From the Civil War to the wild western plains of the 1800's, this epic series has it all.

The Drum Series: Books 1-3 is an exciting historical adventure, and story of friendship and bravery from bestselling western author W.R. Benton.

The Civil War has beaten down Jeb Patton beyond the point of mere exhaustion. Only the precious memories of the girl he left behind sustains him as he fights on. He should have died countless times as he fought for Southern Cause and Jeb knows his luck is running mighty low. Fate catches up to him one night near a no-name town somewhere in war-torn Arkansas. Instead of waking up in the arms of an angel, he wakes up in a medical tent; his right leg gone. With this blow Jeb loses the desire to live, until he meets a man even more severely injured than himself. Taking strength from this unfortunate fellow soldier's misery, the newly discharged Jeb makes plans to head home.

Ironically Jeb befriends an old slave; now a runaway heading north to freedom. Together they stand a better chance of surviving the chaos and they team up in their travels. Challenges and heartache await them on the dusty trail, but the pair set out for Montana with little more than their courage and dreams of a better tomorrow.

Book 2

Patton befriends a pioneer family in trouble and helps them get a start in the Montana territory with help from his friends Abe and Moses. But tranquility is not to be as a renegade killer named Crawford passes their way; out for revenge. With war on the horizon Jeb will cross paths with more old allies, mountain men Ty and Jarel.

Book 3

When Green River confronts a loud-mouthed banker's son in a saloon brawl, it results in a heap of trouble for the old man mountain man. The banker, Perigo, owns over half the town and he has his greedy heart set on owning the other half too. Jeb Patton is in town visiting family when he's drawn into the situation.
