

The following survey contains questions regarding whether or not students have ever used various drugs, their current use patterns, and their attitudes and beliefs about drugs. It is essentially the instrument given to students during the initial validation of Project ALERT.

It is crucial that each survey be anonymous (no student names or identification marked on it) and that students be guaranteed confidentiality. No one should be able to tell which survey goes with which student or be able to look over a shoulder as answers are written down. If the survey is carefully administered and if students really feel assured of anonymity and confidentiality, you will get a good picture of the extent of drug use among young people in your school or community. This information should help you diagnose the nature of the problem and decide what to do about it. If you repeat the survey in subsequent years, you will also be able to monitor trends over time and see whether drug use is increasing or decreasing among different ages and genders.

Though results of the survey provide valuable information, the responses alone will not indicate the level of effectiveness of a specific drug prevention program. The reason for this is that no matter where you live or what programs you are using, drug use rates increase as youth get older. The rates will be higher in eighth grade than in seventh and in seventh than in sixth. Therefore, if you look only at survey responses from youth that have participated in a specific program over time, you may be tempted to conclude that the program is ineffective, due to increasing drug use rates.

In actuality, the program may be very effective, in that it may have substantially slowed down the rate of increase compared to what would have happened without the program. To determine this, you will need to be able to compare drug use rates in schools or communities that are using a specific drug prevention program versus similar schools or communities that are not.
