Morality stems from the ground. That means if you have the right size of a community, its members will act nice. If you have the wrong size, like in large, impersonal cities, its members will find that there is more profit in acting in antisocial ways. All animals have a concrete social organization given by nature. Humans are no exception. The village, community, tribe have been all acceptable historical forms of expressing this natural social organization that makes humans to feel content, secure and happy. Cities on the other hand violate these principles and make people feel alienated, alone, insecure, miserable. Now that you know, you can choose your life living in a community for humans living a fulfilling life.
