September 3, 2016 4 minutes read the opinions expressed by entrepreneurial contributors are their own. Even the greatest entrepreneurs can be victims of mental and spiritual fatigue. The stress of deadlines, fear of failure, different choices and a barrage of opinion - a balance can be difficult to find. Thankfully, Hollywood writers know little about losing their mojo, and managed to craft decades' worth of stories on who decided to persevere. Here are nine amazing movie clips, backed by some great tunes, to help keep that inspiration at high.1. Limitless (2011). Hear it: Howlin's for-you-black KeysLimitless makes Bradley Cooper's brain-bending drug habit look like the stuff of legend as he goes from the underdog writer to the confident, unwavering business man. We're not waiving drug use here, but the swagger demonstrated in this clip is pretty awful. Ask yourself: Can you accomplish more in a day — maybe even in an hour — than you think? 2 | Resume (2013). Hear it: One step you can't take back - Keira KnightleyMark Newly fired A&P exec who portrays himself bathing in Bourbon - watches When he's wowed by a cynical but talented songwriter played by Keira Knightley. This is the beginning of an uplifting professional relationship demonstrating how luck and chance can sometimes work in your favor. Hear it: Vogue-MadonnaAnne Hathaway's Andrea gets a bumpy start as a fledgling assistant to a fashion magazine's fire-breathing editorial director. Fed up with lumpy sweater shaming and uppity colleagues, she pulls off a wardrobe 180 that would dazzle in any office setting, if not on the runway. 4 | Office Space (1999). Hear it: Damn it feels good to be a Gangsta — Geto BoyPeter, played by Ron Livingston, is hilarious when the hypnosis he passes leads to a workplace declaration of deep proportions. Common decency imagines it's an office revenge we'd never play out in reality, but it certainly helps when it comes to powering a heavy workload. 5 | Legally Blonde (2001). Hear it: Perfect day-hokuPeppy Harvard Law student Elle Woods (Reese Witherspoon) gets the last chuckle when she rises above her mean-spirited peers to deliver a graduation speech about an important word: passion! Some should never leave the house without an entrepreneur. 6 | Hangover (2009). Hear this: The Joker and the Thief — wolfmotherFour people at a graduation party in Vegas are out of luck — that's until Zach Galifianakis flexes his kooky mathematical talent. Never give up, especially when chips (hat) are down, a strong theme is here — and clowns and thieves wire hard during electric blow-like Red Bull. Rocky's training regimen in the fourth film is no joke, and might just be the motivational tools you need Depends on any daily challenge. This weekend, at a nightclub in Harvard Square, Belle Linda Halpern will be singing her favorite selection from many popular music, threepenny opera from Pirate Jenny and some coming from West Side story. Right now, though, he's helping me with a presentation — and I'm bursting into a song. Halpern, cofounder of Cambridge-based Ariel Group, Inc., is an accomplished cabaret singer who still performs at least once a month. The rest of the businessmen coach at the time he introduced more effectively by communicating more emotionally. We follow your train of thought and we admire you for your argument. But we want to connect with you as a person, we have to see how you feel about things. I turned to Halpern for advice on one thing I was determined to give to 80 people. It was, I realized, a well-structured presentation — so well structured that my audience could actually plan when to fall asleep. Introduction. A point. Point two. Conclusion. Pass the nodose. I thought I needed professional help. After listening to me, Halpern agreed. First, she said, I need more animation. Instead of using logic to make the transition (now that you understand my first thing, let me turn toward my second.) I should use expressive hand gestures and add emotional color to my face. I'm not suggesting that you're flamboyant, Halpern advised, but we have to see how you feel about things. So we tried to exercise. Halpern assigned me a theme (my neighborhood) and asked me to start speaking. Every 10 seconds he called a different spirit – love, hatred, humility, happiness – to which I made meaningful transitions. (I love the spirit of people and history in my neighborhood. I hate when I learn about a crime on my block.) Again and again, Halpern pushed me to communicate with devices other than my voice. If I was deaf - or in the back row - I should know from your body language what you're talking about, he explained. In fact, my voice was the next big challenge. Describing my voice as monotony assumes it has a tone in the first place. So it was time for another exercise, this one involving Shakespeare. Halpern asked me to recite a four-line route from the blizzard, adopting a different voice for each line. Don't be afraid (Ethel Merman screaming across the street); The isle is full of noise (from high talker Seinfeld whispering in his ear), sounds and sweet struts (James Earl Jones yawning), that give joy and not hurt (Kenneth Branagh playing a king). The idea, she explained, is to stretch your voice the same way you stretch a rubber band. It snaps back, but it's more flexible than before you spread it. The biggest problem, though, is my reluctance to pause — a Presentation defects. I would like to do one thing and then rush into the example without letting the point sink in. I know that looks like vast amounts of stoppage time when you're there, Halpern sympathizes, but for the audience, a few seconds pause is generous. It says: 'I think it's quite important that you can give it a moment to take.' While I can't stand silence, she added, I should take some steps around the stage or take a drink of water. Whatever I do, the objective is the same: just stop talking. We finished our crash course by reconsidering our original presentation. Who would have thought it could be so fascinating? Introduction. Stop. Frightened face. Loud sound. A point. Stop. Excited hands. Strong voice. Point two. Stop. Closing. Applause. Sikelle and Ebert, where are you?
