John Eben is forced to overcome his social anxiety after decades of isolation. Although plagued by worry, he is able to land a job at the Terrington Psychiatric Hospital and even meets a young, beautiful lady. Everything seems to be looking up for John, but something continuously haunts him: Eve Thompson.

Eve is an eleven-year old girl convicted of killing her parents two years previous. The little girl blames her non-existent twin sister for the crime and is locked away with a diagnosis of split personality, but John feels something isn't quite right. What if she really does have a twin that nobody knows about? John decides to search for the truth, but with each new clue only more questions arise.

Saving Eve is the story of one man's attempt to solve all the mysteries in his life; how to overcome his anxious habits, how to find and maintain love, how to grow as a human, and, most importantly of all, how to fit together all the critical clues in the effort towards saving Eve.
