Princeton Theological Seminary’s Food Justice Fellows (FJF) aims to help end hunger by teaching urban communities how to grow their own food.

We are passionate about reflecting theologically and academically on the intersections of racism and hunger.

Join Food Justice Fellows if you are passionate about caring for animals and creating awareness about food injustice, FJF is for you!

Members are asked to sign a covenant that outlines the vision to care for one another, the flock, and the theological and academic issues related to food injustice.

Email fjf.ptsem@gmail.com to request an application. An interview will follow.
