Program Notes

Natya ("NAH-tee-ya") is a Sanskrit word meaning both dance and drama as the two are inextricably linked in much of Indian tradition. Music is used as accompaniment, though Indian classical music does not have the emphasis on harmony that western classical music does, but is characterized instead by much more complex rhythm, timbral variety, and improvisation. The many Indian classical dance and drama forms are ancient. However, the Indian film industry's "Bollywood" movies (a combining of the two words "Bombay"—now called Mumbai and the center of the film industry—and "Hollywood") are comprised largely of music and dance that hearkens back to Indian classical arts traditions while incorporating western harmony and musical styles from around the world. It is the modern, eclectic form of Indian music on which this piece Natya is based.

South Indian Solkattu ("SOL-ka-too"), also called konnakol ("CON-uh-cul"), is an onomatopoeic way of counting rhythm that is also used in performance as well. Performers chant rhythm syllables with the same dizzying speed and complexity required for accomplished tabla (Indian drums) and other instrumental performance. Foot stomps and claps in this piece evoke dancing, while the simplified solkattu syllables correspond to rhythm groupings: Ta-ka ("tah kah") for eighth-note pairs, ta-ki-ta ("tah kee tah") for groupings of three eighth notes, and thom ("tome") for quarter notes. These should be chanted assertively and should sound as prominent as the percussion. The spirited tempo indications must be observed to convey the dramatic elements in this piece. Of course, access to authentic Indian instruments would be ideal but unlikely in most ensembles, so there are substitutions in the score, such as the bongos, conga, and bass drum that replace tabla and mridangam, tambourine for the kanjira, and the bowl of the timpani for the ghatam. The percussion should be prominent without overpowering throughout the piece, and doublings are included to achieve this. To give a solid feeling of downbeat, make sure that the shaft of beater or wood stick against shell in the bass-drum part and copper bowl in timpani part (beginning in m. 11) are heard clearly. I hope that this piece serves as a springboard for studying the magnificent Indian culture while providing performers and audiences with much musical enjoyment.
