

JERROLD L. MILLER '77

Jerry Miller served seven years as a surface warfare officer. Although he left active duty in 1985, he has continuously served the Navy as an entrepreneur in the maritime industries and the Naval Academy as a philanthropist. Miller co-founded a ship repair company with an Academy classmate, bought that company early on, and sold it 25 years later after it became a leading U.S. Navy ship repair organization. He then founded Fairlead Integrated, a company dedicated to the current revitalization of our shipbuilding industrial base and a critical supplier for aircraft carrier and submarine construction programs. As philanthropists, Miller and his wife, Laura, were instrumental in the establishment, funding, and construction of the Uriah P. Levy Center and Jewish Chapel more than 20 years ago, and they have continued to be leaders in the development and growth of the Academy's Margin of Excellence. He has been a member of the Naval Academy Foundation Board of Directors since 2006 and currently serves as its Vice Chair. Miller resides in Virginia Beach, VA.
