- Roombeek is a neighborhood that, after the fireworks disaster on May 13, 2000, was resurrected as a phoenix from the ashes. After a period of reconstruction, there is now a neighborhood that can be called particularly successful in both spatial and architectural sense. Packed with innovative, sometimes controversial architecture, with all that winks to the textile history of Enschede.
- Town planning in which residents' ideas form the basis, the history of the neighborhood is a source of inspiration. On 24 November 2007, Enschede received the Golden Pyramid: the national prize for inspiring commissioning.
