Hard Times: Brazil’s Landless Movement Faces the Economic Crisis

Débora Nunes da Silva, sociologist and organizer with Brazil’s MST, offers a view onto popular organizing strategy in the current moment. One and a half million Brazilians have occupied land with the MST. What does the crisis mean for them? How does global food production change? How do social movements respond?

Tuesday, May 5th  ●  Noon  ●  Classics 110

1010 E. 59th Street  ●  Chicago, IL 60637

Sponsored by the Human Rights Program and the Center for Latin American Studies