MUSIC FOR THE CHURCH YEAR

Wings of the Morning (9178) Arr. Alice Parker

About the Composer

Alice Parker is an internationally renowned composer, conductor and teacher who began composing at age eight, and wrote her first orchestral score while still in high school. She studied composition and conducting at Smith College and the Juilliard School where she began her long association with Robert Shaw. As Shaw began to organize the Robert Shaw Chorale, he enlisted her to do research and create choral arrangements for the new touring and recording ensemble. It was at this time that she married baritone Thomas Pyle, and for the next twenty years their musical lives revolved around the Shaw Chorale. The many Parker/Shaw settings of American folksongs, hymns and spirituals from that period form an enduring repertoire for choruses all around the world.

Ms. Parker continues to work on her own compositions and arrangements and has composed in all the choral forms from opera to cantata, from sacred anthems to songs on texts by distinguished poets. She has been commissioned by such well-known groups as Chanticleer, the Vancouver Chamber Singers, and the Atlanta Symphony, as well as hundreds of community, school and church choruses. In 2000, she was named the Distinguished Composer of the Year by the American Guild of Organists, and received the Robert Shaw Award at the National Convention of the ACDA in 2013. Her works appear in the catalogs of a dozen publishing companies. She resides in western Massachusetts.

Wings of the Morning

O Thou Almighty Father, come help me now to praise Thy Glory.
Methinks I hear the trumpet sound before the break of day.

O had I the wings of the morning I'd fly away to Canaan's shore;
Bright angels should convey me home to the new Jerusalem.

O come, Thou living Savior, come help me now to love Thee truly.

O come, Thou Holy Spirit, inflame my soul with heav'nly fire.

O angels and archangels, come help me chant Jehovah's praises.
