Irvine, CA | January 25, 2023 06:49 PM Eastern Standard Time

EPAL, the revolutionary platform that connects gamers with each other for an enhanced gaming experience, has set a new standard for its freelance profession for gamers by introducing the ePal Training Camp. The ePal Training Camp provides a comprehensive array of services that are tailored to enhance the skills and expertise of ePals, the service providers on the EPAL platform.

The ePal Training Camp offers a range of services that include courses, effect testing, 1V1 coaching, and advice on building a successful career as an ePal. The camp also provides assistance in establishing personal IP and 3rd party collaborations for outstanding ePals. All of these services are available to ePals on the platform, with no cost to the participants.

The only requirement to participate in the ePal Training Camp is a "love for the ePal career and a desire to provide clients with quality services." EPAL believes that by investing in the development and growth of its ePals, the platform can provide its users with the best possible gaming experience.

The instructor of the ePal Training Camp courses, who is also the Co-Founder and CEO of EPAL, Brian Xiong, claims: "The purpose of the ePal Training Camp is to help every ePal gain the comprehensive service ability to convert clients and continue to make them repurchase. In the history of EPAL, only about 1% of merchants have achieved comprehensive service quality, but they have completed half of the orders on the entire website."

Before announcing the ePal Training Camp, the EPAL team spent two months analyzing internal data points and interviewing both ePals and clients in order to find the secret of what "good ePal services" really stand for. As a pioneer in a new industry, EPAL is known for cultivating a new profession for gamers worldwide to earn extra income while playing video games with others. It may sound too good to be true, but in less than three years, EPAL has shown its business model is viable and has grown to one of the largest gaming freelancer platforms in the world with more than 1.5 million registered users and 150,000 verified ePals.

The top 25% of ePals now make $500 a month, while the top 1% make $4,700+ a month, a sizable income that even beats many conventional jobs. In January 2023, the team believes it is now the time to unveil the ePal Training Camp as a channel to teach ePals how they can provide clients with better experiences and services as well as gain ideal earnings and benefits.

Along with the ePal Training Camp, EPAL will also revamp its Store Rating, ePal levels, and exposure algorithm at the end of January. These changes aim to use metrics for clients to better predict the ePals' overall service qualities. The new store rating system will add service quality to the existing profile completeness, responsiveness, and more exposure, and service quality will be the most important part of the new store rating system. EPAL will also strengthen the screening of users and the handling of violators this year.

According to Brian, the Co-Founder and CEO of EPAL, "I am also a gamer myself, and I am happy to create a great industry and a respectable career with all the ePals. The vision of EPAL is to build a bridge of sharing and companionship for gamers all over the world, and ePals as sharers are the most critical part of this vision." Brian believes these recent new changes are necessary for the business in the long run. "We must improve the quality of our overall services so that more people can have fun and have a really good experience here. This will improve our reputation and attract more clients for our ePals. We know it is not simple, but we will make it through this, together."

The ePal Training Camp sets a new benchmark for the freelance profession for gamers, offering a one-of-a-kind chance for ePals to acquire new abilities and improve their services, resulting in a mutually beneficial outcome for both ePals and clients. Additionally, by introducing this training camp, EPAL positions itself as a leader in the gaming freelancer industry, dedicated to equipping its ePals with the necessary tools and resources to excel in this rapidly expanding field. EPAL is truly revolutionizing the notion of a "gamers' dream job" and establishing a respected, viable career path for gamers worldwide.
