The Economic and Social Council, considering that the Commission on Human Rights will require special advice on problems relating to the promotion and protection of human rights and fundamental freedoms for all without distinction of race, sex, language or religion, and recognizing the value of the information and experience of the Economic and Social Council, concludes that the Commission on Human Rights should be assisted by an Economic and Social Council in the preparation of the report for the consideration of the ECOSOC, and that the Economic and Social Council should make available to the Commission on Human Rights the information and advice of special value to it.

The Economic and Social Council and the Commission on Human Rights should work together in order to ensure a harmonious and effective implementation of the recommendations of the Economic and Social Council and the Commission on Human Rights.

The Economic and Social Council should give the Commission on Human Rights any assistance that may be required in the performance of its duties.

The Commission on Human Rights should make available to the Economic and Social Council any information that may be useful for the preparation of the report for the consideration of the ECOSOC.

The Economic and Social Council should take into account the recommendations of the Commission on Human Rights in the formulation of its reports to the General Assembly and the General Assembly should take into account the recommendations of the Commission on Human Rights in its consideration of the reports of the Economic and Social Council.

A provision in the General Assembly's resolution on 'The Admission of South Africa to the United Nations', which is based on the recommendations of the Committee of the Chase, is of particular interest. The Committee, in its report to the General Assembly, emphasizes the importance of the resolution for the maintenance of peace and security.

The resolution, which was adopted by the General Assembly on 24 February 1945, calls for the admission of South Africa to the United Nations. It is under Article 62 of the United Nations Charter, which provides for the admission of new members.

The resolution also states that the admission of South Africa to the United Nations should be accompanied by the Recommendation of the General Assembly to the Security Council, which will then consider the matter.

The resolution further states that the admission of South Africa to the United Nations should be on the basis of the principles and purposes set forth in the United Nations Charter, as well as the principles of the Charter and the Declaration of Human Rights.

The resolution was adopted by the General Assembly on 24 February 1945, and it was signed by all member states of the United Nations.

The resolution has been praised for its clear and concise language, and it has been widely cited as a model for future resolutions on similar matters.

The resolution has also been subjected to criticism, particularly from South Africa, which has expressed its opposition to the resolution on the grounds that it is discriminatory.

Despite these criticisms, the resolution has been widely accepted as an important step in the process of international recognition of South Africa as a sovereign state.

The resolution has also served as a model for future resolutions on similar matters, and it has been widely cited as a precedent for the admission of new member states to the United Nations.
