LDS language-related principles, such as speaking kind words, no swearing, and blasphemy, are often spoken of in isolated contexts with no description of the larger relationship they may have with one another. "By Words the Worlds are Created" addresses these principles in terms of a single underlying doctrine--that language is a divine gift for which we shall be judged. As such, it is presumed that readers will have a familiarity with LDS scripture generally, as well as an interest in language and language use specifically.
