Text

In youth, my mind did wander
To the life I planned I'd lead
So much beyond what seemed so small then
My wings felt caged, set to be freed

And fly, did I, to sights beyond
To find my fame, my love and loss
I set my mind on new horizons
A future hazed at present cost

Yet in my search none found more kindly
No friend more true, no sight so grand
Had I the vision to see more clearly
There's nowhere else I'd choose to stand

Oh take me back to where the sunrise,
Framed beyond the farthest shore,
Gave sight to every childhood memory
Oh take me back to home once more

And now one journey nears its ending
One glimpse and then my breath is past
To you, my child, fear not the distance
For I have found that home at last
