About the Composition

Azimuth is a dynamic composition for the beginning concert band. Designed to be played on the first concert, the notes and rhythms are limited to the first ones that the students learn. The music is both dramatic and heroic at the same time with a multitude of teaching opportunities throughout.

The main melody opens the work with a broad and soaring presentation. It quickly turns into a fast paced section at m. 10 that uses smaller elements of the melody as a rhythmic motive. The lower voices provide a rhythmic landscape at m. 23 that allows the woodwinds to soar above it. A counter melody in the brass is introduced at m. 31 to provide even more development.

The previous rhythmic landscape from m. 23 returns at m. 39 as an accompaniment for the lower voices' presentation of the melody. The percussion section gets featured at m. 51 in trading off with the winds and brass. A build up section follows at m. 59 which is a good opportunity to focus on a quiet intensity that leads to the Maestoso at m. 71. From there, we hear some familiar material put the whole form together and to provide a rousing conclusion.
