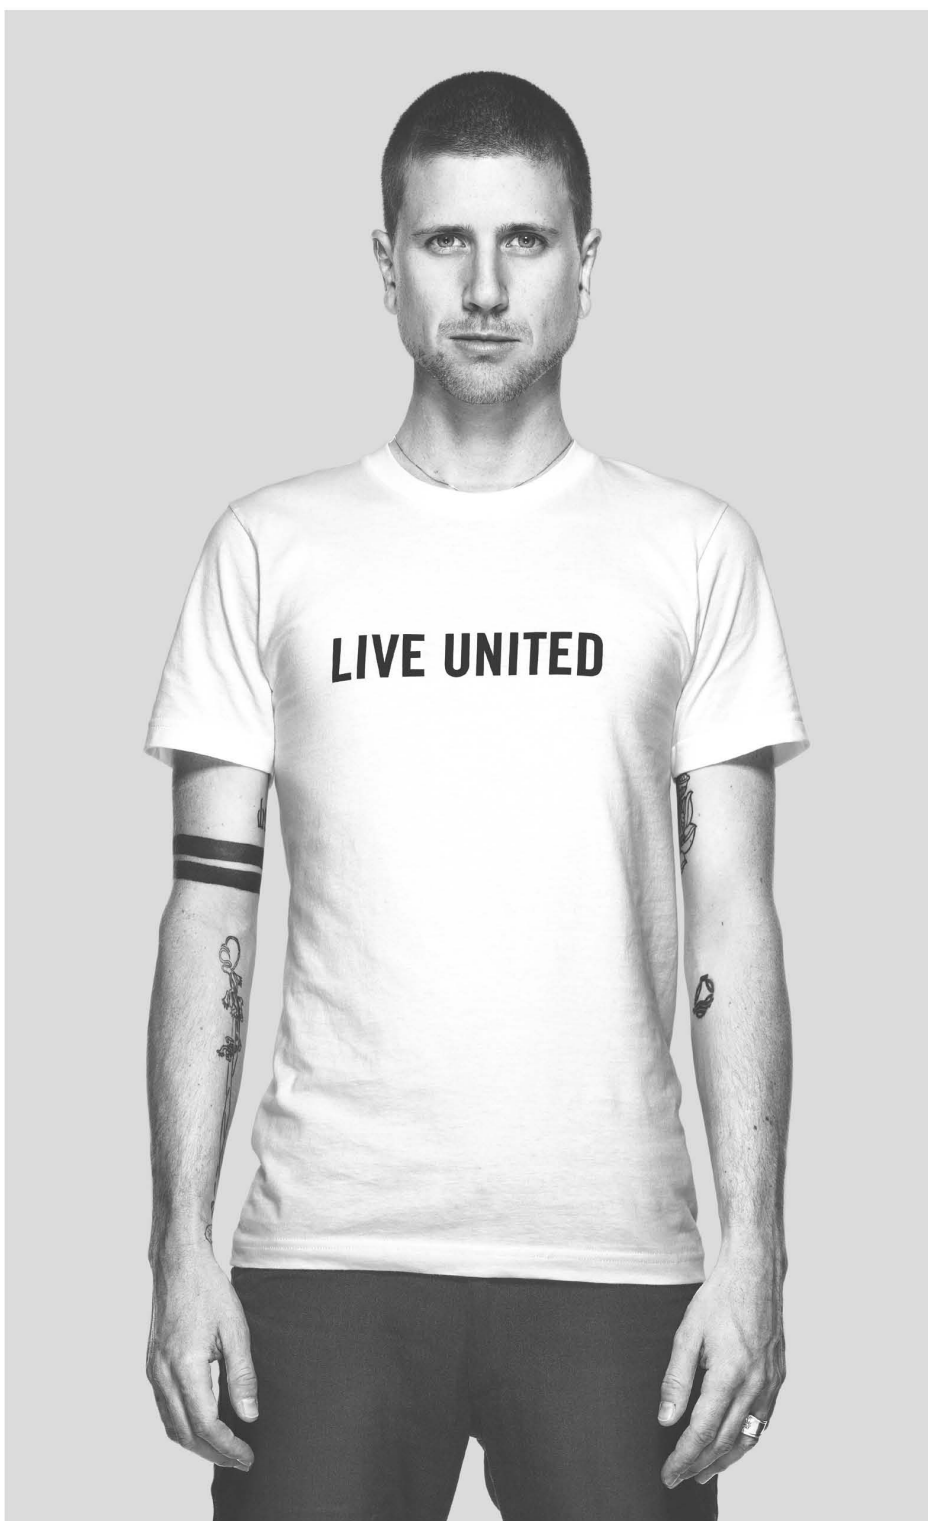

"It could look like so many things, and I'm open to all of them," said Palmer. "As long as I know that I put my all into this, I know I can't lose."

The declarer is on the right side

One of the pluses of transfer bids into the majors is that the stronger hand becomes the declarer. This "right-sides" contracts with reasonable frequency.

What can happen in this deal if North is in four spades, or South is in three no-trump, or South is in four spades?

In the auction, South opened one no-trump, showing 15-17 points. North transferred with a two-heart response, promising five-plus spades and any point-count. After South completed the transfer, North jumped to three no-trump to show exactly five spades and to ask South to choose between three no-trump and four spades. (This was a slight overbid; two no-trump would have been a slight underbid.) South, with three-card spade support and a low-doubleton di-among, preferred four spades.

In this deal, if North is in four spades, the contract should go down two. East would lead the heart queen. The defenders could take three tricks in that suit, then shift to diamonds. When in with the spade ace, West would cash a diamond trick.

If South is in three no-trump, West would lead the diamond king and again down two would be the result.

Now let's have South in four spades. He wins the diamond-king lead with dummy's ace and drives out the spade ace. West cashes the diamond queen, but South has 10 tricks: four spades, one diamond and five clubs.

Yes, if East had the spade ace, all games would fail. But if you load the dice in your favor with transfers, you will gain in the long run.
