HODGE CHAIR PROFESSOR OF SYSTEMATIC THEOLOGY

Princeton Theological Seminary, a school in the Reformed theological tradition and historically related to the PC (USA), seeks a scholar to occupy the Charles Hodge Chair of Systematic Theology, starting on or about July 1, 2023.

The candidate selected for this position will be a scholar of recognized stature who is dedicated to the church's life and work, and equipped to prepare people for Christian ministry and scholarship in its various forms. Candidates should have earned the PhD or ThD in theology as well as the MDiv or equivalent theological degree from an accredited theological school. Applicants will have a scholarly and teaching portfolio that demonstrates serious engagement across a range of doctrinal topics, with erudition in and passion for Reformed theology in its diversity and breadth, both in its history of doctrine and its contemporary applications. Other areas of specialization will be open to negotiation.

The successful candidate will participate in all of the Seminary's degree programs (MDiv, MA, MA(TS), ThM, and PhD), with shared responsibility for offering required courses and a broad range of electives that conform to the Seminary's mission, the department's needs, and the appointee's research interests. The duties expected of a faculty member at Princeton Theological Seminary include excellent publication and teaching, including PhD supervision; mentoring of students; service in faculty committees, meetings and programs; support of the Center of Karl Barth Studies and its programs; and active participation in the Seminary's life.

A letter of interest and curriculum vitae should be uploaded to the online application site at: http://apply.interfolio.com/108682. The appointment is expected to commence July 1, 2023. Review of applications will begin September 15, 2022.

Those wishing to nominate others for this position are invited to contact Jacqueline Lapsley, Dean of Academic Affairs, at academic.dean@ptsem.edu.

Princeton Theological Seminary is an equal opportunity employer.