About the Music

Rienzi is a well-known early opera composed between 1837 and 1840 by Richard Wagner. The premiere performance was given in Dresden, Germany in 1942. Written in what was known as the 'Grand Opera' style, it consists of the Overture and 5 Acts. The full opera is rarely if ever performed any more, but it was a major component in Wagner's almost overnight fame and future success as an opera/music drama composer. A full-length performance would require patience, with a performance length (in its original form) of some 5 hours!

The complete Overture can be performed in approximately 12-13 minutes. The full orchestra version requires 2 flutes + piccolo, 2 oboes, 2 clarinets, 2 bassoons + contrabassoon, 4 horns, 4 trumpets, 3 trombones, tuba, timpani and percussion, and large string sections (a 'big' orchestra). However, this setting of the Overture, as abridged and arranged for strings, fully retains all the thematic, rhythmic and musical intent of the original orchestra version. Due to the scope and dimension of the original setting, this version is best performed with moderately large to large string forces. Overture to Rienzi is an exciting work, and would compliment any well-balanced program as an overture/opener, or as a big-finish closer!
